اكرر اننا لا نحدد مواعيد بل فقط نشجع بعضنا بعضا بقرب مجيء المسيح

وأيضاً أوضح أنه يوجد نبوات لم نراها بعد حدثت مثل ابن الهلاك وحرب هرمجدون وظهور

الشاهدين وحزقيال 38 وغيره ولا نعرف متى ولكن أشعر انها اقتربت.

ولكن ايضا علامات كثيرة من التي قال عنها الكتاب انها في الزمان الاخير وفي الجيل الأخير

بدأت تحدث بوضوح ويجب أن ننتبه اليها. فلا نعرف هل المسيح سيأتي في سنة ام سبع سنين ام

سبعين سنة أم أكثر فكرر لا احدد مواعيد ولكن نذكر بعضنا باننا نحتاج ان نستعد. والاستعداد

ليس فقط قبل مجيء المسيح بل ايضا قبل الظلمة التي ستسبق مجيؤه ليكون عندنا زيت في

مصابيحنا يكفي ان نعبر هذه الظلمة وتكون مصابيحنا مضيئة وقت مجيؤه. بمعنى نحتاج من

الان ان نستعد بقوة بأيمان عامل وبتنقية القلب وان نثمر بالخدمة أي نجمع زيت في مصابيحنا

لان الظلمة والضيقة اقتربت جدا ومن لن يستعد لها بزيت كافي من الان لن يجد زيت في الضيقة
لان وقتها تجميع زيت سيكون صعب جدا بل أستطيع ان أقول من مثل العذارى انه لن يكون هناك
زيت الا ما جمعته سابقا. فأكرر لا نحدد المواعيد ولكن أفضل ان اقول لنفسي ولكم استعدوا الان
لأنه اقترب فنكون مستعدين سواء جاء او نحن ان سلمنا وديعتنا عن أنى لا اقول انه اقترب لكيلا
يقال عني كاذب وانشر اشاعات ولكنه يأتي بسرعة بغته.

Sun storm: Blast 20 times taller than Earth erupts from sun

It's freezing in North America -- but things are heating up on the sun.

The sun's many faces

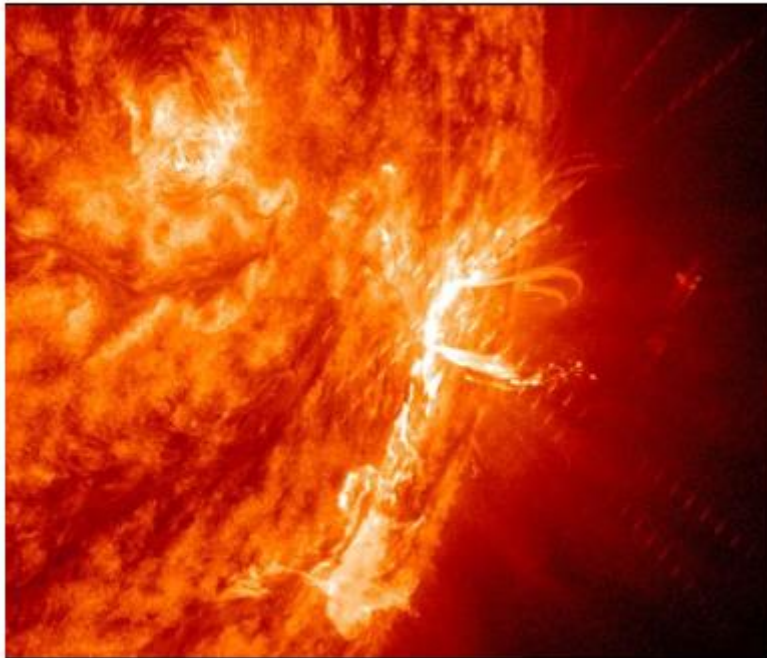

A huge magnetic filament shot out of the sun Monday, sending shockwaves racing at 1.7 million miles per hour and a brief roar of static through shortwave radios across the planet. And with a geomagnetic storm causing Northern Lights to dance across the Canadian border and into North America, the sun is clearly acting up.

According to a report on Spaceweather.com, Monday's massive blast shot off the sun and into space, away from our planet, so it didn't have the same effect on radio signals, power grids and communication satellites that an Earth-facing eruption would have.

But it did cause a Type II radio burst, the site noted.

Because of the sunspot's location near the sun's western limb, the flare was not squarely Earth-directed. Nevertheless, there might be some effect on our planet. NOAA forecasters say that a CME expelled by the blast could deliver a glancing blow to Earth's magnetic field on Feb. 22nd. Stay tuned for updates. Solar flare alerts: text, voice

STORMY SPACE WEATHER: Space weather around Earth is stormy--and might get stormier in the days ahead. Our planet's magnetic field is reverberating from the second CME impact in as many days. According to NOAA forecasters, another CME could arrive late in the day on Feb. 20th followed by another on Feb. 22nd. For the most part, these CME impacts are minor and/or glancing. However, their combined effect is significant. A G1-class geomagnetic storm is now in progress so high-latitude sky watchers should remain alert for auroras. Aurora alerts: text, voice

AURORAS OVER THE USA: A minor geomagnetic storm was already in progress during the early hours of Feb. 19th when a CME struck Earth's magnetic field. The impact revved-up the storm and sent Northern Lights spilling across the Canadian border into the United States. Jonathan Schiralli sends this picture from Grand Rapids, North Dakota:

To capture all the colors, Schiralli says he exposed the sky for 5 seconds using a Canon Rebel T3 digital camera set at 1600 ISO. Northern photographers should take note of those settings as more auroras are in the offing. NOAA forecasters estimate a 30% to 50% chance of geomagnetic storms on Feb. 20-21. Aurora alerts: text, voice

2014-02-28 16:38 UTC Activity Update

G2 (Moderate) Geomagnetic Storming was observed overnight with the arrival of the coronal mass ejection (CME) associated with the R3 (Strong) Solar Flare Radio Blackout event of February 25. Since then, storming has subsided and the bulk of this geomagnetic disturbance is over. Also, the S1 (Minor) Solar Radiation Storm saw a respectable enhancement with the arrival of this CME, as expected, but values should slowly return to background over the next several days. Region 1990, the region responsible for this activity, continues to harbor some magnetic complexity and further eruptions are certainly possible. Stay tuned for updates.

