اكرر اننا لا نحدد مواعيد بل فقط نشجع بعضنا بعضا بقرب مجيء المسيح

وأيضاً أوضح أنه يوجد نبوات لم نراها بعد حدثت مثل ابن الهلاك وحرب هرمجدون وظهور

الشاهدين وحزقيال 38 وغيره ولا نعرف متى ولكن أشعر انها اقتربت.

ولكن ايضا علامات كثيرة من التي قال عنها الكتاب انها في الزمان الاخير وفي الجيل الأخير

بدأت تحدث بوضوح ويجب أن ننتبه اليها. فلا نعرف هل المسيح سيأتي في سنة ام سبع سنين ام

سبعين سنة أم أكثر فكرر لا احدد مواعيد وارفض من يحددون ولكن نذكر بعضنا باننا نحتاج ان

نستعد. والاستعداد ليس فقط قبل مجيء المسيح بل ايضا قبل الظلمة التي ستسبق مجيؤه ليكون

عندنا زيت في مصابيحنا يكفي ان نعبر هذه الظلمة وتكون مصابيحنا مضيئة وقت مجيؤه. بمعنى

نحتاج من الان ان نستعد بقوة بأيمان عامل وبتنقية القلب وان نشمر بالخدمة أي نجمع زيت في

مصايحنا لان الظلمة والضيقة اقتربت جدا ومن لن يستعد لها بزيت كافي من الان لن يجد زيت في الضيقة لان وقتها تجميع زيت سيكون صعب جدا بل أستطيع ان أقول من مثل العذاري انه لن يكون هناك زيت الا ما جمعه سابقا. فأكرر لا نحدد المواعيد ولكن أفضل ان اقول لنفسي ولكم استعدوا الان لأنه اقترب فنكون مستعدين سواء جاء او نحن ان سلمنا وديعتنا عن أنى لا اقول انه اقترب لكيلا يقال عني كاذب وانشر اشاعات ولكنه يأتي بسرعة بغته. لا اعتقد اي احد ندم لانه كان مستعد ومنتظر مجيء المسيح ولم ياتي المسيح في زمنه ولكنه انتقل وهو مستعد ولكن كثيرين جدا ندموا على عدم الاستعداد عندما انتقلوا

فيجب علينا ان نذكر الكل بالاستعداد والتوبة من الان حتى لو كان سيتأخر فقد نسلم وديعتنا في اي وقت

بعض الاحداث التي قال عنها الرب يسوع

انجيل لوقا 21

21: 25 وتكون علامات في الشمس والقمر والنجوم وعلى الارض كرب امم بحيرة البحر والامواج

تضج

21: 26 والناس يغطى عليهم من خوف وانتظار ما يأتي على المسكونة لان قوات السماوات

سفر اعمال الرسل 2

2: 19 واعطي عجائب في السماء من فوق وآيات على الارض من أسفل دما ونارا وبخار دخان

2: 20 تتحول الشمس الى ظلمة والقمر الى دم قبل ان يجيء يوم الرب العظيم الشهير

2: 21 ويكون كل من يدعو باسم الرب يخلص

لماذا قال المسيح بعض العلامات؟

إنجيل يوحنا 14: 29

وَقُلْتُ لَكُمْ الْآنَ قَبْلَ أَنْ يَكُونَ، حَتَّى مَتَى كَانَ تُؤْمِنُونَ.

وايضا لنتنبه ونستعد

انجيل لوقا 21

28 وَمَتَى ابْتَدَأَتْ هَذِهِ تَكُونُ، فَأَنْتَصِبُوا وَارْفَعُوا رُؤُوسَكُمْ لِأَنَّ نَجَاتَكُمْ تَقْتَرِبُ.»

New Meteor Shower from Comet Could Dazzle Stargazers Next Week

By Nola Taylor Redd, SPACE.com Contributor
May 12, 2014 12:49 PM

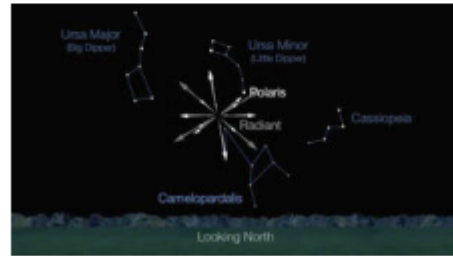

A new meteor shower spawned by a comet is due to light up the sky next week, with some forecasters predicting up to 200 "shooting stars" per hour — a potentially spectacular opening act for the meteor display.

If it performs as expected, the never-before-seen Camelopardalid meteor shower is due to peak overnight on May 23 and 24 as the Earth passes through a debris stream left by the Comet 2009/LINEAR nearly 200 years ago. The new meteor display could rival the brilliance of the annual Perseid meteor shower that graces the night sky each August.

The prospect of a brand-new meteor shower has scientists understandably excited.

"There could be a new meteor shower, and I want to see it with my own eyes," said NASA meteor expert Bill Cooke, head of the Meteoroid Environment Office at the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., in a statement. [New Meteor Shower from Comet 209P/LINEAR \(Galery\)]

A NEW METEOR SHOWER IN MAY?

May 6, 2014: The head of NASA's Meteoroid Environment Office, Dr. Bill Cooke, often lets cameras do his sky watching for him. He and his colleagues operate a nationwide network of automated fireball observatories that capture anything that burns into Earth's atmosphere.

On the morning of May 24th, however, he plans to go out in person.

