اكرر اننا لا نحدد مواعيد بل فقط نشجع بعضنا بعضا بقرب مجيء المسيح

وأيضاً أوضح أنه يوجد نبوات لم نراها بعد حدثت مثل ابن الهلاك وحرب هرمجدون وظهور

الشاهدين وحزقيال 38 وغيره ولا نعرف متى ولكن أشعر انها اقتربت.

ولكن ايضا علامات كثيرة من التي قال عنها الكتاب انها في الزمان الاخير وفي الجيل الأخير

بدأت تحدث بوضوح ويجب أن ننتبه اليها. فلا نعرف هل المسيح سيأتي في سنة ام سبع سنين ام

سبعين سنة أم أكثر فكرر لا احدد مواعيد ولكن نذكر بعضنا باننا نحتاج ان نستعد. والاستعداد

ليس فقط قبل مجيء المسيح بل ايضا قبل الظلمة التي ستسبق مجيؤه ليكون عندنا زيت في مصابيحنا يكفي ان نعبر هذه الظلمة وتكون مصابيحنا مضيئة وقت مجيؤه. بمعنى نحتاج من الان ان نستعد بقوة بأيمان عامل وبتنقية القلب وان نثمر بالخدمة أي نجمع زيت في مصابيحنا لان الظلمة والضيقة اقتربت جدا ومن لن يستعد لها بزيت كافي من الان لن يجد زيت في الضيقة لان وقتها تجميع زيت سيكون صعب جدا بل أستطيع ان أقول من مثل العذارى انه لن يكون هناك زيت الا ما جمعته سابقا. فأكرر لا نحدد المواعيد ولكن أفضل ان اقول لنفسي ولكم استعدوا الان لأنه اقترب فنكون مستعدين سواء جاء او نحن ان سلمنا وديعتنا عن أنى لا اقول انه اقترب لكيلا يقال عني كاذب وانشر اشاعات ولكنه يأتي بسرعة بغته.

دعنا نتخيل هل يوجد احد من الذين رحلوا الي السماء ندم انه استعد لمجيء المسيح ولكن المسيح لم ياتي ولكنه رحل مستعد؟

نحن اعضاء في الكنيسة عروس المسيح فهل احد يغضب من الذي يقول للعروس استعدي لانه قد ياتي الان حتى لو اتي العريس متاخر؟

Asteroid Approaching in Close Encounter With Earth

By Paul Shin Mar 5, 2014 3:05am

A recently discovered asteroid is on course to have a close encounter with the Earth today, coming closer than our Moon's orbit.

The asteroid, dubbed 2014 DX 110, is about 100 feet in diameter and is set to come within 216,000 miles of Earth — a close shave by astronomical standards, considering our Moon orbits the Earth at a distance of about 238,900 miles.

While an object that size may not seem imposing, if it were to strike the Earth, it would release a devastating amount of energy greater than a nuclear weapon. The infamous asteroid that exploded over Tunguska, Siberia, on June 30, 1908, has been estimated to be about 30 meters to 60 meters — 100 feet to 200 feet — in diameter.

Some lucky New Mexico stargazers spotted a bright fireball in the sky just after midnight on Thursday.

Initial reports of the meteor sighting were posted on the blog, Lunar Meteorite Hunters.

A KOB Eyewitness News 4 viewer submitted video captured on the All Sky Camera located near San Francisco and Wyoming in Albuquerque.

In less than five seconds, the fireball lights up the sky and disappears.

Sandia National Laboratories confirmed this meteor is considered a "fireball" since it burned brighter than Venus in the sky.

Mysterious Blast Lights Up Sky Over Eastern Siberia

MOSCOW, March 6 (RIA Novosti) – An explosion of unclear origin illuminated the sky over eastern Siberia on Thursday morning, leaving frightened locals to speculate about an asteroid or malfunctioning rocketry, media reports said.

The blast, for which no official explanation has been offered, was witnessed by the population of the Kyrgydai village in Russia's Yakutia region, the Vesti14.ru news website said.

Two extremely grainy videos from surveillance cameras documenting the alleged blast – or at least a bright flash in the sky – are available on YouTube.

Reports said some debris apparently plummeted into the taiga after the explosion, but nothing had been recovered by the time of this article's publication.

Locals speculated that an asteroid, a landing module from the International Space Station, or even a stray ballistic missile were responsible for the blast.

No man-made rocketry was publicly scheduled to fly over Yakutia on the date of the explosion. But the area has been hit by debris from Russian carrier rockets at least four times in the past.

Russia is building a new spaceport in the far-eastern Amur Region, but it is not to become operational until 2015.

A blast in the sky was also reported on Tuesday in the western Siberian city of Nizhnevartovsk. Authorities offered no explanation, while locals joked about alien landings.

An asteroid at least the size of a 60-story building will make a distant flyby of Earth this week, and you watch astronomers track the space rock tonight (March 9) in a live webcast, weather permitting. The asteroid poses no threat to Earth.

The online Slooh community observatory will host the free webcast at 10 p.m. EDT (0200 GMT) to track asteroid 2014 CU13, a space rock about 623 feet (190 meters) wide discovered on Feb. 11 that will pass Earth at a range of about eight times the distance between Earth and the moon on Tuesday (March 11). Another blast of arctic air follows latest snow

Updated: Mar 04, 2014 7:33 AM MST

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The seemingly endless winter dumped a half a foot snow on the ground in parts of the South, Mid-Atlantic and Northeast, and many areas Tuesday morning saw something even more unusual in March: a blast of arctic air that sent temperatures plummeting into the single digits.