The Ovation Aurora Model Goes Operational: The aurora is highly correlated with a number of space weather impacts on systems making forecasting the location and intensity of the aurora important. Satellite navigation (GPS) errors increase. HF radio communication is blocked. And electric power lines receive unwanted extra current. For the last 18 months, the NOAA Space Weather Prediction Center and the NOAA National Geophysical Data Center have been testing the Ovation Prime model, developed at Johns Hopkins University's Applied Physics Lab. Based on the current solar wind conditions upstream of Earth, this model forecasts where and how intense the aurora will be at Earth approximately 30 minutes later. The NOAA Space Weather Prediction Center has transitioned this model into operations thus providing more consistent and reliable products for customers. You can find the new operational Ovation model site here.

Earth has another close encounter with large asteroid

Posted on February 18, 2014

February 18, 2014 – SPACE - An asteroid estimated to be the size of three football fields whizzed close to Earth on Monday, roughly a year after one exploded over Russia and injured 1,200 people. Slooh Space Camera tracked the approach of the asteroid as it raced past the planet at about 27,000 mph (43,000 kmph), starting at 9 p.m. EST (2 a.m. GMT, Feb. 18), the robotic telescope service said in a statement on Slooh.com. The Dubai Astronomy Group provided Slooh photos of the part of the sky where the rock was expected to be seen, but its motion could not be picked out immediately in a live webcast against the backdrop of night-time stars. The 295-yard (270-m) asteroid was streaking past Earth at a distance of about 2.1 million miles (3.4 million km) little more than a year after another asteroid exploded on Feb. 15, 2013, over Chelyabinsk, Russia. That asteroid injured 1,200 people following a massive shock wave that shattered windows and damaged buildings. Chelyabinsk region officials had wanted to mark the anniversary by giving a piece of the meteorite to each 2014 Winter Olympic athlete who won a medal on Saturday at the Sochi Games. However, the International Olympic Committee at the last minute said it could be done only after the games and separately.

Slooh's flagship observatory on Mount Teide in Spain's Canary Islands was iced over and unable to be used for the 2000 EM26 viewing, Paul Cox, Slooh's technical and research director, said on the one-hour webcast. "We continue to discover these potentially hazardous asteroids – sometimes only days before they make their close approaches to Earth," Cox said in a statement before the show. He added, "We need to find them before they find us!" – Economic Times

New ash explosions reported at Indonesia's Marapi Volcano

Posted on February 27, 2014

February 2014 – INDONESIA - Another ash eruption occurred at the volcano this afternoon at 16:15 local time. According to local news quoting the local VSI volcano observatory spokesman, the eruption today was the largest in a series since the alert status had been raised on 3 August last year. Ash fell in a radius of 3 km where some villages are located. Also according to the article, the volcano has had a total of 57 recorded eruptions since January 2014. Since all of these have been small, and Indonesia is very used to small volcanic eruptions, they hardly make any news at all (while such an event at other volcanoes would). The alert status remains unchanged at 2 out of 4. People were recommended to avoid exposure to ash if possible and wear dust masks. –Volcano Discovery

31: Two small eruptions reported at Alaska's Cleveland's Volcano

Posted on February 27, 2014

February 2014 – ALASKA – Researchers detected two small explosions at Cleveland Volcano on Monday afternoon and early Tuesday morning, according to the Alaska Volcano Observatory. The first occurred a little after 5 p.m. Monday and the second at 1:35 a.m. Tuesday. The AVO said the explosions were brief, and were detected by infrasound and lightning alarms. A small ash cloud — the presence of which was confirmed by satellite — was estimated to be drifting at an altitude of about 16,000 feet above sea level. "These explosions are typical of eruptive activity of Cleveland over the past few years," reported AVO. "There may be a heightened chance of additional ash emissions in the coming weeks. Because these explosions were brief and there is no sign of ongoing eruption, Cleveland remains at Volcano Alert Level/Aviation Color Code YELLOW/ADVISORY." The 5,676-foot peak [3], also known as Mount Cleveland, is in Alaska's Aleutian Islands and has erupted numerous times in recent years. Its alert level was briefly raised to orange for a week in January, before being lowered to yellow again Jan. 10. -AD

32: Poás Volcano spews material 300 meters high after explosion inside crater

Posted on February 27, 2014

February 2014 – COSTA RICA – The crater of Poas Volcano expelled material 300 meters into the air at noon on Tuesday. The phenomenon, called a phreatic explosion, occurred due to a reaction between magma and water at the southern border of the lake inside the volcano. However, this was not an eruption and the volcano did not spew lava. Instead, a column of steam, gas and other materials formed and spouted out the top of the volcano, confirmed the Volcanological and Seismological Observatory of Costa Rica (OVSICORI). Maria Martinez Cruz, a volcanology and geochemistry expert with OVSICORI, said the event can be considered “normal for the volcano’s activity, although explosion heights like the one recorded Tuesday are not that common.” This type of explosion, called phreatic, occurs when the volcano’s magma contacts water in the crater’s lagoon and evaporates quickly through fissures. That action results in an blast of steam, water, ash and small rocks. [The volcano] has been calm for several months. It’s only releasing a lot of gas. This is part of the natural phenomenon, throwing tall columns of gas into the air, steam, the colors of the [volcanic] lake,” said Juan Dobles, administrator of the Poás Volcano National Park. Currently there is no risk to visitors since most materials dissipate in the wind, Martinez added. Poás Volcano National Park is open from 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. every day, and visitors can walk to a lookout point to get a scenic view of the volcano. The Poás Volcano National Park is the second most visited in the country after Manuel Antonio National Park in the Pacific.

Recent Caribbean earthquakes spark concern

Posted on February 23, 2014

February 2014 – CARIBBEAN – Two earthquakes greater than 5.0 have rocked the Caribbean in the last week and concerns have been growing for a major tremor in the region. On Tuesday, Feb. 18, a strong 6.5-magnitude quake occurred about 100 miles north-northeast of Bridgetown, Barbados. According to Dr. Joan Latchman, the Director of the Seismic Research Unit of the University of the West Indies, it was the strongest tremor since 1980 in the area. Three days later, on Feb. 21, a 5.1-magnitude seismic event occurred

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (KGO) -- The Bay Area saw spotty showers in some parts of the region on Saturday. But it's the high surf that caused some big problems.