"There could be a new meteor shower, and I want to see it with my own eyes," says Cooke.

A new ScienceCast video anticipates a possible new meteor shower in May 2014. Play it →

UPDATE: National Weather Service believes "boom" caused by meteor

Posted: May 15, 2014 9:07 PM MDT
Updated: May 16, 2014 9:43 PM MDT

By Jessie Shafer, Reporter - bio | email

CHARLESTON, West Virginia - UPDATE: Vincent Perlerin of the American Meteor Society tells 13 News more about the flight path via email:

"It looks like the meteoroid entered the atmosphere 63 miles above Columbia, South Carolina. Moving northwest at 78,000 miles per hour, it finally burned up 52 miles above the Tennessee country side, just north of Chattanooga. This fireball belongs to a class of meteors called Earthgrazers, which skim along the upper part of the atmosphere before burning up. This one traveled a distance of 290 miles, which is quite rare for a meteor. In general, Fireballs are pretty rare," said Perlerin.

We've received calls, emails, Facebook messages and tweets from many of you asking about a loud "boom" across our region. Many reports indicate that "boom" caused the land to quake.

We started getting reports of the boom around 10:30 p.m. Thursday.

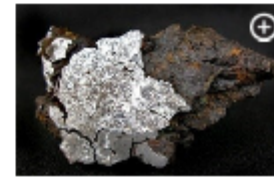

We've spoken with 911 dispatchers in Lincoln, Logan and Boone Counties. Both said the National Weather Service said they believe a meteor passed through the area, creating a sonic boom. 13 News has learned that many of you are reporting seeing a bright flash of light across the sky.

We've received calls from Logan, Boone and Raleigh counties and have even heard reports of the "boom" as far away as Kentucky. "We hear your reports," said Chief Meteorologist Spencer Adkins. "Our newsroom is checking and we're also looking at things from a weather perspective."

It could be days before we definitely learn what caused the boom; a meteor or a meteorite. A meteor is an object that burns up in the Earth's atmosphere. A meteorite is an object that passes through the Earth's atmosphere and comes in contact with the Earth's surface, according to Meteorologist Bryan Hughes.

No 911 centers we have reached out to report any emergency explosions of any kind.

New information shows people living in other states also experienced this phenomenon. For more, click here.

Newly-discovered active volcano could erupt underneath ice in Antarctica and add to effects of global warming

Posted on May 12, 2014

May 2014 – ANTARCTICA – Antarctic ice sheet is being threatened by an undersea volcano. Antarctica's ice sheets may face a far more imminent threat than climate change: scientists have found a new volcano forming a mile under the ice, which is threatening a full eruption. The volcano appears to be a part of much larger system that is generating earthquakes and releasing heat into the ice above. Volcanic activity was discovered around 30 miles from Antarctica's highest volcano, Mount Sidley, and although an eruption would be unlikely to breach the ice – the accompanying heat could have an effect on the landscape. Even a sub-glacial eruption would still be able to melt ice, creating huge amounts of water which could flow beneath the ice and towards the sea – hastening the flow of the overlying ice and potentially speed up the rate of ice sheet loss. "Numerous volcanoes exist in Marie Byrd Land, a highland region of West Antarctica," said Amanda Lough, of Washington University in St Louis in the team's paper on the subject, published in the Nature Geoscience journal.

40-Foot Sinkhole Opens Up At APSU Football Stadium

Posted: May 19, 2014 10:57 AM MDT
Updated: May 20, 2014 4:53 AM MDT

CLARKSVILLE, Tenn. – A 40-foot sinkhole has opened up on the football field at Austin Peay State University.

It all started a couple of weeks ago when a small sinkhole first appeared. Officials said it was about the size of a desk. Crews started work to stop the hole from growing, but it wouldn't stop.

By Monday, the sinkhole was estimated to be 30 by 50 feet wide -- and 40 feet deep.

So far, it has swallowed part of the field and track of Governors Stadium. The stadium is currently undergoing renovations.

"We're not going to skip any steps. That's the reason I brought the engineers back out because it's not going the way we thought it was going ,so it's time to let the professionals look at it and tell us which way

Los pescadores de las islas de San Andrés, Providencia y Santa Catalina (Coralina) en Colombia también están reportando, según confirmó, el presidente de la Asociación de Pescadores Artesanales del Caribe Sur (APACS) José Ugalde, como cientos de peces Caribbean Snaphose-puffer aparecen en sus playas, tal y como lo está viviendo Costa Rica en el Caribe Sur.

Según la información que maneja la Asociación, las autoridades ambientales de Colombia, al igual que lo han hecho las nacionales, han recolectado muestras para determinar las causas por las que se está presentando ese fenómeno ante el Instituto de Investigaciones Marinas y Costeras (Invemar).

Aquí, se presume, de acuerdo a la versión que maneja la agrupación que la causa podría ser la variación de las corrientes alejadas de las costas, sin embargo, desde octubre del año

FISH DEATH: Environment Agency workers at the scene

Comments (0)

THE Environment Agency has launched an investigation following the death of fish in lakes near Hever Park Golf Club and the River Eden.

Officers are currently raising oxygen levels at Bough Beech in Edenbridge to try and reduce the impact on the fish.

On its Twitter page, the Environment Agency stated it had launched a probe into "fish kill" in lakes adjacent to the golf club and River Eden.