Baltimore-Washington International Thurgood Marshall Airport broke a 141-year-old record low temperature, reaching 4 degrees. The National Weather Service said the low reached early Tuesday broke a 5-degree record set on the day in 1873. It was also a record low for the month of March. Dulles International Airport - also outside Washington - tied a 1993 record for the month at -1 degree.

Niagara Falls comes to a halt AGAIN: Millions of gallons of cascading water is frozen in bitter temperatures

For the second time in what has been a frigid winter in the Northeastern United States, Niagara falls has come to an icy halt as the six million gallons of water that typically flow over the falls every minute has frozen over.

The flow of water over the falls typically can withstand icy temperatures like those that have frozen much of the country this winter, but 9 degrees Fahrenheit brought Niagara Falls to a standstill - and photographers were there to snap some stunning images of the frozen falls.

In January, another record-breaking cold front managed to freeze the mighty falls in a 'polar vortex' that turned the cascading water to ice for about 240 million people in the U.S. and southern Canada.

No thaw is expected anytime soon, as temperatures at the western New York tourist attraction will dip below 0 degrees Fahrenheit Monday through Tuesday morning.

Concerns rise again over continued bird flu outbreaks

Weeks have passed since Korea was first hit with a bird flu outbreak that has since led to the culling of millions of ducks and chickens.

The issue had dropped out of the headlines just days before but concerns are mounting that quarantine efforts have failed to completely eradicate the virus.

Korea's agriculture ministry said Sunday that poultry are being culled at a farm owned by the National Institute of Animal Science in South Chungcheongnam-do province, after a duck was confirmed to have died from the H-5-N-8 strain of the virus.

This isn't the only case, as reports of another outbreak in the nation's southwestern South Jeollanam-do province led to the culling of 70-thousand birds.

The total number of birds destroyed from this year's outbreak now stands at above six-and-a-half million.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) - Missouri's cold winter is killing off more fish than usual in ponds and lakes.

The Missouri Department of Conservation says it has received calls about dead fish from people across the state. Fish are dying both in shallow water and in large reservoirs such as Truman, Table Rock, Pomme de Terre, Stockton and the Lake of the Ozarks.

Below-normal temperatures have created thicker-than-usual ice. And that ice has been covered at times with snow.

State conservation scientists say thick ice and snow can prevent sunlight from reaching aquatic plants, which depletes the oxygen levels in water. Fish can eventually suffocate.

Colder-than-usual water also can kill fish, especially smaller ones.

Hundreds of ducks found dead around lakes

By Eli George, WIVB.com Producer

Updated: Tuesday, March 4, 2014, 5:46 pm

Published: Monday, March 3, 2014, 5:25 pm

DUNKIRK, N.Y. (WIVB) – Hundreds of ducks are being found dead along Lake Erie and Lake Ontario, and the state Department of Environmental Conservation says extensive ice coverage is to blame.

The ducks have been found along the Lake Ontario shoreline, the Niagara River, in the open waters of Lake Erie, and Dunkirk Harbor. Conservationists say the fish eating birds found dead are emaciated and lack water-proofing, which is often a side effect of starvation.

Biologists believe the extensive ice coverage on the lakes has forced wintering waterfowl to concentrate in the limited remaining open water. That, in turn, reduces the food for all and, along with severe cold, is killing off the undernourished birds.

Though the mortality rate is difficult to estimate, the DEC categorized it as “extensive.”

A follow-up report is expected at the end of this week.

In early December, the Dutch also reported two separate cases of low pathogenic H5N3 on two farms in the nearby Groningen region, culling some 9,300 birds on the first and 11,700 on the second.

Hundreds of Dead Birds found near Dubbo

By Andrew Dunkley

Wildlife Information and Rescue Service volunteers have been responding to rescue calls with hundreds of native birds found dead or extremely ill in the Troy Reserve area.

Around 25 birds have been rescued so far but hundreds are reported to have died with WIRES volunteers saying calls from the public are still coming in.

It appears that a significant number of corellas have been killed, but sulphur crested cockatoos and galahs have also been effected.

Ann Mara is Chair of Dubbo WIRES Volunteers, "There's Carcass after carcass after carcass, many dead and some of them dying, lots of carcasses in the river itself. You know that's really hard on our volunteers. It's a terrible scene."

The NSW Environment Protection Authority is investigating the deaths.

Initial laboratory tests conducted by the EPA indicate that they may have died as a result of pesticide exposure. The EPA is also investigating the source of the pesticides.

As a precaution, people are warned to keep away from sick or dead birds and are advised not to handle them. Pets should also be kept away from affected birds.

Cold weather is killing off bees

Posted: Mar 04, 2014 4:23 PM MST

Updated: Mar 06, 2014 2:10 PM MST

13abc.com Lissa Guyton - email

The cold weather is responsible for more problems than just potholes, it's causing massive losses for beekeepers. 13abc's Lissa Guyton spent the day in Hancock County at the Keller Bison and Bee Farm to learn more about the serious problem that could affect us all.

The farm normally has about 1,800 hives at dozens of different sites around the Arcadia area but the owner thinks that more than half of them have been lost this winter. Lyle Keller has been a beekeeper for more than three decades. He says this is setting up to be one of his toughest years, "When you start losing 50-60% of your total number it is not easy to recover from that quickly." Bees provide more than honey, they also pollinate fruit and vegetable crops.