West Cliff Road in Santa Cruz is down to just one lane and people are walking in the opposite lane. The sidewalk itself blocked off because a massive 10 foot by 10 foot sinkhole. It drops about another 40 feet to the ocean below. It was spotted at about 9:30 Saturday morning.

Santa Cruz Public Works crews say the storm-whipped ocean washed huge rocks out of a beach cave that reaches toward the street.

Hundreds of dead fish appear on Mallorca shoreline

Hundreds of dead fish have appeared in Mallorca on the shores of Son Baulo.

Investigations have been started by the local council and environmental employees to find out where the fish may have come from and why.

Passers-by were surprised to see dozens of metres of shoreline covered in dead fish, most of which were only three or four centimetres long, although there were a few larger sea bass, weighing in at around two or three kilos.

There have been at least three similar incidents in the area in the past; one investigation found that they had died through lack of oxygen, another tracked the problem down to a nearby hotel with toxic waste on the premises.

In the recent case, no other animals appeared to suffer; so toxic waste is less likely to be the cause.

There is a patch of still water just before the river mouth where, at certain times of the year the levels drop and the water becomes stagnant. Neighbours have suggested that there may be less danger to the fish if the water could run year round into the sea to allow more oxygen to circulate in the water.

AMAR KHADKA

ITAHARI, Feb 20: Bird flu has been detected in two poultry farms in Itahari of Sunsari district. After confirmation that the chickens in poultry farms run by Tika Bahadur Rai and Hari Bahadur Karki at Itahari -7 had contracted avian influenza (H5N1) virus, a rapid response team culled the fowls and destroyed the eggs.

According to the District Veterinary Office (DVO), a rapid response team led by veterinarian Indra Narayan Sah culled 1,552 chickens from the two farms on Thursday. The Team also destroyed 20 crates of eggs at Rai's farm. Bird flu was confirmed in these two farms after around 300 chickens in Rai's farm died mysteriously.

"I had invested over a million in the poultry farm. But the chickens started dying a few days ago. Within a week, all my chickens died," said Rai. Dr Bodh Raj Parajuli, director at the Regional Veterinary Directorate at Biratnagar, said chickens as well as other birds in the radius of 500 meters from the farm would also be destroyed.

Parajuli also urged poultry farmers to immediately report to the authorities if their chickens demonstrate symptoms of depression, lack of appetite, and a marked increase in mortality.

Chesil Beach: Dead and oil-covered birds still washing up

Thousands of birds could be dying along the coast, conservationists believe

Hundreds of dead and distressed birds are still being washed up on a beach in Dorset. Conservationists believe a deadly combination of storms and pollution are to blame.

"It's a large population of birds that's gone. It's appalling and it seems to be no end to it."

Beekeepers hit with big losses as bees turn up dead

HONEY producers are facing an environmental disaster with hives being destroyed or abandoned - and some are blaming the crisis on pesticides.

Murwillumbah horticulturist Luke Page cultivated bees for the past 18 months and believes his hives were affected by bug sprays.

"Recently I found a hive and all that was left of the bees was their skeletons.

"The bee is dead on the inside and the outside, and that's consistent with pesticide poisoning," he said.

Great concern exists among the inhabitants of Antofagasta by the strange death of thousands of crabs on the beach Chacaya, located 30 minutes north of Mejillones.

The situation is recorded since last Saturday, when these animals along with other marine species and even birds were found dead on the coast, extending for about two miles.

According to witnesses say, the death of these individuals began after the arrival of a boat, for now the authorities have not identified.

Experts, meanwhile, say it is not natural causes.

South Korea offers help to contain outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease in North Korea

Updated Tue 25 Feb 2014, 4:38am AEDT

South Korea has offered to send vaccine and medical equipment to North Korea to help contain an outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease, in a further sign of warming cross-border ties.

The offer on Monday came days after North Korea confirmed cases of the highly contagious livestock disease at a pig farm in a suburb of Pyongyang.

It had spread to other areas in the capital and an adjacent county, leading to the culling of thousands of pigs, the North's official KCNA news agency reported.

The agency said at least 3,200 pigs had been infected, some had died but most were slaughtered.

The report expressed concern over the impact of the outbreak, which began on January 8, citing a lack of preventive medicine, diagnostic kits and difficulties in securing disinfectant.

"In our proposal today, we called for talks on an emergency shipment of vaccines and medical equipment to North Korea," a South Korean unification ministry official said.

There had been no response from Pyongyang so far, he said.

There is a precedent for such cooperation, with South Korea having provided experts, medicine and equipment following a 2007 foot-and-mouth outbreak in the North.

Valencian hives are emptied

Pesticide use during crop flowering kills thousands of bees in beekeeping facilities

02/12/2014 | 1:43

JOSE LUIS ZARAGOZÁ | VALENCIA The use of certain pesticides to treat fruit grown in agricultural area of the Hoya de Buñol, Camp de Turia and La Ribera bone is causing unprecedented mortality of bees this late in the season compared to last year . In populations Cheste and Vilamarxant, among others, have identified many dead colonies during this past weekend following a plant protection product should not be used at time of flowering, advanced in 2014 despite current winter season due to the high temperatures of the preceding weeks.

The beekeeper Carlos Muñoz, representative of the Unio Llauradors, said yesterday that such bee mortalities caused "considerable losses to beekeepers Valencia", because the catastrophe is in addition to that already if they have the low prices of honey or ongoing health problems they face in their holding: The crisis of the Valencian beekeeping for lack of profitability in the business and the problem of generational change in the approximate 1,700 farms (which house about 400,000 hives) is also accentuated by the problem of depopulation syndrome, which has been reduced by 30% the number hives for five years.

The Unio of Llauradors will request removal of Mesurol 50WP (wetting powder), whose active substance is Methiocarb classified as T (toxic) and V (dangerous for the environment.). It is used against insects that attack flowers and fruit as bait. Its label says verbatim is "highly toxic and is not applied directly on bees, or on the hives. It is recommended not to apply on plants or crops that are in bloom. " And states that 'if their application must be required to keep the hives at a minimum distance of four miles throughout the flowering time for purposes that bees are not in contact with the product or its toxic waste'.

