اكرر اننا لا نحدد مواعيد بل فقط نشجع بعضنا بعضا بقرب مجيء المسيح

وأيضاً أوضح أنه يوجد نبوات لم نراها بعد حدثت مثل ابن الهلاك وحرب هرمجدون وظهور

الشاهدين وحزقيال 38 وغيره ولا نعرف متى ولكن أشعر انها اقتربت.

ولكن ايضا علامات كثيرة من التي قال عنها الكتاب انها في الزمان الاخير وفي الجيل الأخير

بدأت تحدث بوضوح ويجب أن ننتبه اليها. فلا نعرف هل المسيح سيأتي في سنة ام سبع سنين ام

سبعين سنة أم أكثر فكرر لا احدد مواعيد وارفض من يحددون ولكن نذكر بعضنا باننا نحتاج ان

نستعد. والاستعداد ليس فقط قبل مجيء المسيح بل ايضا قبل الظلمة التي ستسبق مجيؤه ليكون

عندنا زيت في مصابيحنا يكفي ان نعبر هذه الظلمة وتكون مصابيحنا مضيئة وقت مجيؤه. بمعنى

نحتاج من الان ان نستعد بقوة بأيمان عامل وبتنقية القلب وان نشمر بالخدمة أي نجمع زيت في

مصايحنا لان الظلمة والضيقة اقتربت جدا ومن لن يستعد لها بزيت كافي من الان لن يجد زيت في الضيقة لان وقتها تجميع زيت سيكون صعب جدا بل أستطيع ان أقول من مثل العذاري انه لن يكون هناك زيت الا ما جمعه سابقا. فأكرر لا نحدد المواعيد ولكن أفضل ان اقول لنفسي ولكم استعدوا الان لأنه اقترب فنكون مستعدين سواء جاء او نحن ان سلمنا وديعتنا عن أنى لا اقول انه اقترب لكيلا يقال عني كاذب وانشر اشاعات ولكنه يأتي بسرعة بغته. لا اعتقد اي أحد ندم لانه كان مستعد ومنتظر مجيء المسيح ولم ياتي المسيح في زمنه ولكنه انتقل وهو مستعد ولكن كثيرين جدا ندموا على عدم الاستعداد عندما انتقلوا

فيجب علينا ان نذكر الكل بالاستعداد والتوبة من الان حتى لو كان سيتأخر فقد نسلم وديعتنا في اي وقت

Fukushima Monkeys' Blood Shows Signs of Radiation Exposure

Wild monkeys living in forests of Fukushima — the Japanese city that was the site of a nuclear power plant meltdown in 2011 — have lower blood cell counts than monkeys from northern Japan, and carry detectable levels of cesium in their bodies, researchers have found.

Earthquakes are rising in Oklahoma: 2,300 tremors reported since January

Posted on July 24, 2014

July 2014 – OKLAHOMA - Earthquakes used to be rare in Oklahoma, a handful per year or so. Not anymore. So far this year, the state has experienced some 2,300 earthquakes, according to the Oklahoma Geological Survey, an average of more than 11 per day. Accordingly, the number of Oklahomans with earthquake insurance has jumped a startling 500 percent in less than three years, reports the Oklahoma Department of Insurance. While the cause of increased tremors in the Plains States remains under contention, residents, at the least, are preparing for the worst. The state agency doesn't typically track the data and insurance companies don't report it, but "we were getting calls from around the country," says communications director Kerry Collins. So Collins called the state's top five homeowners insurance companies—accounting for more than 70 percent of the market—and estimated an average: In 2011, only 3 percent of the state's homeowners had an earthquake rider on their homeowners insurance policies; this year, 15 percent did. It's not something people worried about before," Mark Tedford of Tedford Insurance in Jenks, Okla., told the Tulsa World. "Now it is."