We were with Keller on Tuesday as he checked on some of his hives, "The bees need to get out and fly every 4-6 weeks to cleanse themselves and they haven't been able to do the cleansing flights this winter. It's rough on them. They are under heavy snow and in the extreme cold."

Beekeeper from MA-Cruquius find thousands of dead bees

For a beekeeper near Heemstede-Cruquius spring is dramatically bad start. He found thousands of his bees dead yesterday in and around the hive. They exhibit symptoms of possible contact with pesticides. The House recently debated still using it.

In all dead bees tongue hangs out of the mouth, the legs are cramped and there is pollen on their legs, so told the distraught beekeeper to his colleague Pim Lemmers. He is Holland's most famous beekeeper with cupboards at the prime minister's residence and the courtyard and is considered an authority on bee area.

The victim asked him if he had any idea what caused the massive and sudden death of the colony could be. The symptoms did the Bl'er (known beekeeper) ring a bell. "They indicate possible damage to spray some pesticide," explains Haarlem opposite the AD.

"This duck die-off has been unprecedented. Biologists who've been here for 35 years have never seen anything like this," says Wildlife Biologist Connie Adams of the New York Department of Environmental Conservation.

The Western New York region is bearing witness to a quiet but devastating ecological disaster. The harsh and seemingly endless winter has been the root cause of death for thousands of ducks, from Rochester to the Niagara River.

Adams says, "This has never been documented in the past. ... As cold as people believe the winter has been, it has in fact been that cold because it's verified by the fact that this abundant wildlife population cannot survive... this winter."

The massive die-off first was noticed by local birders in mid-January. Adams tells 2 The Outdoors that when the NYDEC went out to investigate the situation had already reached a serious stage.

"It wasn't until the middle of February, about a month later, that I went out and investigated it myself, and, in fact, it was worse than I could have expected. I thought it was going to be bad, and it was worse than that."

Newville trout hatchery owner reports thousands of fish deaths

Doug Holt, owner of Green Spring Trout Farms in Newville, said thousands of his fish have died in the past week. He suspects the spring water that feeds his hatchery has been contaminated by manure runoff. (Jeremy Arias, PennLive.com)

Update: Cause of fish kill proving elusive.

Nearly 10,000 fish have died at a Newville trout hatchery whose owner said he suspects the spring that is the source of water for his hatchery has been contaminated by manure runoff.

Doug Holt, of Shippensburg, said he got a call from his employees at the Green Spring Trout Farms on March 2 telling him that fish were dying. He arrived at the hatchery to see his workers pulling heaps of dead fish from the muddy, green water in his tanks -- water that he said usually runs clear and comes from a series of underground springs.

“When I got here, we had already lost an entire section of fish so I hurried up and hopped in to start throwing out the dead fish and I immediately smelled the odor of manure coming up, just from that movement of the water,” Holt said.

Holt called the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection, which sent a crew to assess the situation.

Dead Fish Washing Up on Tunisia Shores

The environment is changing and global warming is affecting everything and everyone on this planet. The latest alarming event which is also a sign that the environment is in a very bad shape is something scary that happened in Tunisia during the past weekend.

On Sunday 9th of March, and on three different beaches across the country, fish started showing up dead! In the famous port of Sidi Bou Said, a huge 15-meter-long whale was found dead inside the yacht-filled marina!

More photos after the jump ...

In Nabeul, people woke up to huge number of dead mullet that have washed ashore! As for Bizerte, hundreds of dead jellyfish, some of which are huge in size, were found covering the beach of "Ras Jbal"!

It's worth mentioning that last week, in Mehdiya, a whale was also found dead on the shores of the city.

This means there's a serious change in water temperatures in the Mediterranean sea and the marine life is becoming out of balance.

Minnesota Mystery: What's Killing the Moose?

By BRENT McDONALD MARCH 15, 2014

A Moose Mystery

Moose in Minnesota are dying at an alarming rate, and biologists are racing to understand what's behind the rapid decline.

GRAND PORTAGE, Minn. — For moose, this year's winter-long deep freeze across the Upper Midwest is truly ideal weather. The large, gangly creatures are adapted to deep snow: Their hollow fur insulates them like fiberglass does in a house. And the prolonged cold helps eradicate pests that prey on moose, like ticks and meningeal worm, or brain worm. Yet moose in Minnesota are dying at an alarming rate, and biologists are perplexed as to why.

TOKYO—Japan plans to establish a 3,000-troop unit specializing in amphibious operations "as swiftly as possible," the defense minister said, publicly outlining details of the new unit for the first time as tensions with China continue over disputed islands.

Japan has undertaken an ambitious project to create a force similar to the U.S. Marine Corps, and Japanese Self-Defense Force Troops have been receiving increasingly frequent training from their U.S. counterparts in the past few years.

China draws 'red line' on North Korea, says won't allow war on peninsula

REUTERS 16 hours ago

BEIJING (Reuters) - China declared a "red line" on North Korea on Saturday, saying that China will not permit chaos or war on the Korean peninsula, and that peace can only come through denuclearization.

China is North Korea's most important diplomatic and economic supporter, though Beijing's patience with Pyongyang has been severely tested following three nuclear tests and numerous bouts of saber rattling, including missile launches.