Carlos Muñoz argues that the use of that pesticide to combat quoted phytosanitary pests on fruit can cause irreparable damage to bee colonies, causing even the life of the hive to go completely without insect population to produce honey.

Bird Flu Hits 21 Provinces In Vietnam

HANOI, Feb 26 (Bernama) - Bird flu has hit 21 provinces and cities across Vietnam with around 64,000 infected chickens culled, according to latest statistics from the Animal Health Department.

The number of birds killed in the central province of Khanh Hoa and the northwestern province of Lao Cai has reached almost 20,000, members of the National Steering Committee for Bird Flu Prevention and Control heard at a meeting here on Wednesday.

Vietnam News Agency (VNA) reports the outbreak was attributed to the complicated weather in the first two months of the year, and the increase in shipping and trading of poultry during the recently-ended Lunar New Year (Tet) festival.

"If localities fail to intensify scrutiny and take swift measures, bird flu could develop into an epidemic," warned the department's deputy head Dam Xuan Thanh.

Participants at the meeting agreed that all localities where the disease has reoccurred or has yet to be detected should focus on preventing illegal import and trading of poultry.

Local authorities will also tighten inspections at border gates and take prompt preventive measures against the bird flu virus and human-transmission strains such as H5N1 and H7N9.

With a population of around 10 million, Ho Chi Minh City consumes a large amount of poultry on a daily basis with many brought in from other localities.

The city has signed cooperation agreements with localities such as Dong Nai, Ba Ria-Vung Tau, Binh Duong, Long An and Tien Giang in monitoring and preventing epidemic diseases, and managing food safety.

Disappearance of bees leads to human extinction

Diseases that afflict domestic bees are also contagious to bumblebees and other wild fertilizers, British scientists say. Some 90 percent of domestic and wild bees have died in the US for the last ten years. In Great Britain this rate has reached 50 percent. Wholesale deaths are also seen in Sweden, Germany, Austria, Italy, Israel and other countries. This threatens the planet's ecosystems and may strengthen the food crisis, specialists say.

The danger of extinction threatens bees. Billions of honeybees worldwide die, leaving people face to face with unpollinated flowers. According to the latest data, productivity of horticultural crops, especially apples and almond-tress, has fallen in the US. Every spring hives are transported or even imported from other countries to the leanest regions of the US. But this can hardly help, as the most of the transported bees dies to the next season. Moreover, during the transportation, there is a risk of epidemic spreading. For example, in 1998 in the US there was a case, where a family of honeybees was affected by beehive beetle. Till this case the bee

The 4 BEST foods to eat before bed (for a flatter belly)

(NaturalNews) The company that owns the now-shuttered Fukushima nuclear power facility in Japan, which sustained three reactor core meltdowns following a massive earthquake and tsunami back in 2011, is once again in hot water for fudging the numbers on radiation leakage. New reports indicate that the Tokyo Electric Power Company (Tepco) grossly understated levels of radiation detected in a groundwater pool last summer by a factor of five, the latest deception in an extensive string of lies told by the company since the disaster first occurred.

TEPCO discovers 100-tonne radioactive water leak at Fukushima nuclear plant in Japan

Updated Thu 20 Feb 2014, 11:54pm AEDT

A new leak of 100 tonnes of highly radioactive water has been discovered at Fukushima, the plant's operator said after it revealed only one of nine thermometers in a crippled reactor was still working.

The tank, one of hundreds at the site that are used to store water contaminated during the process of cooling broken reactors, sits about 700 metres from the shore.

A spokesman for Tokyo Electric Power says the toxic water is no longer escaping from a storage tank and is likely contained, but the news is a further blow to the company's already-battered reputation for safety.

"As there is no drainage way near the leak, which is in any case far from the ocean, it is unlikely that the water has made its way into the sea," he said.

"However, the water was highly radioactive, with a beta radiation reading at 230 million becquerel per litre."

The contamination level compares with government limits of 100 becquerels per kilogram in food and 10 becquerels per litre in drinking water.

Beta radiation, including from cancer-causing strontium-90, is potentially very harmful to humans and can cause damage to DNA. But it is relatively easy to guard against and cannot penetrate a thin sheet of aluminium.

Acetaminophen in Pregnancy Linked to 'ADHD' in Children: Study

SHARE UPDATE

Natural ADHD Remedy

Focus - Proven Natural ADHD Treatment without Side Effects.

Doctors frequently recommend acetaminophen, commonly found in over-the-counter pain relievers including Tylenol, to pregnant women for treating mild pain.

The study, published Monday in the medical journal JAMA Pediatrics, analyzed data from more than 64,000 children in Denmark between 1996 and 2002. (Credit: Getty Images)

But a new study out of Denmark suggests the use of acetaminophen during pregnancy could be associated with ADHD-like behavioral problems in children.

"(Pregnant women) shouldn't worry at this point," says study author Dr. Beate Ritz, professor and chair of the epidemiology department at the University of California, Los Angeles. "But if I were a woman who was pregnant ... I would try to avoid taking painkillers as much as I can until we know more about this."

The study, published Monday in the medical journal JAMA Pediatrics, analyzed data from more than 64,000 children enrolled in the Danish National Birth Cohort study between 1996 and 2002. Mothers in the cohort study reported on their children's behavior, and the researchers looked at databases to determine how many prescriptions for ADHD drugs were written and how many children received a diagnosis of a severe form of ADHD called hyperkinetic disorder, or HKD.

The study authors concluded that prenatal exposure to acetaminophen may increase the risk of a child being diagnosed with HKD or being prescribed ADHD medications and "exhibiting ADHD-like behaviors." It's important to note that ADHD-like behaviors are not the same as having ADHD.

An accompanying editorial published in JAMA Pediatrics emphasizes that the study has found "an interesting observed association," but that the researchers did not find that acetaminophen causes ADHD. The study authors agree that their results do not show a cause-and-effect relationship.

The data suggests that taking acetaminophen for longer periods and later in pregnancy is associated with higher risks, Ritz says. When women reported use for 20 weeks or more, their children had a 50% increased risk for receiving ADHD medication, according to the study.

Ritz says more than half of all mothers in the study reported some acetaminophen use while pregnant. The study measured how many weeks the mother reported taking any amount of acetaminophen but did not take the dosage into account.