Sea Lion Deaths Blamed on Sardine Shortage, but Nothing Done about Overfishing

Another 650 sea lion pups have washed up on the shores of California between San Diego and Ventura County in the last two months, emaciated and dehydrated, continuing a pattern of devastation from early last year.

A new report from the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) all but eliminates disease as a cause of the problem that saw another 1,600 pups stranded on beaches between January and April last year. While it does not settle on a single culprit, the report points a long finger at the decline of sardines in the region, a primary source of nourishment for sea lions.

“Current data show changes in availability of sea lion prey in Southern California waters was likely a contributor to the UME, the exact mechanism is still under investigation,” the report concluded. In other words, the NOAA doesn’t know precisely why the sardines are harder to find. Could be climate change, or ocean pollution, natural selection, or disease taking advantage of sea lions’ weakened state.

Thousands of dead fish at Princess Point not so bad

By  Molly Hayes

Thousands of dead fish washing up on shore at Princess Point are apparently a sign of improvement for Cootes Paradise.

Thousands of gizzard shad (a type of herring) have appeared there over the past couple weeks. The fish feed off algae and are often meals for other fish in the marsh. Most people don't even know they're there, says Tys Theysmeyer, the Royal Botanical Gardens' head of natural lands.

And while their death is not a good thing, Theysmeyer says the fact that people are even noticing the carcasses means the species is growing in number.

"In the old days they never got big enough for this to happen," he says. "I actually would call it a sign of a recovering environment."

Theysmeyer said Environment Canada and the Ministry of Natural Resources have been informed of the fish deaths.

That being said, he acknowledges there are still several environmental issues that need to be addressed in the marsh, like erosion and sewage making its way in.

As it is primarily this single species of fish that is dying, he suspects the cause of death is likely a breed-specific disease. That and partly just a natural spring occurrence.

"I'm not of the feeling there was a special chemical or anything dumped in," he says.

Hundreds of fish have died in Rewalsar wetlands in the past three days due to water toxicity.

MANDI: Hundreds of fish have died in Rewalsar wetlands near here in the past three days due to water toxicity, posing a serious threat to other aquatic fauna too, say wildlife experts.

Located about 24km from Mandi, the Rewalsar wetlands, which were included in the list of wetlands of national importance by the ministry of environment and forests in 2005, have religious and ecological importance.

"The main cause of the fish mortality is water contamination. Last year also a large number of fish died," director of the fisheries department Gurcharan Singh told IANS on Thursday.

He said over-feeding of the fish by the people due to religious sentiments was also responsible for the deaths.

A monastery, a gurdwara and a temple are located on the banks of the wetlands. Devotees, especially Buddhists, feed the aquatic creatures.

Locals say hundreds of dead fish have been spotted floating on the waters.

"Massive Decline" of Fish in Armenia's Shahvard River

13:25, May 16, 2014

The Ministry of Emergency Situations of the Republic of Armenia earlier this morning received a call that scores of dead fish were appearing in the River Shahvard, which passes through the village of Voskevz in Armenia's Aragatsotn Province.

After the regional rescue operations team arrived on the scene, it became clear that there has been a massive decline of fish (about 20 kg) in an area of about 100 meters of the river.

As reported by the ministry, on the scene were employees of the regional administration's agricultural and environmental departments, as well as the anti-epidemic department, who took water samples to be tested.

Dead fish & seagulls invade Pultneyville

The Pultneyville Yacht Club was inundated with dead fish and plump, happy seagulls last week leaving local boaters with questions. Why all the dead and dying fish and just how many seagulls can fit in to one square foot?

Yacht Club members and customers of the adjacent Landing at Pultneyville became victims of sudden bird flights and accompanying cars also felt the brunt of bird droppings.

Jim Deatsch, member and Environmental Officer for the Yacht Club said he noticed struggling and dying fish cropping up about 10 days ago. "The gulls were having a field day. I even saw a couple of turkey buzzards come by, but they were chased off by the seagulls," said Deatsch. "This is not a good thing. The gulls won't eat the dead ones," he added.

Mazatán.- Ganaderos del municipio de Mazatán se encuentran preocupados por la muerte de varias decenas de ganado vacuno y equino, que han muerto por una enfermedad que está afectando a los pobladores. Humberto Tapia Solís, ganadero de este municipio, afirmó que hasta el momento no cuentan con atención de las autoridades correspondientes, por lo que temen que estas muertes se convierta en una epidemia.

Tapia Solís afirmó que en su terreno se le han muerto 10 animales hasta el momento, afectando gravemente el resto de su producción, ya que no cuenta con los recursos para contratar a un veterinario que le pueda dar asesoría en cuanto al tratamiento que deben tener sus animales.

El ganadero que es originario del Ejido Vicente Guerrero señaló que de la misma manera se han muerto a sus compañeros ejidatarios una gran cantidad de animales, siendo aproximadamente más de 100 vacas y algunos caballos, sospechando que pudiera ser un tipo de rabia por las condiciones en que se enferman los animales.

Agregó que hace algunos días arribó personal de la Secretaría de Agricultura, Ganadería, Desarrollo Rural, Pesca y Alimentación (Sagarpa) a realizar tomas de muestras, llevándose únicamente el cerebro de uno de los animales que estaba muriendo, luego de presentar "desmayamiento" del cuerpo y otras afecciones que poco a poco minan la existencia de los animales.