"The Korean peninsula is right on China's doorstep. We have a red line, that is, we will not allow war or instability on the Korean peninsula," Chinese Foreign Minister Wang Yi told reporters on the sidelines of China's annual largely rubber-stamp parliament.

Wang called upon all parties to "exercise restraint", adding that "genuine and lasting peace" on the peninsula was only possible with denuclearization.

U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry visited China last month and said after talks in Beijing that China and the United States were discussing specific ways to press North Korea to give up its nuclear program.

Crisis in Ukraine Live

U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry visits shrines set up in Kiev's Independence Square.

Russian President Vladimir Putin said Russia had every right to intervene in Ukraine if Russian-speaking people there asked for help, but he denied any plans to invade.

But both President Obama and U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry in separate news conferences today said Russia was violating Ukraine's sovereignty and called for Russia to "de-escalate" the situation.

Kerry went from the Ukrainian capital of Kiev, where he visited the square where protests turned bloody before the overthrow of the pro-Russian President Viktor Yanukovich, to Paris for a meeting with his counterparts from Great Britain and Ukraine -- and then Russia. The United States has promised loan guarantees and technical assistance to help the new authorities, and European nations are also considering their options.

The US Navy has confirmed that a guided missile destroyer, the USS Truxton, is heading to the Black Sea, for what the US military said is a "routine" deployment, decided long before the crisis in Ukraine, which has divided world powers.

The US Navy said in a statement that the USS Truxton left Greece on Thursday on the way to the Black Sea and was going to conduct training with the Romanian and Bulgarian navy.

"While in the Black Sea, the ship will conduct a port visit and routine, previously planned exercises with allies and partners in the region," The US Navy said in statement.

"Truxton's operations in the Black Sea were scheduled well in advance of her departure from the United States," the statement added.

An estimated 675,000 Ukrainians left for Russia in January and February, fearing the "revolutionary chaos" brewing in Ukraine, Russia's Federal Border Guard Service said. Officials fear a growing humanitarian crisis.

On Sunday, the border guard service said Russian authorities have identified definite signs that a "humanitarian catastrophe" is brewing in Ukraine.

"In just the past two months (January-February) of this year...675,000 Ukrainian citizens have entered Russian territory," Itar-Tass news agency cited the service as saying.

"If 'revolutionary chaos' in Ukraine continues, hundreds of thousands of refugees will flow into bordering Russian regions," the statement read.

Ukrainians have long formed a large presence in Russia. According to the official 2010 census, 1.9 million Ukrainians were officially living in Russia, although the head of the Federal Migration Service put that figure as high as 3.5 million one year before. While those migrants were often prompted by economic concerns, political turmoil has spiked the recent rise in Ukrainians attempting to leave the country.

Crimea votes to join Russia, Obama orders sanctions

Thu, Mar 06 18:50 PM EST

« 1 of 24 »

By Alissa de Carbonnel and Luke Baker

SIMFEROPOL, Ukraine/BRUSSELS (Reuters) - Crimea's parliament voted to join Russia on Thursday and its Moscow-backed government set a referendum in 10 days' time in a dramatic escalation of the crisis over the Ukrainian region that drew a sharp riposte from U.S. President Barack Obama.

Obama ordered sanctions on those responsible for Moscow's military intervention in Ukraine, including bans on travel to the United States and freezing of their U.S. assets.

He echoed European Union leaders and the pro-Western government in Ukraine in declaring that the proposed referendum would violate international law.

The sudden acceleration of moves to bring Crimea, which has an ethnic Russian majority and has effectively been seized by Russian forces, formally under Moscow's rule came as EU leaders held an emergency summit groping for ways to pressure Russia to back down and accept mediation.

The EU condemned Russian actions in Crimea as illegal, voiced support for Ukraine's territorial integrity but took only minor steps suspending talks with Moscow on visas and a new investment pact while warning of tougher steps if there is no negotiated solution within a short period.

In a signal to Moscow, Obama announced plans to punish Russians and Ukrainians involved in what he called "threatening the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Ukraine". A U.S. official said Russian President Vladimir Putin was not on the list of those to be sanctioned.

"The proposed referendum on the future of Crimea would violate the Ukrainian constitution and violate international law," Obama told reporters at the White House. "Any discussion about the future of Ukraine must include the legitimate government of Ukraine."

After talks in Rome, U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry said Foreign Minister Sergei Lavrov was personally delivering proposals to Putin to end the crisis in Ukraine.

"We have agreed to stay in close touch in order to see if there is a way forward to try to get to a negotiating table to get the parties necessary to be able to stabilize this," Kerry said.

Kerry said the executive order on sanctions signed by Obama on Thursday provided a legal framework for imposing sanctions but also left open the door for dialogue over Ukraine.

The Pentagon meanwhile announced a large-scale air force exercise in Poland which Washington's ambassador to Warsaw said had been augmented to reassure U.S. allies in the region in the light of the Ukraine crisis.

Russia successfully test-fired an Intercontinental Ballistic Missile Tuesday, Fox News confirmed.

The Strategic Rocket Forces launched an RS-12M Topol missile from a region near the Caspian Sea, successfully hitting its target in Kazakhstan.

Defense officials told Fox News the test was "not unexpected" and that "START treaty notification occurred."

Russia is required under the START treaty to notify the U.S. of such tests.

Officials said they got notice of the test launch "days" in advance, in accordance with the treaty.