Christian Missionary Arrested in North Korea Over Gospel Literature

February 20, 2014 | Filed under: Evangelism and Missions, Persecution, Top Stories, World | By: Editor

Share Tweet Email ShareThis

An Australian Christian missionary was arrested this past Sunday by North Korean authorities for distributing Gospel literature.

John Short, 75, who has lived in Hong Kong for 50 years, was arrested in his Pyongyang hotel, a day after arriving in the North Korean capital.

"[John] was carrying Korean literature on his person and that could be the reason, but I don't know," John's wife Karen told The Associated Press in an early interview.

According to later reports, Short's travel partner Wang Chong stated that Short left Gospel literature in a Buddhist temple during a tour. Authorities had been later notified by the local tour company Short was traveling with since the action breaches North Korean laws of spreading religious materials.

Mrs. Short said the trip was her husband's second to North Korea.

"He won't be intimidated by the Communists," she said in an interview with Reuters. Karen stated that her husband has been open with North Korean officials about his faith and even read his Bible in front of government guides during his first trip to the Communist country.

"I know he's courageous and he's in God's hands," his wife said. "There's risk involved. He knew that too, but when you know what you must do, you do it."

Denmark's government has brought in a ban on the religious slaughter of animals for the production of halal and kosher meat, after years of campaigning from welfare activists.

The change to the law, announced last week and effective as of yesterday, has been called "anti-Semitism" by Jewish leaders and "a clear interference in religious freedom" by the non-profit group Danish Halal.

Administrators at a hotel run by Iowa State University have given the boot to Bibles in their guest rooms after protest from a religious separatist group.

The push to remove the books began when a guest at the Hotel Memorial Union complained to Freedom From Religion Foundation about the "unwelcome religious propaganda in the bedside table," according to a local NBC News affiliate.

The foundation, a nonprofit which advocates the separation of church and state, said the hotel is part of the Iowa public university system and, as such, cannot legally place the Bibles in the room. Doing so, the group argued, would constitute a support of one religion over another.

Starting March 1, the traditional Bibles in the nightstands will be no more, the hotel decided. The 52-room hotel will now confine its Bibles to its downstairs library and public reading room, the affiliate reported.

"We're delighted to see reason and the Constitution prevailing," Annie Laurie Gaylor, the foundation's co-president, told the Blaze. "We can all sleep easier knowing secularism is being honored at our public universities."

Purdue University Removes 'God' From Plaque

Purdue University, which once defended the right of a private speaker to blaspheme Jesus, has banned an alumni donor from using the word "God" on a plaque because it might offend someone. Dr. Michael McCracken and his wife made a $12,500 pledge to the university's school of mechanical engineering. In return, Purdue, a large public university in Indiana, offered the McCrackens the opportunity to name a small conference room in a lab building. They were also invited to supply language for a plaque that would be installed in the room. McCracken chose to name the room after his deceased parents, Dr. William McCracken, who graduated from Purdue

SAGINAW, Mich. – An atheist activist group is demanding that officials in a Michigan city cease prayer during their council meetings out of its assertion that the practice is unconstitutional and alienates Godless residents.

The Madison, Wisconsin-based Freedom From Religion Foundation (FFRF) recently sent a letter to Saginaw City Manager Tim Morales asserting that the city's long-held practice of prayer is problematic. It stated that an anonymous resident complained about the prayers, thus prompting the letter.

"Government prayers exclude a significant portion of Americans from the democratic process, are of dubious legality and are a repudiation of our secular history," attorney Rebecca Markert wrote. "Prayer at government meetings is unnecessary, inappropriate and divisive. City council members are free to pray privately or to worship on their own time in their own way. They do not need to worship on taxpayers' time."

She stated that city council prayers demonstrate the government promotion of religion, which she contended was unlawful.

"Local governments should not perform religious rituals or exhort citizens, regardless of their beliefs, to participate in, or show deference to, a religious ritual," Markert stated.

Mayor Dennis Browning told MLive.com that he is divided over whether or not the prayers should continue, but said that the decision is ultimately up to the city attorney and city council.

Atheist Group Sues to Remove 40-Foot Tall Cross From Gov't Property in Maryland

An atheist group has filed a lawsuit against a Maryland government agency over the placement of a 40-foot cross on government property. The American Humanist Association filed suit Tuesday in the United States District Court for the District of Maryland against the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, which oversees the property in Bladensburg, where the cross is located. In addition to the AHA, named plaintiffs include two AHA members who live in the area and a third resident from nearby Beltsville. "This action challenges the constitutionality of the defendant's ownership, maintenance and prominent display on public property of a massive Christian cross (the "Bladensburg cross") as a violation of the Establishment Clause of the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution, as applied to Maryland by the

UPDATE: Same-Sex Marriage Now Legally Recognized in Kentucky

UPDATE 2/27/14 @ 2 p.m.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) - A federal judge has signed an order directing officials in Kentucky to immediately recognize same-sex marriages performed in other states and countries.

U.S. District Judge John G. Heyburn II on Thursday issued a final order throwing out part of the state's ban on gay marriages. The order makes official his Feb. 12 ruling that Kentucky's ban on same-sex marriages treated "gay and lesbian persons differently in a way that demeans them."

The order means same-sex couples may change their names on official identifications and documents and obtain any other benefits of a married couple in Kentucky. The order doesn't affect a related lawsuit seeking to force the state to issue marriage licenses to same-sex couples.

Kentucky's attorney general has asked for a delay, which hasn't been ruled upon.

"Frozen" has been charming critics and audiences all winter, but one conservative grandmother was less than taken by the Disney animated feature, which has grossed a reported $378.3 million domestically.

Kathryn Skaggs, author of the "A Well-Behaved Mormon Woman" blog, has penned a lengthy post blasting "Frozen" for what she described as the movie's "gay agenda to normalize homosexuality."