While most of the seismic uptick has been too small to cause much damage, a 2011 temblor hit 5.6 on the Richter scale, setting a new state record and damaging more than a dozen homes. Two years later, the

USGS increases earthquake risk along New Madrid Fault

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (WDRB) – The midwest region is preparing for earthquakes that are bigger and more powerful than ever believed imaginable.

The U.S. Geological Survey updated their seismic hazards map last week, and in it, Kentucky is listed as one of 16 states at highest risk of earthquakes.

USGS says the New Madrid Fault, which runs through a number of midwestern states, has been identified as an area that has potential for larger and more powerful quakes than previously thought.

Far Western Kentucky is highlighted on the map as being an area of "high risk." Geoscientists say if a major earthquake hits along the New Madrid Fault, damage and possibly even fatalities could reach as far as Louisville, Ky.

"If you do get a very high magnitude earthquake--and it's very possible at any time without any warning--then we would have deaths in Louisville," said Dr. Gerald Ruth, a geo scientist and professor at Indiana University Southeast.

Ruth adds that if a big quake hits the region, there will be plenty of aftershocks. He said unlike California, which experiences little tremors all the time, tension is built up in the midwest.

"In California, earthquakes are very common and the release of tectonic activity is quick and fast and the time for aftershocks is limited," said Ruth. "If we had a significant earthquake here, aftershocks would linger for months."

High school science teacher Bob Rollings ran the seismometer at Floyd Central High School until retiring last year. He says the region has been due for a big quake for some time.

Some seismologists, he says, believe that a major event--much like the magnitude 7 or 8 quakes that shook New Madrid in 1811--is due to hit every 200 years.

"The further away you get the less damage you would see," but he says the structure of the ground below you also plays a roll. "Where we are located right now, in Floyd Knobs, we are less likely to see damage here than down in New

Earthquakes are increasing in the UK: highest level in a decade

Posted on July 24, 2014

July 2014 – UNITED KINGDOM – New figures show the number of earthquakes recorded in the UK is increasing. The highest level of detections in the last decade is set to be registered for 2014, with 100 earthquakes already recorded in the first three months of the year and 149 in total up until July. This compares to 154 throughout 2013, 64 in 2006 and 111 reported in 2005, 2007 and 2011 – one small tremor, which centered on Jersey and Guernsey in the Channel Islands earlier this month. The quake had a magnitude measuring 4.2, making it the largest in the region for almost 90 years and the tremors were felt all along the south coast of England. The tremor was reported to have registered on British Geological Survey monitoring station equipment in Exeter, Devon. Environmental activists fear the Government's desire to exploit shale gas reserves in rocks beneath the UK will cause small earthquakes. But ministers believe the technique used to tap into the potential supplies – known as fracking – will bring down energy bills and create thousands of jobs. The UK earthquake data covering June 2004 to July 2014 was released to Parliament in response to a written question from Labour's Tom Greatrex.

Shadow energy minister Mr. Greatrex said: "It is vital that any shale gas extraction in the UK can only happen in the context of robust regulation and comprehensive inspection – seismic monitoring must be a key part of that." Labour have repeatedly pressed the Tory-led Government for tighter regulation. "Belatedly, they have Formed when rocks below the earth's surface are dissolved by water leaving a giant bubble of air, the holes or "sinks" can suddenly suck whole houses, cars, and entire city blocks under the earth (which began to happen when a sinkhole wreaked havoc this weekend in Tampa, Fla.).

A waterway in eastern China has mysteriously turned a blood red color.

Residents in Zhejiang province said the river looked normal at 5 a.m. Beijing time on Thursday morning. Within an hour, the entire river turned crimson. Residents also said a strange smell wafted through the air.

"The really weird thing is that we have been able to catch fish because the water is normally so clear," one local villager commented on China's microblogging site Weibo.

About fifty species ridley turtles awoke Friday on the beaches of Salinas, against Pemex buoys in Salina Cruz. The turtles were thrown by the decaying sea, sparking the curiosity among visitors and the ferocity of the dogs and vultures feeding on the bodies.