Finalmente, dijo que hasta el momento las autoridades mantienen un hermetismo total en cuanto a esta situación, toda vez que ya deben saber las causas de muerte de los animales para dar la alerta si es necesario, ya que hay algunos productores que para evitar perder totalmente su ganado, cuando ya presentan síntomas de enfermedad, los sacrifican vendiéndolos a los carniceros a precios muy bajos.

Scores of dead fish, believed to be mostly anchovies, began washing up in a corner of the marina near Bora Bora Way on Saturday night, creating a foul-smelling, silvery blanket on top of the water.

"It's horrible. There's like a million dead anchovies floating around, as well as other fish," said Lisa Lascody, a resident of the area. "It's creepy and weird."

Crews spent Sunday cleaning up, and although carcasses continued to litter the water on Monday, a supervisor with the Los Angeles County Department of Beaches and Harbors said clean up efforts were over.

The supervisor estimated that about 3,000 to 4,000 fish

Tens of thousands of dead fish turned up in Marina Del Rey in Southern California over the weekend, creating a feast for birds and a major stink for tourists and residents.

"It was like a Hitchcock movie. There were so many birds diving into the water and feeding," Michael Quill of Marina Del Rey told KABC. "You could see the silver of the fish underwater, it was crazy."

The dead fish included anchovies, sting rays, angel sharks and more.

Scientists May Have Finally Pinpointed What's Killing All The Honeybees

Where have all the honeybees gone?

A new study seems to strengthen the evidence linking pesticides used on crops to colony collapse disorder in honeybees.

Colony collapse disorder, or CCD, is a phenomenon in which honeybees inexplicably disappear from their hives. The bodies of the dead bees are typically never found.

Researchers led by Chensheng Lu of Harvard University have pinpointed the collapse of honeybee colonies on a class of pesticides known as neonicotinoids — insecticides that also act as nerve poisons and mimic the effects of nicotine. Scientists specifically looked at how low doses of two neonicotinoids — imidacloprid and clothianidin — affected healthy bee hives over the course of a winter.

Saudi Arabia: 5 More Deaths From Virus Reported

Saudi Arabia reported five more deaths on Wednesday from a mysterious respiratory virus that first appeared there two years ago and has since spread to at least 16 other countries, including the United States. The Saudi Health Ministry said the latest fatalities from infections caused by the virus, known as Middle East Respiratory Syndrome, or MERS, brought the total in that country to 157. Saudi Arabia accounts for the vast majority of the 171 deaths and 571 infections from the virus globally. The Saudi announcement came as the World Health Organization said in a statement that its concern about MERS “had significantly increased,” but that there was still “no evidence of sustained human-to-human transmission” of the virus.

Saudi Arabia reports 3 more MERS deaths, as WHO calls on countries to step up prevention

Posted on May 17, 2014

May 2014 – DISEASE – Health authorities in Saudi Arabia have reported three more fatalities from the MERS respiratory virus, taking the death toll in the world's worst-hit country to 163. The health ministry website also revealed on Saturday that 520 cases have been recorded in the country since MERS appeared in Saudi Arabia in 2012. It said three women died on Friday; a 48-year-old in Riyadh, a 67-year-old in Taif, and a woman in Jeddah whose age was not disclosed. A spate of cases among staff at King Fahd Hospital in Jeddah last month sparked public panic and the dismissal of its director and the health minister. Other nations including Egypt, Jordan, Lebanon, the Netherlands, the UAE and the US have also recorded cases, mostly in people who had been to Saudi Arabia. On Wednesday, the World Health Organization said its emergency committee, which includes global medical and policy experts, had flagged mounting concerns about the potentially fatal virus. The WHO called on countries to improve infection prevention and control, collect more data on MERS and to be vigilant in preventing it from spreading to vulnerable countries, notably in Africa.

But it has so far stopped short of declaring an international health emergency, which would have far-reaching implications such as travel and trade restrictions on affected countries. A WHO team carried out a five-day inspection visit to Saudi Arabia earlier this month and pinpointed breaches in its recommended infection prevention measures as being partly responsible for the spike in hospital infections. MERS is considered a deadlier but less transmissible cousin of the SARS virus that appeared in Asia in 2003 and infected 8,273 people, nine percent of whom died. Like SARS, it appears to cause a lung infection, with patients suffering coughing, breathing difficulties and a temperature, but MERS can also cause rapid kidney failure. –Al

Wednesday, May 14, 2014

An expert committee was expected to advise the World Health Organization director general early this morning on whether to declare the Middle East Respiratory Syndrome an international public health emergency.

The International Health Regulations Emergency Committee for MERS was last night meeting in Geneva to decide whether to raise the risk of MERS in its fifth meeting since being convened in 2012.

The committee is chaired by Australia's chief medical officer of the Department of Health and Ageing, Chris Baggoley.

The meeting began in Geneva late last night and a press briefing was expected to follow.

The committee will provide technical advice to WHO Director General Margaret Chan Fung Fu-chun on whether MERS constitutes a public health emergency of international concern.

The meeting comes as a second case of the dangerous virus has been found in the United States.

According to the US Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and Public Health, the patient is a health-care worker in Saudi Arabia.

The patient, who traveled on May 1 from Jeddah to London became ill and was

Ohio measles outbreak largest in USA since 1996

A measles outbreak in Ohio has reached 68 cases, giving the state the dubious distinction of having the most cases reported in any state since 1996, health officials say.