Exactly what about the smash film rankled Skaggs (who claims to have seen, and enjoyed, "Frozen" three times with her grandchildren) remains a mystery. Still, she points to the countless tribute and parody versions of the movie's Academy Award-nominated theme song, "Let It Go," and writes:

Children need to be playing games like Monopoly, Tag, Hide and Seek, Playing House, Lego's, sleepovers, camping etc. Whatever happened to letting kids have a childhood? Why do liberals want the kids to grow up and not enjoy a childhood at all? Childhood is a time of learning. It's a time of fun. It is NOT a time to even THINK about sex or sexual interaction or gay pride parades! However, nothing says "child-appropriate material" quite like gender-bending underage superheroes. At least that's the theory over at the Hub, the network co-owned by Discovery and Hasbro, which is trotting out its latest soon-to-be-dud, SheZow. That show follows the adventures of a 12-year-old boy named Guy who uses a magic ring to transform himself into a crime-fighting girl. Yes, you read that correctly. When Guy says the magic words – "You go girl!" – he becomes SheZow, wearing a purple skirt and cape, as well as pink gloves and white boots. The Hub is hoping some of SheZow's magic powers rub off on it so it can better battle the giants of children's television: Nickelodeon, Disney Channel and Cartoon Network. Tom O'Halloran

PHOENIX - Arizona's legislature approved a bill Thursday that allows business owners asserting their religious beliefs to refuse service to gays and others. Democrats called the proposal "state-sanctioned discrimination" and an embarrassment.

The 33-27 vote by the House sends the bill to Republican Gov. Jan Brewer.

Hundreds of activists rallied in Arizona on Friday to protest the passage of a bill that would let vendors deny service to gay customers on religious grounds.

The measure grants legal protection to business owners who want to refuse service to gays and others because doing so would violate his or her religious beliefs.

Hundreds of lesbian, gay, bisexual and transsexual activists and their supporters rallied outside the state Capitol building in Phoenix, while others gathered in the southern city of Tucson to protest the measure.

The bill, officially known as SB 1062 or the "Religious Freedom Restoration Act," was fully approved by Republican-controlled legislature of this conservative southwestern state on Thursday.

Republican state Senator Steve Yarbrough says the bill is about protecting religious freedom and rights that "must be respected" and protected.

Opponents are convinced it will lead to unjustified discrimination.

Gays in committed relationships have a "partner." Polyamorous people like Diana Adams, who runs a Brooklyn-based legal firm that fights to offer traditional marriage rights to untraditional lovers, have a "primary partner."

Primary partners because, well, polyamorists subscribe to the philosophy of being head over heels in love—or at least romantically involved—with more than one person at the same time. The Polyamory Society defines the practice as "the nonpossessive, honest, responsible and ethical philosophy and practice of loving multiple people simultaneously."

"I remember from a very young age realizing that I was bisexual and that I tended to be attracted to many different people at the same time," Adams told Roc Morin in a recent article in The Atlantic entitled "Up for Polyamory? Creating Alternatives to Marriage."

EVIDENCE has emerged that the views of the Paedophile Information Exchange influenced policy-making at the National Council for Civil Liberties when it was run by former Labour Health Secretary Patricia Hewitt.

PIE members were lobbying NCCL officials for the age of consent to be reduced and campaigning for "paedophile love".

Their view that children were not harmed by having sex with adults appears to have been adopted by those at the top of the civil liberties group.

Today we publish extracts from an NCCL report written for the Criminal Law Revision Committee in 1976 when Mrs Hewitt was general secretary.

North Korea forces women to undergo abortions and young mothers to drown their newborn babies, and has starved and executed hundreds of thousands of detainees at secret prison camps — atrocities that the chairman of a U.N. panel that documented the abuses compares to those of Nazi Germany .

“The gravity, scale and nature of these violations reveal a state that does not have any parallel in the contemporary world,” the U.N. Commission on Inquiry said in a 372-page report released Monday on North Korea’s atrocities. These crimes are ongoing because “the policies, institutions and patterns of impunity that lie at their heart remain in place.”

Tehran (AFP) - Iran's powerful Revolutionary Guards on Wednesday warned against crossing "red lines" in negotiations with world powers aimed at reaching a lasting agreement over Tehran's nuclear programme.

The warning came as Iranian negotiators took part in the second day of talks in Vienna, where they are seeking a framework for negotiations to reach an accord that would also allow Iran to maintain civilian nuclear activities.

Militia carries out exercise to prepare for invasion of Holy City. General: the Islamic world is waiting for Tehran to call them to battle.

The Islamist Basij militia force in Tehran ran a special military exercise Thursday and Friday preparing for an Iranian takeover of Jerusalem.

The exercise, entitled "March to Al-Maqdis (Jerusalem)," included training in the event of such a takeover, including drills for the protection of cities, assistance and rescue, dealing with social unrest, the protection of sensitive and important military centers, dealing with the invasion and landing of "enemy" (IDF) forces from helicopters, and carrying out complicated tactical maneuvers at night.

In an official statement, the militia said that the exercise is designed to develop and enhance the capabilities of the Al-Maqdis Brigades, improve Basij military competence, and foster a "self-sacrificing spirit" among the terrorists.

Tens of thousands participated in the exercise and terrorists-in-training flocked to the program from dozens of Basij battalions.

Basij commander General Mohammad Reza Naqdi announced that the exercise was planned because the "boastful" (an expression used to indicate the US and Western powers) are at the end of their path to power and "the fighters and freedom-loving people" worldwide - Islamists - are angry and want to destroy the US and Israel to "restore" Jerusalem to an Islamic city.

Japan secretly developing nuclear weapons: Yazhou Zhoukan

The Hong Kong-based Yazhou Zhoukan reports that Japan is secretly developing a nuclear weapons program in anticipation of a potential crisis over the Diaoyutai (Diaoyu or Senkaku) islands in the East China Sea.

Japan is currently the only nation in the world which has a complete nuclear industry. Mitsubishi, Hitachi and Toshiba are the three largest Japanese companies which produce nuclear energy. Under those three corporations, there are an additional 200 smaller firms which possess nuclear fuel or who have the know-how to handle plutonium.

Island nation considering arms transfers to its Asian allies

Japan is now considering future weapon transfers to other Asian countries as it builds alliances for a potential war with China.

Earlier today in Okinawa, Japanese officials met with representatives from the 10 member states of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations to expand technological and defensive cooperation between the countries.

Although Japan and ASEAN discussed joint cooperation in response to natural disasters and anti-terrorism, Japan's Parliamentary Vice Minister of Defense revealed that the true intent of the meeting was to bolster defense against China's "unilateral attempts to change the status quo by force."

As part of Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe's plan to "deepen and enhance cooperation" with ASEAN, a ministry official told Kyodo News that Japan is currently looking to ease its policy on arms exports, a clear indication that the island nation is taking the threat of war with China seriously.