On the sandbar across the beach from the ninth section (opposite the buoy 3) until the last breakwater, to the unwavering gaze of children and adults who swam a few meters from the decomposed bodies, we observed a flock of vultures peeling pack of dogs and the remains of turtles that are highly prized by

A fisherman finds flocks of fish floating dead in Texas City. On a boat on Moses lake Mark Raby was fishing and suddenly, literally, ran into droves of dead fish drifting in the water. Raby and his wife were so alarmed they saved a bag of dead fish for future lab testing, if necessary, and to figure out if whatever killed the fish can also harm humans. "We saw a bunch of small dead fish but the thing that was so amazing there were millions of them. Acres and acres of dead fish," explains Raby. Another resident says she has lived here six years and this is the largest fish kill she has ever seen.

La Guajira is one of the areas hardest hit by drought

Two days ago, in Valledupar, the capital of the Cesar-, the highest temperature recorded across the country this month felt 41 degrees centigrade in the shade.

Elsewhere as Codazzi, Cesar also, the thermometer marked 40 degrees. In Corozal (Sucre), 38 degrees, and Arjona (Bolívar), almost 37 degrees. But the heat has not been unique to the Caribbean. In Puerto Salgar (Cundinamarca) 39 degrees felt the weekend, and Merchants (Cauca), 36 degrees. (See pictures of the terrible drought plaguing the country)

The feeling of intense heat, coupled with low rainfall, and established himself as a threat in the Caribbean and Andean regions.

HAMBURG taz | Paul Schmid was pleased about the rain on Thursday afternoon: "Only rain and falling temperatures can prevent the disaster," said the spokesman for the Hamburg environmental organization BUND. After the recent heat wave has led to a fish kill in the river Elbe. So far, dead fish are below the Port of Hamburg about 100 tons of washed ashore, especially sea trout, eels and smelts. Dramatic is the situation on the fronds, Schmid says: "The situation is in the orange area."

For days, the oxygen content in the water is only about 1.5 milligrams per liter, the vital for fish minimum value is twice as high. Normal six to eight milligrams. A cause of the lack of oxygen is increased algal blooms in more than 24 degree water. This value is exceeded for days. Dying algae decompose on the ground while consuming oxygen - then missing the fish.

CAPITOLA >> A bizarre scene unfolded at the beach in Capitola on Friday afternoon with thousands of dead fish on the beach and a paste-like substance in the water.

Though it's unclear if the substance led to the death of the fish, police cleared the water as a precautionary measure.

About 3 p.m., there was a report of a tan, paste-like substance floating on the surface of the ocean near Esplanade Park, Sgt. Cliff Sloma said.

"There's an unknown type substance in the water and as a precautionary measure, we've had people exit the water," Sloma said.

Central Fire and the California Department of Fish and Wildlife were on scene to assist as was Santa Cruz County's environmental health team.

While people were permitted on the beach, lifeguards were keeping people from entering the water for precautionary measures, Sloma said.

Florida wildlife officials say a large offshore fish kill in the northeast Gulf of Mexico is being caused by a red tide.

The Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission says citizens have reported thousands of dead or dying reef fish like grouper, hogfish and snapper as well as sea turtles and crabs.

Using satellite images, FWC found an 80-mile long, 50-mile-wide surface bloom of red tide offshore of Dixie and Pasco counties.

FWC scientists collected samples of fish, water and looked at water quality data and confirmed that the red tide organism Karenia brevis is to blame.

FWC says the organism is naturally occurring and has been documented in the Gulf for hundreds of years.

Earth may be in the early stages of a sixth mass extinction, an international team of scientists says.

Animals and plants are threatened. More than 320 land vertebrates have gone

FREETOWN, July 23 (Reuters) - The head doctor fighting an outbreak of the deadly Ebola virus in Sierra Leone has himself caught the disease, one of a growing list of medical workers infected while battling to halt its spread across West Africa.