The Ohio outbreak is part of a larger worrisome picture: As of Friday, the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention had logged 187 cases nationwide in 2014, closing in on last year's total of 189. CDC warned several weeks ago that the country could end up having the worst year for measles since home-grown outbreaks were eradicated in 2000.

The last time a state had more measles cases than Ohio has now was 1996, when Utah had 119, according to CDC.

The Ohio outbreak, like ongoing outbreaks in California and elsewhere, has been linked to unvaccinated travelers bringing the measles virus back from countries where the disease remains common. In Ohio, all of the cases have been among the Amish, health officials say. The outbreak began after Amish missionaries returned from the Philippines. The Philippines is experiencing a large, ongoing measles outbreak with more than 26,000 cases reported, according to CDC.

The California outbreak, also linked to the Philippines, had reached 59 cases as of Friday, according to the California Department of Public Health.

Florida Officials Warn About Painful New Virus

BY MAGGIE FOX

Florida health officials issued a warning on Friday about chikungunya, a mosquito-borne virus that's spreading across the Caribbean.

Three cases of the disease have been found in Florida, so far only in travelers, the Florida Department of Health said. But infected people can spread the disease when they are bitten by mosquitoes, and Florida is swarming with the right kind of mosquitoes to spread it.

"The Department has received three reports of imported cases of chikungunya fever to Florida from travelers who recently traveled to the Caribbean," the health department said on its website. The three cases are in Miami-Dade, Broward and Hillsborough Counties.

Pakistan deploys army in war to control outbreak of Polio – residents must be vaccinated before leaving the country

Posted on May 17, 2014

May 2014 – ISLAMABAD - Pakistan's prime minister says the country is on a war footing to deal with the spread of polio and the army has been called in to help. The World Health Organization has asked Pakistan, Cameroon and Syria to ensure that all residents and long-term visitors are vaccinated for polio before travelling abroad. The WHO says the disease has been diagnosed in 10 countries. This year there have been 74 registered cases of polio worldwide and 59 of them have come from Pakistan. Pakistan's failure to stem the spread of polio has triggered global emergency health measures, with the World Health Organization (WHO) recommending that all residents must show proof of vaccination before they can leave the country. Monday's emergency measures also apply to Syria and Cameroon, which along with Pakistan are seen as posing the greatest risk of exporting the crippling virus and undermining a UN plan to eradicate it by 2018. Pakistan is in the spotlight, accounting for more than a fifth of the 417 cases reported globally in 2013. The virus has recently spread to Afghanistan, Iraq, Israel and Syria, and has been found in sewage in the West Bank, Gaza Strip and greater Cairo, Bruce Aylward, WHO's assistant director general, said.

El Nino's threat to major food crop yields

Responding to the impacts of El Nino could help maintain crop yields, the study suggests

El Nino events can have a significant impact on the yields of certain major food crops, a study has shown.

Researchers say the climatic phenomenon, which triggers changes in temperature and rainfall, can reduce maize yields by more than 4%.

El Nino episodes are caused by changes in the sea surface temperature in the eastern tropical Pacific Ocean.

More than 20 dead, thousands evacuated in Bosnia, Serbia floods

Posted on May 17, 2014

May 2014 – BOSNIA - More than 20 people have been killed in the worst floods in more than a century in Serbia and Bosnia, authorities said on Saturday, with thousands evacuated from towns still under threat from rising rivers. The death toll in Bosnia alone reached 19, including nine found on Saturday when waters receded from the northeastern town of Doboj. Thousands of volunteers joined soldiers, police and fire-fighters in building flood barriers made of sandbags in the Serbian capital Belgrade and the western town of Sabac. The River Sava hit its highest-recorded level in Serbia, the army said, rising at a rate of three centimeters (one inch) per hour after several days of the heaviest rainfall in almost 120 years. Three people were confirmed dead in Serbia by Friday, and Prime Minister Aleksandar Vucic said there were more fatalities in the town of Obrenovac, 30 km (18 miles) southwest of Belgrade, where soldiers deployed huge amphibious vehicles to rescue hundreds of people crammed into a primary school. Authorities in Serbia said they would not give a death toll for Obrenovac, a town of some 30,000 people, until the waters had receded and the extent of the damage was clear.

MAGLAJ, Bosnia/KRUPANJ, Serbia (Reuters) - Bosnia said on Monday that more than a quarter of its 4 million people had been affected by the worst floods to hit the Balkans in living memory, comparing the "terrifying" destruction to that of the country's 1992-95 war.

The extent of the devastation became apparent in Serbia too, as waters receded in some of the worst-hit areas to reveal homes toppled or submerged in mud, trees felled and villages strewn

WASHINGTON – In spite of its growing split with al-Qaida central in Pakistan led by Ayman al-Zawahiri, the more brutal Islamic state in Iraq and al-Sham, or ISIS, has agreed not to attack al-Qaida interests in Iran, according to ISIS spokesman Abu Muhammad al-Adnani.

The decision by ISIS, known for the savagery of its attacks, is to insure preservation of al-Qaida's supply network inside Iran, Adnani said.

He pointed to a continuing relationship between Sunni al-Qaida and Shiite Iran.

"The ISIS has kept abiding by the advices and directives of the sheiks and figures of jihad," Adnani said in a translated statement obtained by the Long War Journal. "This is why the ISIS has not attacked the Rawafid in Iran since its establishment."