Earlier this year, the Russian military had announced plans to test around 70 types of rocket and missile weaponry, according to an RIA report.

Ukraine crisis: Russia warns of dropping US dollar as reserve currency if US imposes sanctions

Reuters

March 4, 2014

A Kremlin aide was quoted on Tuesday as saying that if the United States were to impose sanctions on Russia over Ukraine, Moscow might be forced to drop the dollar as a reserve currency and refuse to pay off any loans to US banks.

Mr Sergei Glazyev, who is often used by the authorities to stake out a hardline stance but does not make policy, was cited by RIA news agency as saying Moscow could recommend that all holders of US treasuries sell them if Washington freezes the US accounts of Russian businesses and individuals.

The US Senate Foreign Relations Committee is preparing legislation to provide support to Ukraine and consulting the Obama administration on possible sanctions against individual Russians, the committee's chairman said on Monday.

The committee was also consulting with President Barack Obama's administration on possible sanctions against individuals ranging from visa bans and asset freezes to suspending military cooperation and sales, as well as economic sanctions.

Economist Warns of Collapse Risk: “Will Not Allow Life to Continue As We Know It”

Earlier this week we noted that an invasion of the Ukraine by Vladimir Putin would likely lead to a complete destruction of U.S. stock markets. It's not so much the invasion force itself, but rather, the economic maneuvers that would come with it should Russia take this course of action.

Well known economist and founder of the Shadow Stats web site John Williams seems to agree. If Russia were to begin unloading US Dollars it would almost instantly lead to a collapse of not only our financial markets, but our entire way of life. And while Russia alone may not have the economic power to single-handedly crush the U.S. economy, if their trading partners and allies like China got into the mix, coupled with front-running investors who may suspect the move is about to happen, it could well be a blood bath on a global scale.

This wouldn't even be an issue if the U.S. economy were operating at healthy levels, but as Williams notes in the following interview with Greg Hunter's USA Watchdog, it's anything but:

What you have to keep in mind is that back in 2008 we had one of the greatest financial crises the United States ever faced. The system was on the brink of collapse at that point in time.

What the Fed and the federal government did was spend every penny they could, anything they could create or anything they could guarantee. They did everything they could possibly do to keep the system from crashing. They guaranteed all bank accounts. So, they saved the system, but now what they did has not borne fruit. We have not seen an economic recovery. We have not seen a return of health to the banking system.

According to AFP, Clinton, who spoke at a private event Tuesday in southern California, said Putin's apparent deployment of Russian troops into neighboring Ukraine to protect Russian citizens and Russian-speakers recalls moves by Hitler to protect ethnic Germans living outside of Germany.

The Long Beach Press Telegram which quoted Clinton's comments said the former top diplomat noted that Putin has sought to provide Russian passports to people in Ukraine with ties to Russia.

"Now if this sounds familiar, it's what Hitler did back in the 30s," the Press Telegram quoted Clinton as telling attendees at a fundraiser for the Boys and Girls Clubs of Long Beach, California.

"The ethnic Germans, the Germans by ancestry who were in places like Czechoslovakia and Romania and other places, Hitler kept saying they're not being treated right. 'I must go and protect my people,' and that's what's gotten everybody so nervous," she added.

With pro-Kremlin forces seizing control of Crimea, Clinton said Putin "believes his mission is to restore Russian greatness," in part by reasserting dominance over former Soviet states.

Clinton spoke of the hopes for a negotiation that will reduce tensions in what has become Europe's worst security crisis since the end of the Cold War.

"So it's a real nail-biter right now, but nobody wants to up the rhetoric," she added. "Everybody wants to cool it in order to find a diplomatic solution and that's what we should be trying to do."

The defense ministry said it is on high alert and monitoring the situation. It called on the North to stop the missile launches.

The weapons launched were Scud missiles that flew more than 500 kilometers (311 miles), according to the defense ministry. The missiles landed in the sea, South Korea's semi-official Yonhap news agency reported.

North Korea fired seven short-range projectiles from its east coast Tuesday using a multiple rocket launcher, Seoul's defense ministry said, the latest in a series of provocations by the communist country as the U.S. and South Korea entered the second week of joint military drills.

The North fired off three short-range projectiles using a 240 mm multiple rocket launchers at around 6 a.m from Wonsan on its southeastern coast, the ministry said. They flew about 55 kilometers in the northeast direction.

It launched four more beginning at 4:17 p.m. using a longer-range rocket launcher from the same region, with the range of about 155 km, it said.

Nuclear-powered U.S. submarine arrives in S.Korea

English.news.cn 2014-03-03 14:01:25

SEOUL, March 3 (Xinhua) -- A nuclear-powered U.S. submarine arrived in the South Korean southern port city of Busan Monday morning to touch at the port on its voyage to the West Pacific, an official at the U.S. Forces Korea (USFK) said.

The USS Columbus, a Los Angeles-class submarine, arrived in Busan, around 450 km southeast of Seoul, Monday morning, the official said on the condition of anonymity.

Asked why the submarine came here, the official said by phone that it has been in regular deployment now in the West Pacific, noting that it called at the port to let U.S. crew members take a rest and the submarine obtain supplies.

He denied local media reports that the nuclear-capable submarine, a unit of the U.S. Seventh Fleet, arrived in the port to join the South Korea-U.S. annual military exercises along with the USS Blue Ridge, the command ship of the Seventh Fleet.