Ebola has killed 632 people across Guinea, Liberia and Sierra Leone since an outbreak began in February, putting strain on a string of weak health systems facing one of the world's deadliest diseases despite waves of international help.

In a sign of the growing frustrations with the failure of region's governments to tackle the outbreak, a Liberian whose brother died from the disease set fire to the Health Ministry in protest on Wednesday.

Japan Building Massive Military Drone Fleet.

For decades Japan has been the world's playground for design innovation. But now it may become ground zero for the future of something far more hostile: military drones. The country has positioned itself as one of the unlikely players in the escalating global race for military drones, a move that's controversial both at home and abroad. A veteran Japanese politician even warned that the country's re-armament looked like "a kind of pre-war revival." The United States has aided Tokyo in its efforts to re-arm, deploying two unarmed Global Hawk long-range surveillance drones in May to a base in Northern Japan, which infuriated both China and North Korea. Japan is now in a position it hasn't been in for nearly 70 years, when it gave up its right to engage in conflict outside its borders. The country is engaged in a bitter dispute with China over a set of islands that sit on resource-rich sea beds that each claims as its sovereign territory. More

WASHINGTON – Moscow has threatened to end security arrangements with the United States and the European Union should they impose additional sanctions as a result of what they claims is Russian “complicity” in aiding the downing of Malaysia Airlines Flight 17 by pro-Russian fighters in eastern Ukraine.

In a strong statement, the Russian foreign ministry accused White House press secretary Josh Ernest of “slander” when he characterized the downing of MH-17 as “Russian complicity.”

“Judging by the relentless slander campaign against Russia organized by the American administration, they are being more and more guided by blatant lies when pursuing their foreign policy,” the foreign ministry said.

The U.S. thought it won the space race long ago, but no victory lasts forever. On Tuesday, Gen. William Shelton, the commander of Air Force Space Command, speaking at the Atlantic Council, said that U.S. dominance in space will be confronted by some real threats in the years ahead. When Defense One asked what those threats might consist of specifically, he replied jammers, lasers and tactical space nukes.

The nature of these threats hasn't evolved much since the publication of this 2001 report by the Commission to Assess United States National Security Space Management and Organization, chaired by former Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld. One of the chief findings of the commission was that U.S. reliance on space was going to grow—making U.S. satellites and space assets an increasingly attractive target for those who mean us harm.

Islamic Jihad has "many more surprises up its sleeve," said Abdullah Shalah, head of the terror group said Sunday. In an interview on an Arab satellite station, Shalah said that "We have a store of strategic weapons that we have never used," but was prepared to bring out against Israel if the war in Gaza continued. With that, he did not specify what those weapons were.

According to sources in Gaza, those weapons are Iranian-made "Zelzal" missiles, an unguided missile that can carry a payload of up to 600 kg (1,323 pounds) of explosives for a distance of up to 200 kilometers. Speaking to the Donia Alwattan news site, the sources, which claim to be close to Islamic Jihad, did not say how many such missiles the terror group had, adding that "this is their 'judgement day' weapon."

Reports in the past have said that Iran had supplied these missiles to Hezbollah as far back as 2006, but they were apparently not used during the Second Lebanon War, Israeli officials said. The Zelzal missiles could be deflected or neutralized by the Patriot missile system, or Israel's own Arrow protection system.

State Department spokeswoman Marie Harf defended a United Nations agency that was caught giving Hamas rockets back to the terror group on two separate occasions after they were discovered in the agency's schools in Gaza.

The U.N.'s Relief and Works Agency (UNRWA), which operates several schools in Gaza, admitted earlier this week that it had found Hamas rockets stored in two of its schools. On both occasions, UNRWA gave the rockets over to local authorities, who in most cases operate in tandem with Hamas.

The incident has drawn fierce backlash from international observers, though Foggy Bottom sought Tuesday to deflect blame from UNRWA.