MOSCOW, May 8 (RIA Novosti), Daria Chernyshova – Russia will have to react if NATO is foolish enough to set up bases in western Ukraine, Asia Times correspondent Pepe Escobar told RIA Novosti Thursday.

“If NATO is foolish enough to attempt to set up bases in Western Ukraine, for instance, make sure there will be a forceful Russia reaction,” Escobar said. “So Russia’s policy will continue to be defensive and reactive – but that does not mean surrendering. Georgia was a red line. Crimea was a red line,” he said.

It was earlier reported that NATO is considering permanently stationing troops in parts of Eastern Europe as tensions over Ukraine are on the rise. The alliance’s member states will reevaluate NATO’s presence in Europe prior to a summit of NATO leaders in Wales in September.

“Extra troops in the Baltics, Poland and Romania won’t force Moscow to lose any sleep. Missile shield would be another story. NATO’s ‘decision’ will come in September – but that’s been already decided by the Pentagon, which will only have to convince a few recalcitrant members,” Escobar told RIA Novosti.

Abe Takes 1st Step in Allowing Japan to Go to War Again

The Japanese government will take steps to exercise its right to so-called collective self-defense, allowing it to attack a third country when an ally is in some way under threat.

The move is at odds with Japan's pacifist postwar constitution and has alarmed neighbors who recall the country's wartime aggression.

Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe is widely expected to amend the constitution so Japanese troops can once again operate overseas. Article 9 of the constitution says Japan forever renounces the use of force as a means of settling international disputes, unless the country comes under attack.

At a press conference on Thursday, Abe said his government will take the necessary steps to amend the current interpretation of the article but stressed the move will not translate into Japanese troops participating in a third country's war for just the sake of using armed forces.

Abe added Japan needs to exercise its right to collective self-defense in light of the North Korean missile threat and clashes with China over disputed islands.

Opposition parties and civic groups protested, voicing fears that the move could put the country on a war footing again.

Russia threatens to disrupt GPS navigation in fight over sanctions

BY DANIEL COOPER @DANIELWCOOPER • MAY 14TH 2014, AT 5:40:00 AM ET

Hold onto your sat nav. The Russian government has just threatened to end cooperation with America on major space projects, including maintenance of the GPS system. The policy will also prevent NASA from accessing the International Space Station from 2020, as well as blocking the supply of components for America's Atlas V rockets, which are currently vital for sending military and commercial satellites into space. With regards to GPS, Deputy PM Dmitry Rogozin says that he'll shut down Russian base stations that keep the system going, unless the US promises to house reciprocal stations to support the competing GLONASS platform. He's quoted as saying that Russia is wary about developing future "high-tech projects with such an unreliable partner as the United States, which politicizes everything." Russia is to deny the US future use of the International Space Station beyond 2020 and will also bar its rocket engines from launching US military satellites as it hits back at American sanctions imposed over Ukraine crisis.

Russia's deputy Prime Minister Dmitry Rogozin announced a series of punitive measures on Tuesday against the US in response to sanctions imposed after Russia annexed Crimea.

U.S. President Barack Obama thanks U.S. Army troops for their service at Fort Bliss, Texas, August 31, 2010.

Automatic budget cuts known as "sequestration" are expected to shed some 30,000 soldiers from the active rolls in the next 17 months, with 10,000 of that number going in 2014 and another 20,000 to follow in 2015.

South Korea says North Korea "must disappear soon"

AP By HYUNG-JIN KIM

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A rhetorical battle between the rival Koreas intensified Monday with a South Korean official saying North Korea "must disappear soon."

The comments, which will likely draw a furious response from Pyongyang, followed a series of sexist and racist slurs by North Korea against the leaders of South Korea and the United States. Pyongyang's state media likened South Korean President Park Geun-hye to an "old prostitute" and U.S. President Barack Obama to BEIJING (Reuters) - China has used diplomatic channels to warn North Korea against conducting a fourth nuclear test, multiple China-based diplomatic sources told Reuters, after the reclusive state renewed its threat of "counter-measures" against perceived U.S. hostility.

North Korea, which regularly threatens the South and the United States with destruction, is already under heavy sanctions imposed by several U.N.

They asked whether I was prepared to die as a Christian by Denny Burk on May 15, 2014 in Christianity, News

NBC News has the story of a Nigerian Christian man who was shot by Boko Haram terrorists for refusing to renounce his Christian faith. This man's name is Habila Adamu, and he was attacked by the same group of terrorists who recently abducted 200 Nigerian school girls. They broke into his home, shot him, and left him for dead all in full view of his wife and son. It's a miracle that he is alive. It's even more a miracle that he stood.

You must read his story in his own words. Below is an extended excerpt from the NBC News report:

A father who was shot point-blank in the face by Boko Haram recounted how the militants asked whether he was "prepared to die as a Christian" and then left for dead.

Habila Adamu, 40, was so badly wounded in the attack that he said goodbye to his wife as blood poured from a gaping wound.

▶ Add another drop of tragedy to the story of America's reluctant, no-boots-on-the-ground operation in Libya in 2011: Weapons that were never secured after Muammar Gaddafi's ouster made their way to Boko Haram, the Islamist terrorist organization now holding hundreds of Nigerian girls. Last May, Boko Haram staged an attack in the town of Bama, killing 55 innocents and freeing 100 prisoners. That month Reuters ran a story by Tim Cocks headlined "Nigeria's Islamists staging bolder, deadlier comeback." It explained:

The Bama attack showed their [Boko Haram's] substantial firepower, including machine guns, large numbers of rocket propelled grenades (RPGs) and pick-up trucks mounted with anti-aircraft guns, a sign the weapons flood from the Libyan war that helped rebels seize parts of Mali last year has reached Nigeria, officials say.