According to a South Korean military official cited by multiple local media, the submarine and the command ship came here to join the "Foal Eagle" field training exercise that began on Feb. 24.

The 7,000-ton submarine, commissioned in 1993, was loaded with Tomahawk cruise missiles with a range of some 3,100 km and Harpoon anti-submarine missiles. The submersible visited the South Korean southern port city of Jinhae in March 2012 to participate in the Foal Eagle military exercise.

South Korea and the U.S. began their two annual spring war games, including the "Key Resolve" command post exercise as well as the "Foal Eagle," on Feb. 24 despite the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK)'s call for the delay or cancellation of the drills.

The Foal Eagle exercise, which involves 7,500 U.S. soldiers with some 5,100 of them from overseas bases, will last until April 18.

As the United States prepares plans to downsize its military, the Navy is set to order fewer Lockheed Martin Corp F-35 fighter jets than previously expected over the next five years.

Citing an unnamed defense official, Reuters reported that beginning in the 2015 fiscal year, the Navy will request the purchase of 36 F-35C fighter jets, which are designed to land on aircraft carriers. That's nearly half as many as the 69 originally projected.

The Air Force, meanwhile, is postponing its own request for four F-35A jets for one year. Beginning in 2016, however, it remains on track to move forward with its purchases as planned, an arrangement that will see the Air Force purchase about 238 jets total.

The Marine Corps stands out as the sole player committed to its original plan, still expected to request 69 F-35B jets over five years. These are scheduled to be combat ready and in use by mid-2015.

According to Pentagon Comptroller Robert Hale, the move to purchase fewer jets does not indicate that the military is underwhelmed with the jet's performance capability, but rather it was based primarily on budgetary considerations. Defense officials told Reuters that the plan is still to purchase a total of 2,443 F-35s over the next few years.

Military's top general offers grim outlook on nation's defense

BY JAMES ROSEN

McClatchy Washington Bureau March 4, 2014

WASHINGTON — The nation's top military commander painted a dark picture Tuesday of future U.S. defense capabilities clouded by shrinking Pentagon budgets and adversaries' technological advances that he said would erode American battlefield superiority.

Army Gen. Martin Dempsey, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, provided his sobering views as part of the Quadrennial Defense Review, a congressionally mandated evaluation of U.S. military strength issued every four years.

Dempsey predicted that it would become increasingly difficult to balance the competing demands of protecting allies abroad, securing Americans at home and deterring future wars.

BEIJING (Reuters) - China will increase military spending by 12.2 percent this year to 808.23 billion yuan ($131.57 billion), the government said on Wednesday, partly to beef up coastal and air defences and to develop more high-tech weapons.

The government announced its spending plan for the 2.3 million-strong People's Liberation Army (PLA) at the opening of parliament's annual meeting. The increase builds on a nearly unbroken run of double-digit hikes in the defence budget for the past two decades.

"We will comprehensively enhance the revolutionary nature of the Chinese armed forces, further modernise them and upgrade their performance, and continue to raise their deterrence and combat capabilities in the information age," Premier Li Keqiang told the largely rubber-stamp legislature.

Li added that China would "strengthen research on national defence and the development of new- and high-technology weapons and equipment" and "enhance border, coastal and air defences".

China's military spending is now second only to that of the United States, allowing Beijing to create a modern force that is projecting power deep into the disputed waters of the East and South China Seas.

DF-21D missile could sink US aircraft carrier: report

The People's Liberation Army Navy's DF-21D anti-ship missile has a range of 2,000 kilometers and has the capability to sink a US nuclear-powered aircraft carrier, according to the Hindu, an English-language Indian newspaper, on Mar. 5, citing a recently published report.

The report released by the National Institute of Advanced Studies in Bangalore states that China's Beidou satellite navigation system will help increase the accuracy of the country's missiles greatly. The report, written by various experts in India, concluded that the DF-21D has shaken the traditional view of the US Navy's unassailable superiority in the Asia-Pacific region. The anti-ship missile is likely to serve as a credible deterrent against American intervention in China's maritime disputes, of which it has several with its Asian neighbors, the report said.

The DF-21D is designed based on intercontinental ballistic missiles and carries maneuverable warheads with conventional munitions which can

Thirty-three North Koreans face execution after being charged with attempting to overthrow the repressive regime of Kim Jong-un.

The Koreans have landed themselves in hot water after it emerged they had worked with South Korean Baptist missionary Kim Jung-wook and received money to set up 500 underground churches. It is understood they will be put to death in a cell at the State Security Department.

Experts believe the North Koreans are being punished more harshly than usual as North Korean leader Kim Jong-un combats a wave of dissatisfaction at the regime's isolationist "juche" doctrine.

Atheists Continue Battle Against Steel Cross Display Inside 9/11 Museum

Atheist activists are continuing their battle against the inclusion of a steel-shaped cross in the 9/11 Memorial and Museum, giving a legal complaint against the Christian symbol another shot in front of the Second Circuit Court of Appeals on Thursday. American Atheists, an activist group committed to church-state separatism, has long fought the presence of the symbol, which was formed by steel beams and discovered at the World Trade Center site in the wake of the terror attack. David Silverman, the organization's president, has argued in the past that the cross was included in the 9/11 Memorial and Museum for religious purposes and that it should not be displayed. Now, his case — American Atheists, Inc., et al. v. Port Authority of New York et al. — will, once again, be considered. MORE

Dalai Lama Opens U.S. Senate for First Time with 'Prayer' to 'Buddha and All Other gods'

March 7, 2014 | Filed under: Law & Government, Top Stories | By: Heather Clark

WASHINGTON – For the first time ever, the leader of Tibetan Buddhism opened the United States Senate with 'prayer' on Thursday, wishing for world peace and 'good fortune' for America's lawmakers.