A new study predicts 2 billion dead, 25-year winter after a 'limited' nuclear war

Life After People: 'Nuclear Winter' trailer

IT'S a horrifying scene burned into our collective conscious: A flash of light, a blast of hot air and a ballooning mushroom cloud. But there's much more to a nuclear war, as a new study reveals.

Filmmakers and novelists have been tackling the subject for decades. Some have been somewhat sanitised in their approach (Jericho, 2006). Others have been brutally confronting (Threads, 1984, and The Road, 2009).

All have simply speculated about the fate of life on Earth after an apocalyptic nuclear exchange.

Remarks by the President at a DNC Event -- Seattle, WA

Private Residence
Seattle, Washington

5:04 P.M. PDT

THE PRESIDENT: Hello, everybody! (Applause.) Thank you so much. Well, first of all, everybody give Libby a big round of applause. (Applause.) Libby is the same age as Malia, and it turns out that they're both learning how to drive. So we are -- Bruce and Ann and I share some concern. (Laughter.) But they seem like sensible young ladies, so we're hoping that everything goes smoothly this summer.

It is so wonderful to see everybody. There are just a couple people I want to acknowledge. First of all, obviously, for Bruce and Ann to have me back in their house and the whole family here -- they've been such great friends and great supporters. So can everybody please just say thank you to them. (Applause.) And we are very grateful to them.

Jay Inslee was here, along with Trudi. They skipped ahead because we're doing something else. But give them a round of applause anyway. You can tell them later that we appreciate them. (Applause.)

Your outstanding mayor, Ed Murray, is here. (Applause.) And County Executive Dow Constantine is here. (Applause.) Dow, by the way, is a new dad -- 10-week-old daughter. Mazel tov. You can't beat daughters. (Laughter.) You can't -- sons you're okay. (Laughter.)

Let me start just by talking about something that is obviously of great concern to the people of Washington, and that's the forest fires that have been sweeping across a big chunk of the state. As I was driving over here, I had a chance to talk to the Governor and get a full briefing on what's happened. Obviously, these are very difficult fires. Our firefighters take such risks and sacrifice so much to fight them, but it's a big challenge -- and state troopers as well. And we actually lost a state trooper as he was trying to clear out from a fire that was taking place there -- a former Marine -- and I had a chance to speak with his widow and offer our condolences.

So what we've done is to make sure that we are coordinating as best we can with the federal -- or with the state and local officials. We were able to get on the phone -- my director of FEMA, Craig Fugate -- and we were able to authorize today an emergency declaration when it comes to electrical power, which is one of the most immediate concerns, and then we're going to be working with the state on additional declarations that may need to take place. But I just want to make sure that everybody knows that we are going to be thinking about and then helping people who are being severely affected by these fires.

An 1,800-year-old church being burnt to the ground in Mosul, Iraq.

Members of the militant group Islamic State in Iraq and Syria (ISIS) reportedly torched a 1,800 year-old Catholic Church in Mosul, Iraq and have effectively left that city "empty of Christians" as believers fled the area in fear of their lives, according to Chaldean Catholic Patriarch Louis Sako.

Sources told Shoebat that the ISIS group in Mosul called "Daash" completely burned the Syriac Catholic Diocese and its contents in Mosul. A Chaldean, Syriac and Assyrian Website released photos of the church in flames Saturday.

The torching of the church comes on the heels of the destruction of a number of other Christian monuments in Iraq in recent months including the tomb of biblical prophet Jonah, which was dug up by ISIL

ISIS Robs Christians Fleeing Its Edict in Mosul: Convert, Leave, or Die

The last Christians have left one of their holiest cities, running from ISIS demands to become Muslim or be slain—but as a final indignity, their money and even crucifixes were stolen.

After being issued an ultimatum from ISIS in Mosul, some of the city's last Christian families have fled, only to be robbed of their last possessions at ISIS checkpoints. Friday at noon was the deadline for Christian families to meet ISIS's demands: Convert to Islam, pay an anachronistic Islamic tax for non-Muslims known as jizya, leave Mosul, or be killed. But the day before the final exodus, Christians were informed jizya was no longer an option. The order came to convert, leave, or die.