"China appears to be at the forefront of Abe's defense vision, bolstering the case for Japan to strengthen ties with ASEAN," the newspaper reported.

ASEAN consists of Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore, Thailand, Brunei, Burma, Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam.

بالطبع نسمع عن كم الكوارث والقتل هناك في المظاهرات ولكن الغريب ان رئيس يوكراانيا في هذا الوقت الصعب يعقد اتفاق مع بوتين. الموقف هو ان اوكرانيا التي كانت جزء من الاتحاد السفيتي

هي الان بين روسيا وبين الاتحاد الاوربي. رئيس اوكرانيا الحالي يانوكوفتش ومن معه يميلوا الي روسيا ولكن المتظاهرين بالاضافة الي المشاكل الكثيرة والفساد في البلد وبسببها يريدوا خلع الرئيس ايضا يريدوا ان يتخلصوا من الاتجاه الروسي وينضموا الي الاتحاد الاوربي ولكن روسيا صعب ان تقبل ذلك لانها لو كسبت اوكرانيا هذا مهم لان هذا يعيد قوة الاتحاد السفيتي تدريجيا وسطوته في اوربا. ولهذا الثورة شبه تحولت لحرب. فلا اتوقع ان هذه الاشكاليات التي في يوكرانيا ستنتهي بخير للمتظاهرين لانهم لا يريدوا ان يخضعوا مرة ثانية لروسيا ولكن غالبا ستنتهي لصالح روسيا. المظاهرات اندلعت قبل الاولمبات ولم تستطيع روسيا ان تفعل شيء رغم ان الرئيس الاوكراني رفض الاستقالة ويشعر انه مؤيد من روسيا. وكثيرين توقعوا توقع صحيح وان بوتن سيؤجل رد فعله الي ما بعد الالمبيات

Russia has lashed out at the new regime in Kiev, accusing it of using "dictatorial" and "terrorist" methods to suppress dissent in the country, with backing from the West which is "acting out of geopolitical self-interest."

"The position of some of our Western partners doesn't show genuine concern, but a desire to act out of geopolitical self-interest," said a statement on the Russian foreign ministry's website.

"There is no condemnation of criminal actions by extremists, including manifestations or neo-Nazism and anti-Semitism. In fact, these are being encouraged."

Ukraine President Went Missing

By Guy Taylor and Valerie Richardson - The Washington Times
Sunday, February 23, 2014

The Obama administration warned Russian President Vladimir Putin on Sunday not to react too aggressively to the fast-moving developments in Ukraine, where pro-Western demonstrators forced the nation's Moscow-backed president from power over the weekend.

National Security Adviser Susan E. Rice said the situation unfolding in Kiev "reflects the will of the Ukrainian people and the interests of the United States and Europe," and that Russia would be making a "grave mistake" if it sends in military forces to try to reverse the developments — or to seize control of pro-Moscow eastern Ukraine.

The Invasion So Far: Visual Summary Of Russian Forces And Movements

Moments ago Interfax reported that two Russian anti-submarine warships have appeared off the coast of Ukraine's Crimea region, violating an agreement on Moscow's lease of a naval base, according to a Ukrainian military source as saying. Then again what else would a Ukrainian military source say. The source added that the two vessels, part of Russia's Baltic Fleet, had been sighted in a bay at Sevastopol, where Moscow's Black Sea Fleet has a base. So imagine two extra anti-sub ships off Sevastopol in the map below which until this latest update from Contemporary Issues and Geography, was keeping an accurate running update of all the most recent developments in the staggered Russian invasion of the

روسيا ترفض تحذيرات أمريكا وتستمر في ارسال سفر حربية بالقرب من أمريكا وأيضا تسحب

سفيرها من أمريكا

الخدعة كلها هي ليست ثورة شعبية فقط ولكن أمريكا تريد ان تحارب اقتصاد روسيا التي أسهمها

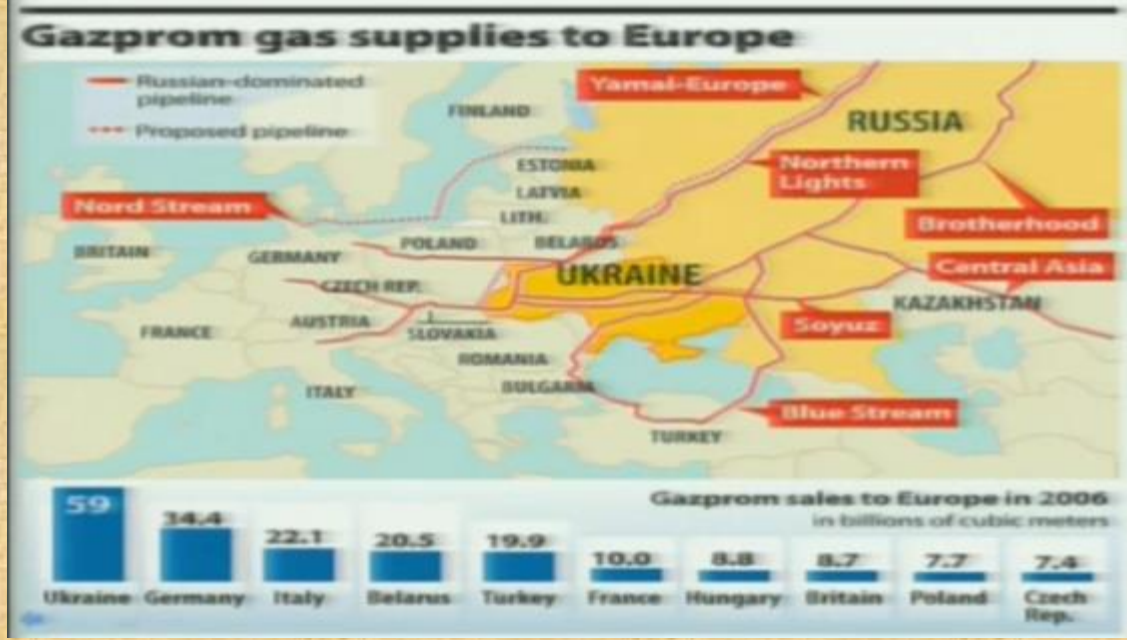

تتصاعد امام ضعف اقتصاد أمريكا المستمر. فاخترت الوقت الذي فيه روسيا مشغولة في

الاولمبيات لكي تقوم الثورة للإطاحة بالرئيس وتدفع أوكرانيا لتنضم الي الاتحاد الأوروبي وهذا يضر بشدة روسيا لان انابيب الغاز الروسية تمر في أوكرانيا وامريكا تريد قطع ذراع روسيا من البحر الأسود. ولكن كما قالت السي ان ان بوتين وضع اصبعه في عين أوباما واحتل كرميا التي على البحر الأسود فما يحدث في بقية أوكرانيا لن يؤثر على روسيا وستدفع أمريكا وأوروبا الثمن لهذه الخطة الشريرة التي انقلبت عليهم.