After being introduced by Senator Patrick Leahy (D-VT) and escorted by Senator Mazi Hirono (D-HI), the Dalai Lama characterized himself as only being "a simple Buddhist monk."

"So pray to Buddha and all other gods," he said, before speaking in Tibetan and then repeating his "prayer" in English.

"With our thoughts, we make our world," the Dalai Lama stated, robed in gold and red. "Our mind is central and precedes our deeds. Speak or act with a pure mind and happiness will follow you like a shadow that never leaves."

▶ Senators bowed their heads and visitors watched from the balcony.

"May there be joy in the world, with bountiful harvest and spiritual wealth," the Dalai Lama continued. "May every good fortune come to be. And may all our wishes be fulfilled."

He then referenced what he called his "favorite prayer," which he said he offered daily.

"As long as space remains, and as long as sentient beings remain, until then may I too remain, and help dispel the misery of the world," it read.

The Senate is customarily opened by prayers from Chaplain Barry Black, a Seventh-Day Adventist, but reports state that Black invites speakers of other faiths at times to present the invocation.

Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid praised the Dalai Lama following his presentation, calling for a brief recess so that Senators could greet the Buddhist leader.

There has been so much news lately of schools, organizations, and individuals being harassed by atheist groups, but this one sets a new low. In this case, a grieving mother erected a roadside cross where her son was killed, and now an atheist group has forced her to take it down. What is wrong with these people???

As reported by The Press Enterprise, a roadside cross was erected for 19-year-old Anthony Vincent Devaney who in May 2012 was killed crossing a street.

A complaint prompted the American Humanist Association in Washington, D.C., to intervene, contending the placement of the symbol in the city right-of-way violated the separation of church and state.

The association's demand letter dated March 4 came a week after a U.S. District Court judge ruled in favor of the group's legal challenge to Lake Elsinore's proposed veterans memorial. That monument would have depicted a soldier kneeling in front of crosses and Stars of David.

Representatives of the association said they were prepared to challenge the city again if it didn't ensure the Devaneys' cross came down. The organization, which represents atheists and other nonreligious individuals, released a statement Thursday expressing gratitude the cross was being removed.

This is absolutely outrageous! We see these types of crosses all the time. It is a small remembrance of a loved one and a constant reminder that life is precious. What is the problem here?

Disney Insists on Homosexual Scout Leaders

I know this headline sounds like a tasteless joke or like something out of a bad dream, but it's not.

As reported on CNN.com, "The Walt Disney Company has given notice to the Boy Scouts of America that it will pull all funding to the group starting in 2015 because of a BSA membership policy that bans gay leaders."

That's right. The creators of Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck and Goofy and Pluto and the makers of classic children's films like Bambi and Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs will stop funding the Boy Scouts of America until the BSA allows openly homosexual scout leaders.

Has the Disney Company lost its mind – or its moral bearings?

It was only a few months ago that the BSA, caving in to financial pressure and public criticism, changed its longstanding policy of refusing openly homosexual scout members.

KADENA AIR BASE, Okinawa — Since the repeal of the Don't Ask, Don't Tell policy, U.S. military bases have hosted gay marriage ceremonies and potluck gatherings. But on Saturday, servicemembers here may have been the first to take to the stage and perform as drag queens on a military installation in support of lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender troops.

Drag queens and drag kings, to be precise.

Six servicemembers — gay, lesbian and straight — donned heavy makeup to dance and lip sync songs such as "I Wanna Dance with Somebody" for a raucous capacity crowd at the Rocker NCO Club at Kadena Air Base. The event was a fundraiser for

(03-05) 18:53 PST SAN FRANCISCO --

Veteran gay rights advocate and former San Francisco Human Rights Commission staff member Larry Brinkin was sentenced to one year in county jail Wednesday for possessing child pornography.

As part of a plea agreement, Brinkin, 67, will serve six months of his sentence in county jail and six months in home detention, the district attorney's office said. He will have to register as a sex offender for the rest of his life.

Brinkin, who worked as a senior contract compliance officer with the rights commission until his 2010 retirement, was arrested in June 2012 after e-mail attachments were found on his AOL subscriber's account that contained images of toddlers engaged in sex acts with men.

He pleaded guilty to one count of possessing child pornography in January. Prosecutors originally charged him with six felony counts of possessing and distributing child pornography, but they dropped all but one felony count of possession as part of the plea bargain.

Investigators were able to track the pornography linked to Brinkin to Australia, where at least one arrest was made.

In addition to his one-year sentence, Brinkin was sentenced to five years of probation and must undergo sex offender therapy, according to the district attorney's office. He is also banned from working with children, contacting a juvenile without parental consent, and Biotech is Creating GMO Human Babies: What could possibly go wrong?

Christina Sarich

Prison Planet.com

March 4, 2014

With the human race slowly being killed off by GMO food, environmental poisons, petroleum, plastics, chemtrails, pharmaceuticals, vaccinations, radiation, and weaponized warfare, the powers that be are working on new strain of stronger 'humans' to carry on our existence. Forget designer babies with specific gene preferences determined by parents, we're talking about the utter transformation by a technocracy of the human genome.