Iranian Christian to Have Lips Burnt for Eating During Ramadan

An Iranian judge sentenced a Christian man to have his lips burnt with a cigarette for eating during the day in the Muslim holy month of Ramadan, The Daily Mail reported. The barbaric punishment was carried out in public in a square in the city of Kermanshah. Five other Muslim men were also flogged in public with 70 lashes for not fasting during Ramadan, the city's deputy governor Ali Ashraf Karami said. A spokesperson from The National Council of Resistance of Iran, a political coalition which opposes the government, denounced the treatment as "savage" and called on western countries to take action. IRS Settles with Atheists, Agrees to Crack Down on Churches for 'Electioneering'

July 22, 2014 | Filed under: Law & Government, Life & Society, Top Stories | By: Heather Clark

WASHINGTON – The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) has reached a settlement with a prominent atheist organization, agreeing to crack down on churches and religious groups for infringements of its prohibition against 'electioneering.'

As previously reported, the Freedom from Religion Foundation (FFRF), headquartered in Madison, Wisconsin, sued the IRS in 2012, asserting that many non-profit religious organizations have been "blatantly and deliberately flaunting ... electioneering restrictions," but the government has not enforced its rules pertaining to the matter.

According to the IRS website, "Under the Internal Revenue Code, all section 501(c)(3) organizations are absolutely prohibited from directly or indirectly participating in, or intervening in, any political campaign on behalf of (or in opposition to) any candidate for elective public office. The prohibition applies to all campaigns including campaigns at the federal, state and local level. Violation of this prohibition may result in denial or revocation of tax-exempt status and the imposition of certain excise taxes."

However, while candidates may not be promoted or opposed, churches and ministries that obtain 501 (c)(3) status may speak out on political and moral issues and/or generally encourage others to vote.

"Under federal tax law, section 501(c)(3) organizations may take positions on public policy issues, including issues that divide candidates in an election for public office," the IRS outlines. "However, section 501(c)(3) organizations must avoid any issue advocacy that functions as political campaign intervention. Even if a statement does not expressly tell an audience to vote for or against a specific candidate, an organization delivering the statement is at risk of violating the political campaign intervention prohibition if there is any message favoring or opposing a candidate."

In its lawsuit against the IRS, the Freedom from Religion Foundation cited a number of specific complaints regarding those that it believes violated these rules. The atheist organization said that it filed 27 complaints with the IRS and alleged that none were ever investigated. FFRF then asked the court to force IRS Commissioner Doug Shulman "to authorize a high-ranking official within the IRS to approve and initiate enforcement of the restrictions of §501(c)(3) against churches and religious organizations, including the electioneering restrictions, as required by law."

Four Trustees Resign from Bryan College as Creation Controversy Continues

DAYTON, Tenn. – Four Bryan College trustees have resigned from their positions out of their disagreement with the leadership's handling of an ongoing controversy over its holding to the literal Creation account.

As previously reported, a controversy erupted at Bryan College earlier this year when the small evangelical school clarified its stance on the creation of man. The statement of belief clarification simply affirmed the traditional biblical position that Adam and Eve were divinely created by God—not descendants of earlier life forms.

"We believe that all humanity is descended from Adam and Eve," the statement said. "They are historical persons created by God in a special formative act, and not from previously existing life forms."

The simple clarification quickly generated an uproar, as many critics accused the small Tennessee school of unfairly disregarding any alternate interpretations of the Genesis creation account. Several professors announced in May that they would be leaving the school as a result of the creation controversy, while two other professors went so far as to file a lawsuit against the school.

"The [school] board was asking me to exclude, even as a possibility, any other way of understanding Genesis than their view of what they think the founders probably thought," Dr. Stephen Barnett told reporters.