والصين تنضم لمساندة روسيا في موضوع أوكرانيا

وأيضاً بولندا تدخل في اللعبة الآن وتحرك قطع عسكرية لحدودها مع أوكرانيا وتعلن ان موقفها ضد روسيا

روسيا لابد ان تسيطر على اكرانيا بسبب انابيب الغاز والا خسرت روسيا الغاز الي اوروبا وهذا يدمر روسيا اقتصاديا لان روسيا تصدر ربع احتياج اوروبا للغاز الطبيعي وهذا 80 % يعبر في اراضي اوكراينا

فروسيا تريد ان تكون المصدر الوحيد للغاز الطبيعي لاوربا وليس كاحد المصدرين هذه الايام وهذا يعني انها لا يوجد لها اختيار اخر الا تامين خطوط الغاز الطبيعي في اوكرانيا.

هذا السبب هو نفس السبب الذي جعل روسيا تدخل في اراضي جورجيا سنة 2008 م رغم ضعفها في هذا الوقت.

اعتقد هذه الثورة ستكون معركة أخرى تظهر تفوق روسيا وضعف اوربا وامريكا (ترشيش واشبالها) وهذا سيجعل سيطرة روسيا ومعها الصين وايران وغيرهم اكثر وسيضعف ترشيش واشبالها التي ستكتفي بان تشجب

وامريكا بعد ان كانت تقول لروسيا لا تتدخل الان تراجعت امريكا وتقول لروسيا لا تحتلي

The US Secretary of State spoke today of the unacceptability of invading a sovereign country on phony pretexts in order to assert one's own interests in the 21st century. But no, he was not speaking about the United States, as one might have thought.

America's ability to "manage the international fallout is going to be limited" if Israel does not strike a peace deal with the Palestinians and there is "continued aggressive settlement construction," US President Barack Obama said in an interview published on the eve of his Monday meeting with Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu.

Washington's inability to manage this fallout will have consequences, Obama said in the interview with Bloomberg's Jeffrey Goldberg that appeared Sunday.

Ahead of the scheduled meeting Monday between US President Barack Obama and Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu, Palestinian Authority sources have told Arabic-language international newspaper al-Sharq al-Awsat that "this time, Obama will intervene forcefully and directly, and will apply pressure to Netanyahu and [PA chairman Mahmoud] Abbas, so that they agree to a framework agreement."

According to these sources, the framework agreement will determine that the capital of the Palestinian state will be eastern Jerusalem, and in exchange, there will be Palestinian concessions in other matters, including borders and refugees.

According to the appendices to the framework agreement, joint Israeli-Palestinian committees will discuss issues relating to borders, refugees, Jewish communities and water. The Palestinians, for their part, strenuously rejected the offer to recognize Israel as the Jewish state.

The Palestinian sources added that "if Obama succeeds in convincing Netanyahu and Abbas to agree to concessions on the framework agreement, he will announce a date for signing the agreement in Washington, with himself taking part in person."

If the negotiations fail, the Palestinians plan to act unilaterally to achieve recognition for a state in international institutions.

China just sold almost $50 billion in US Treasurys... But don't panic just yet

China's holdings of US Treasurys dropped to the lowest levels in two years after China dumped $47.8 billion in paper—equal to about 3.6% of its Treasury holdings as of November—bringing its total holdings to $1.27 trillion. Not that this should come as a shock. Yi Gang, a deputy governor of China's central bank, hinted at the move when he announced in late November that the country no longer benefits from increasing its foreign reserves.

(Reuters) - Deutsche Bank (DBKGn.DE) has laid out plans to reduce its U.S. balance sheet as the U.S. Federal Reserve adopts new rules to shield the country's taxpayers from costly bailouts, the Financial Times reported on Sunday.

The lender is expected to reduce its $400 billion balance sheet in the United States to around $300 billion in part by reassigning operations such as its Mexican arm and its Frankfurt and Tokyo-based repo businesses that are currently part of its U.S. business elsewhere, the FT reported. 29 Percent Of All U.S. Adults Under The Age Of 35 Are Living With Their Parents

By Michael Snyder, on February 19th, 2014

Why are so many young adults in America living with their parents? According to a stunning Gallup survey that was recently released, nearly three out of every ten adults in the United States under the age of 35 are still living at home with Mom and Dad. This closely lines up with a Pew Research Center analysis of Census data that looked at a younger sample of Americans which found that 36 percent of Americans 18 to 31 years old were still living with their parents. That was the highest level that had ever been recorded. Overall, approximately 25 million U.S. adults are currently living at home with their parents according to Time Magazine. So what is causing all of this? Well, there are certainly a lot of factors. Overwhelming student loan debt, a depressing lack of jobs and the high cost of living are all definitely playing a role. But many would argue that what we are witnessing goes far beyond temporary

New Clues in Suicide of JP Morgan Banker Add to Mystery

Friends suggest Li Junjie was planning to return to Canada days before death leap.

Friends of the JP Morgan banker who leapt to his death from a high rise building in Hong Kong this week, becoming the 7th financial worker to die under strange circumstances in recent weeks, suggest that he planning to return to Canada, adding to the mystery of the suicide.

33-year-old Dennis Li Junjie plunged to his death on Tuesday after jumping from the roof of Chater House, which serves as JP Morgan's Asia headquarters. Junjie worked for JP Morgan as a back up services associate.

His suicide was blamed on "the stressful environment of investment banking," although its timing, just three weeks after JP Morgan senior manager Gabriel Magee jumped 500ft from the top of the bank's headquarters in central London, and amidst a number of other strange banker deaths, has prompted speculation