Let this be a miserable lesson in the dangers of foreign-policy ambivalence. The Obama administration was dragged kicking and screaming into Libya and refused to take the necessary steps to secure the regime's weapons after Gaddafi was gone. This "light footprint" approach was praised by many as a low-risk "new model" for American military action. But in reality it was just world-policing on the cheap. The results speak for themselves. We can either fight terrorism or we can watch it advance and offer our remorse after the fact.

Miami Dolphins Fine, Suspend Safety Don Jones for Tweet Against Same-Sex Kiss

MIAMI – The Miami Dolphins have fined and suspended safety Don Jones for Tweeting his disapproval of a same-sex kiss that aired on ESPN this past weekend.

ESPN carried footage of Michael Sam's reaction on Saturday as he learned that he had been selected by the St. Louis Rams, making their 249th choice overall. Sam and his partner Vito Cammisano embraced and kissed each other on national television upon receipt of the news, drawing applause from some and disapproval from others.

Miami Dolphins safety Don Jones was among those who expressed his disagreement of the public act, commenting on Twitter that he found it to be "horrible."

He later removed the Tweet and one other surrounding the matter, but on Sunday, team officials leveled Jones with a fine—the amount of which has not been announced—and suspended him from the team until he participates in sensitivity training.

“We were disappointed to read Don’s Tweets during the NFL Draft,” Coach Joe Philbin wrote in a statement. “They were inappropriate and unacceptable, and we regret the negative impact these comments had on such an important weekend for the NFL. We met with Don about respect, discrimination and judgment. These comments are not consistent with the values and standards of our program. We will continue to emphasize and educate our players that these statements will not be tolerated.”

Jones later issued an apology, stating that he “regret[s] that these Tweets took away from his draft moment.” He also changed his Twitter page from public to private following the incident.

Former New York Giants Running Back and Super Bowl champion Derrick Ward likewise came under criticism after he posted his thoughts on Twitter on Saturday, even allegedly receiving death threats over his comments.

Nintendo promises to include same-sex marriage in sequels after gamer complained he could not have virtual relationship with his real boyfriend

- Tomodachi Life, for the 3DS console, does not include gay relationships
- American gamer Tye Marini, 23, started an online campaign after he couldn't marry his boyfriend's character in the virtual world
- Nintendo apologised - but said it was impossible to amend current version
- Instead it pledged to include the feature in any sequels to the game

Computer games company Nintendo has apologised for leaving same-sex relationships out of a 'life simulator' game after criticism by equality activists.

Protestors attacked the publisher for not including the option of having gay relationships in Tomodachi Life, a Sims-style title which lets players create characters and populate an island with them.

Marketing material for the game, which is for the handheld 3DS console, boasts that the cartoonish characters can 'rap, rock, eat donuts, fall in love, break up, go shopping, play games, and live their crazy lives'.

Nintendo Promises to Push Gay Agenda on Children

Progressive left has politicized same-sex movement and fashioned the gay lifestyle into a civil rights movement

Infowars.com

Last Week Tonight with John Oliver on HBO has given a boost to the next wave of progressivism politics – the effort to mainstream homosexuality and fashion a civil rights movement around the “equality” of same-sex marriage. Oliver’s segment on the #Miiquality campaign draws attention to a push designed to normalize the gay lifestyle in video games geared toward children, specifically the eight-thirteen year old demographic.

Earlier this month, the Japanese company Nintendo declined to introduce same-sex marriage in “Tomodachi Life,” a life simulation handheld video game marketed to children over the age of eight. Following the #Miiquality push (Mii is a digital avatar used in the game), Nintendo said it “never intended to make any form of social commentary with the launch of” the game.

The company, however, later stated in future releases of the popular game they will “strive to design a gameplay experience from the ground up that is more inclusive, and better represents all players.”

The push to introduce homosexual marriage in video game content is part of an aggressive agenda to normalize and force cultural acceptance of a lifestyle many Americans oppose on religious and moral grounds. The progressive left has politicized the same-sex movement and has fashioned the forced acceptance of the gay lifestyle into a civil rights movement. Indoctrinating children is key to the movement and this is why video game content is targeted.

Professors Sue Bryan College Over School's Adherence to Biblical Creation Account

DAYTON, Tenn. – Two professors are suing Bryan College because their teaching contracts were not renewed when they refused to agree with the school's literal interpretation of the Genesis creation account.

As previously reported, Bryan College in Tennessee continues to grapple with an evolution/creation debate which has divided many students and faculty members. The controversy began earlier this year when the conservative

Christian school clarified its statement of belief to affirm the literal historicity of Adam and Eve.

Many professors criticized Bryan College's president, Dr. Stephen Livesay, for pushing the statement of belief clarification.

"These are decisions that did not have to be made at this time," Dr. Stephen Barnett, a professor of natural sciences, told Chattanooga's Times Free Press in March. "This is, as I see it, the hallmark of this administration: making hasty decisions and regretting them. And if they don't regret this decision, they just aren't thinking."

Soon after the controversy first came to light, Barnett and over two dozen other faculty members voted "no confidence" in Livesay's leadership. Barnett knew the measure would damage the school's reputation, but he argued that it was the right thing to do.