Now, according to Chattanooga's Times Free Press, four members of the Bryan College board of trustees have resigned from the school—but not because of a disagreement with Bryan's Creation statement. Trustees Gary Phillips, Jeff Ryan, Mark Senter, and James Wolf all stepped down last week, citing their discontent with Bryan College President Dr. Stephen Livesay and Board Chairman Col. John Haynes.

On July 11, the four disgruntled trustees met with the other Bryan College board members to discuss the statement of belief clarification and the ensuing controversy. However, when the rest of the board defended the school's decisions, the four trustees decided to resign because of the way the matter was being handled.

"The board majority has made it clear who the conductors are on this train and it's time for me to step aside and allow them to carry out their vision with those who are unified behind them," Ryan wrote in his letter of resignation. "A line has been crossed in that I cannot continue to support Dr. Livesay or [board] Chairman Haynes."

'BLACK JESUS': 'I DIED FOR YOUR [BLEEPING] SINS'

TV comedy features foul-mouthed, pot-smoking Christ

Published: 2 days ago

(CHRISTIAN POST) — A new trailer has been released to promote the upcoming comedy "Black Jesus" that will debut on Adult Swim in early August.

The new live-action scripted comedy series is created by Aaron McGruder, known for his controversial and highly popular "The Boondocks" comic strip and television series. McGruder's new project, which will air for a half hour every Thursday on the Adult Swim television network, will follow the life of "Black Jesus," played by actor Gerald "Slink" Johnson as he tries to spread his teachings of compassion and kindness through his Compton, California neighborhood.

Multiple media outlets have said that the newly-released trailer for "Black Jesus" proves the upcoming series will be sure to ruffle some feathers. McGruder's "The Boondocks" has also proven controversial in the past with its criticism of American politics and African American culture, targeting the Black Entertainment Network, Al Sharpton, and Martin Luther King Jr., among other well-known public icons.

Portland Child Evangelism Fellowship Under Fire for Preaching to Kids About Sin

PORTLAND, Ore. -- A chapter of a nationally-recognized Christian group that seeks to reach children with the gospel of Jesus Christ is under fire for teaching kids the biblical doctrine of sin and eternal judgment, in addition to sharing about the love and mercy of God.

The Portland chapter of Child Evangelism Fellowship (CEF) is facing resistance from some area residents as they conduct voluntary summer camps in the area and plan on hosting after-school Bible studies in local public schools. The problem? CEF teaches children that each person is a sinner in need of the Savior.

Those who oppose the group assert that because of this, CEF does not present "Jesus loves you" mainstream Christianity, and claim that the organization is "hardcore evangelical fundamental."

▶ "They pretend to be a mainstream Christian Bible study when in fact they're a very old school fundamentalist sect," resident Kaye Schmitt told local television station KATU.

Robert Aughenbaugh also told reporters this week that preaching to children about sin might give them feelings of fear and shame.

Aughenbaugh, Schmitt and others have organized a group called Protect Portland Children, which seeks to speak out against CEF's message and influence parents not to allow their children to attend its events. It has set up a Facebook page that has so far generated over 800 likes. Its profile photograph is of a child holding a sign that reads "I am not a sinner."

"[The] curriculum teaches young children that they're born sinners, bound for eternity in hell unless they obey the club's teachings," the group asserts.

"Before the Portland public schools allow 'The Good News Club' to use school facilities or to promote their activities on campus it would seem appropriate to allow mental health professionals to further investigate the activities of this group," wrote Chuck Currie of the United Church of Christ in a recent blog post about the matter.

الأول نصلي ونستعد ونعد زيت لمصابيحنا لاستقبال العريس بالصلاة والصوم وخدمة أبناء الله
وتنقية القلب والاستعداد بلبس العرس.

أفسس 6: 15 وَحَازِنِينَ أَرْجُلَكُمْ بِاسْتِعْدَادِ إِجِيلِ السَّلَامِ .