It is called transhumanism and scientists in the UK and US have already submitted proposals to legally create GMO babies. Actually, GMO human embryos have already been created.

Techno-eugenics, you might call it – a way to appropriate humanity for the use of an elite class. It seems innocuous at first – using stem cells to help women with fertility issues get pregnant or to help develop a healthy fetus in a woman who has damaged DNA, but it isn't something to be taken lightly, or without deep moral concern.

Image: Baby (Wiki Commons).

The same energy that created the atom bomb could have been used for less malevolent purposes, and this is no different. Sure, a bionic arm for a Vietnam vet who has lost his due to an IED explosion is a good thing - but 'improving' upon the human form until we look more like Iron Man than a human being? What is the good in that? For some, it is considered our destiny.

To understand transhumanism, you have to understand the philosophical leanings of some of its earliest members. Julian Huxley, brother of Aldous who authored Brave New World, first used this word: Transhumanism. Huxley was a member of the British Eugenics Society; eugenics being the touchstone of this movement.

Genetically Modified Babies 'Created' in US – The World's First

In a developing story, the Daily Mail is now reporting that the very first (admitted) group of genetically modified babies have been 'created' in the United States. The scientists involved reportedly announced the result on the night of June 27th, stating that 30 babies were born using genetic modification techniques. Furthermore, 2 of the babies tested were found to contain genes from a total of 3 different parents. The experiment also lasted over 3 years or more according to the researchers, which may be one of many.

Creation of Genetically Modified Babies

The 'GM babies' were born into women who had trouble conceiving their own children. In order to 'birth' the babies, extra genes from a female donor were inserted into the women's eggs before they were fertilized. After conception, scientists fingerprinted 2 of the one-year-old children and confirmed that they inherited DNA from 3 adults — one man and 2 women. What this means is that due to inheriting these extra genes through the genetic modification process, they will now be able to pass them along to their offspring. In other words, these genetically modified babies — if allowed to mate with non-GM humans — could potentially alter the very genetic coding of generations to come.

Eternal city warns it will go bust for the first time since it was destroyed by Nero

Ignazio Marino, Rome mayor, said city services like public transport would come to a halt and that he would not be a "Nero"

Matteo Renzi, the Italian prime minister, came under pressure on Thursday as the city of Rome was on the brink of bankruptcy after parliament threw out a bill that would have injected fresh funding.

Ignazio Marino, Rome mayor, said city services like public transport would come to a halt and that he would not be a "Nero" - the Roman emperor who, legend has it, strummed his lyre as the city burnt to the ground.

Marino said that Renzi, a centre-left leader and former mayor of Florence who was only confirmed by parliament this week, had promised to adopt urgent measures to help the Italian capital at a cabinet meeting on Friday.

Markets react to heightened tensions in Ukraine

Evan Lucas ^{g+}, Melbourne
2 days ago

Markets have a lot to digest this morning; a geopolitical crisis in Ukraine, China's PMI index beating expectations (which was a surprise) and the start of central bank week.

Huguen/AFP/GettyImages

However, the biggest talking point is the developments out of Crimea.

The Ukrainian situation is a tinder box in the making; the geopolitical crisis from the Kiev revolution has escalated even further overnight, with the one-day old head of the Ukrainian navy defecting to the pro-Russian self-elected Prime Minister of Crimea. Kiev has reacted by charging the Admiral with treason. There are also reports that Russian troops are surrounding Ukrainian army bases in the region as the Sevastopol Bay sees Russian warships entering the mouth of the port and passing freely into the Russian navy base.

The market to watch is Brent, which has spiked each time more details of the situation emerge. The price of oil has risen a full dollar over the weekend, and it will be interesting to see how the markets behave once Asia sits down to digest the developments from the weekend.

Other markets to watch can be reviewed through history. The possible response to the Ukrainian developments are hard to quantify currently; however during the five-day

Could Israel Really Be the Next Energy Superpower?

By Tyler Crowe | More Articles

The promise of potential always sets our imaginations wild: People who buy lottery tickets picture the things they would buy before they've even won the prize; investors in high-flying tech stocks think of their next great move before the ones they've made have generated a return.

We're all guilty of this, and it looks as though Israel is getting caught up in the hype of its own energy boom as well. In a recent article in Commentary, the author explains how Israel is on the verge of being the next great superpower in energy. When you look deeper into the details, though, this looks more like the dreams of potential than what might actually come to pass. Let's look at these ambitious claims and why they probably won't come to be.

The next Saudi Arabia?

For decades, almost all of Israel's energy — coal and oil — has been imported, which is a difficult situation to be in, considering that Israel doesn't exactly see eye to eye with many of its neighbors in the Middle East and North Africa, which also happen to be some of the world's largest oil exporters.

In the same week that the Israel Defense Forces (IDF) intercepted a Gaza-bound shipment of Syrian missiles from Iran, President Barack Obama is asking Congress to reduce U.S. funding for Israel's missile defense programs by $200 million, according to the Washington Free Beacon.

In a press statement reacting to the news, Republican Jewish Coalition executive director Matt Brooks said: "Today, the Israelis captured a ship carrying missiles from Iran destined for Gaza and earlier this week a rocket fired from Gaza fell in the Ashkelon region of Israel. The threats to Israel are real, constant, and serious. This is clearly not the time to step