"We knew that it would go public," Barnett stated. "We knew that it would be damaging to the president's reputation and the college. But we felt that the damage that had been done to the institution outweighed that reservation."

Now, nearly three months after the college issued the statement of belief clarification, Barnett and one other professor—Dr. Steve DeGeorge, a professor of education—have filed a lawsuit against the school. According to the suit, Barnett's and DeGeorge's teaching contracts were not renewed because the professors refused to subscribe to the school's literal Genesis interpretation.

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica, May 16 (Reuters) - Costa Rica hoisted the gay pride flag at the presidential palace on Friday in a landmark act of solidarity with the gay, lesbian and transgender community in the Americas.

New President Luis Guillermo Solis, a leftist elected last month, had the rainbow flag raised alongside the Costa Rican colors in front of his office to mark the International Day Against Homophobia and Transphobia on Saturday.

"This is the house of all Costa Ricans, male or female, with equality and without discrimination," the 56-year-old Solis said on Twitter, a week after he took power in the Central American nation.

Kentucky School to Allow 'Transgender' Students Access to Opposite Sex Restrooms

LOUISVILLE – Following a request from a 'transgender' student, a Kentucky high school has approved a new non-discrimination policy which will give male students access to girls' restrooms, and vice versa, as long as students identify with the opposite sex.

Last month, a freshman student at Atherton High School in Louisville, Kentucky, asked the school's principal if he could use the girls' restroom and locker room. The student claimed to be transgender and said he identified as a girl, even though he reportedly has a girlfriend.

According to reports, the high school's principal, Thomas Aberli, granted the student's request. This decision prompted complaints from several parents and students who were concerned about a male student using the girls' facilities.

In spite of the complaints, Aberli defended his decision, saying "everyone deserves to be treated with respect."

"I have a responsibility to ensure that all of our students and staff are treated fairly and justly," Aberli told The Courier-Journal last week. "At the same time, I also have a responsibility to educate our community on an issue that many are not familiar with and inform them about the rights of transgender individuals."

Other individuals in the Louisville area criticized the principal's decision. Clint Elliott, a Louisville attorney, said parents are concerned about the situation.

"Imagine this scenario—a transgender student, a biological boy who decides that he wants to identify with the female gender, and yet he acknowledges that he has a girlfriend and is sexually attracted to girls," Elliott said, as reported by The Courier-Journal. "Are parents supposed to be okay with allowing such boys to use the girls' restroom and locker room facilities?"

Russia strives to exclude the dollar from energy trading

Фото: РИА Новости

Russian press reports that the country's Ministry of Finance is ready to greenlight a plan to radically increase the role of the Russian ruble in export operations while reducing the share of dollar-denominated transactions. Governmental sources believe that the Russian banking sector is "ready to handle the increased number of ruble-denominated transactions".

According to the Prime news agency, on April 24th the government organized a special meeting dedicated to finding a solution for getting rid of the US dollar in Russian export operations. Top level experts from the energy sector, banks and governmental agencies were summoned and a number of measures were proposed as a response for American sanctions against Russia.

The securities were moved from Euroclear Bank (Brussels) and Clearstream Banking (Luxembourg) to the Russian Central Depository at the end of April.

The move is intended to protect customers from any forthcoming sanctions and prevent a situation where clients' funds are frozen, the statement on the website said.

"The transfer was done to prevent possible restrictions on transactions of customers' assets that are kept in international deposits and settlement systems," it stated. In preparation for sanctions, in March, the bank moved nearly $7 billion to Russia's Central Bank for safe keeping.

Russia's Central Bank held $486 billion in international reserves as of April 1 this year, $40 billion less than one year earlier, when holdings stood at about $528 billion.

Russia Scores Massive Gas Pipeline Deal With China

China and Russia are set to cement their energy alliance next week with an expected agreement to build a natural gas pipeline between the two nations that would secure a huge new market for the world's largest energy producer and provide a guaranteed energy supply for China's growing economy as both nations face confrontations with the West. The deal, which the two countries negotiated over the last decade, is expected to be signed when Russian President Vladimir Putin visits Beijing next week. More

Sweden: Very handy palm payments system takes off

Cash, cheques, plastic, Paypal – there are already many ways to pay. And now a group of students at Lund University in Sweden have come up with a biometric payment system.

It works by touching the screen with your palm and entering the final four digits of your smartphone number.

The idea is called Quixter, and is the brainchild of Fredrik Leiffand, an engineering student, who wanted to make paying faster and more secure.

He explained: "I had the idea when I was queuing in a supermarket. I realised that the most time-consuming part of the whole purchase was paying and I thought there must be a faster way to do this. And that was the start of Quixter."

RENO, Nev. — On a farm about six miles outside this gambling town, Jason Chamberlain looks over a flock of about 50 smelly sheep, many of them possessing partially human livers, hearts, brains and other organs.

The University of Nevada-Reno researcher talks matter-of-factly about his plans to euthanize one of the pregnant sheep in a nearby lab. He can't wait to examine the effects of the human cells he had injected into the fetus' brain about two months ago.

"It's mice on a large scale," Chamberlain says with a shrug.

As strange as his work may sound, it falls firmly within the new ethics guidelines the influential National Academies issued this past week for stem cell research.

In fact, the Academies' report endorses research that co-mingles human and animal tissue as vital to ensuring that experimental drugs and new tissue replacement therapies are safe for people.
