اكرر اننا لا نحدد مواعيد بل فقط نشجع بعضنا بعضا بقرب مجيء المسيح

وأيضاً أوضح أنه يوجد نبوات لم نراها بعد حدثت مثل ابن الهلاك وحرب هرمجدون وظهور

الشاهدين وحزقيال 38 وغيره ولا نعرف متى ولكن أشعر انها اقتربت.

ولكن ايضا علامات كثيرة من التي قال عنها الكتاب انها في الزمان الاخير وفي الجيل الأخير

بدأت تحدث بوضوح ويجب أن ننتبه اليها. فلا نعرف هل المسيح سيأتي في سنة ام سبع سنين ام

سبعين سنة أم أكثر فكرر لا احدد مواعيد ولكن نذكر بعضنا باننا نحتاج ان نستعد. والاستعداد

ليس فقط قبل مجيء المسيح بل ايضا قبل الظلمة التي ستسبق مجيؤه ليكون عندنا زيت في

مصابيحنا يكفي ان نعبر هذه الظلمة وتكون مصابيحنا مضيئة وقت مجيؤه. بمعنى نحتاج من

الان ان نستعد بقوة بأيمان عامل وبتنقية القلب وان نشمر بالخدمة أي نجمع زيت في مصابيحنا

لان الظلمة والضيقة اقتربت جدا ومن لن يستعد لها بزيت كافي من الان لن يجد زيت في الضيقة
لان وقتها تجميع زيت سيكون صعب جدا بل أستطيع ان أقول من مثل العذارى انه لن يكون هناك
زيت الا ما جمعته سابقا. فأكرر لا نحدد المواعيد ولكن أفضل ان اقول لنفسي ولكم استعدوا الان
لأنه اقترب فنكون مستعدين سواء جاء او نحن ان سلمنا وديعتنا عن أنى لا اقول انه اقترب لكيلا
يقال عني كاذب وانشر اشاعات ولكنه يأتي بسرعة بغته.

دعنا نتخيل هل يوجد أحد من الذين رحلوا الي السماء ندم انه استعد لمجيء المسيح ولكن
المسيح لم يأتي ولكنه رحل مستعد؟

نحن اعضاء في الكنيسة عروس المسيح فهل أحد يغضب من الذي يقول للعروس استعدي لأنه
قد يأتي الان حتى لو اتى العريس متأخر؟

يَمُوتُ بِذَنْبِهِ، أَمَّا دَمُهُ فَمِنْ يَدِكَ أَطْلُبُهُ.

9 وَإِنْ حَذَّرْتُ الشَّرِيرَ مِنْ طَرِيقِهِ لِيَرْجِعَ عَنْهُ، وَلَمْ يَرْجِعْ عَنْ طَرِيقِهِ، فَهُوَ يَمُوتُ بِذَنْبِهِ. أَمَّا أَنْتَ فَقَدْ

Two fireballs shot through the sky over the Maritimes roughly 24 hours apart in an event that astronomy experts call a "cosmic coincidence."

Witnesses in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick report seeing a fireball shortly after 5 a.m. Wednesday morning.

A mysterious bright light also shot over the Maritimes early Tuesday morning, with some residents in eastern Quebec also seeing a bright light around the same time.

Update, 20 March 2014: Erigone is holding on to its secrets. Cloudy skies across New York state blocked out the view of the star Regulus during last night's occultation by the asteroid, preventing us from teasing out more details about it. But IOTA says plenty more interesting occultations are on the horizon that will be easy to see with small telescopes.

The people of New York City may be used to feeling at the centre of the world – and this week their city is at the nucleus of the latest asteroid hunt.

New Yorkers don't need to panic: the 72-kilometre-wide asteroid Erigone isn't going to smash into the city. Instead, it is scheduled to eclipse Regulus – the brightest star in the constellation Leo – as seen from the Big Apple, plus a large part of upstate New York and parts of New Jersey, Connecticut, Ontario and Bermuda.

Brilliant Fireball Over Canada Sparks Meteorite Hunt (Video)

Scientists are rushing to the site of a possible meteorite impact in Canada's southwestern Ontario after a bright fireball lit up the skies over that region Tuesday night (March 18).

The basketball-sized fireball was spotted at 10:24 p.m. local time in seven all-sky cameras operated by Western University's Southern Ontario Meteor Network, according to meteor scientist Peter Brown of Canada's Western University in London, Ont. Dead fish found on shores of recreational lake near Tbilisi

TBILISI, DFWatch—A large number of dead fish has been discovered on the shores of Kumisi Lake.

Specialists at the National Food Agency claim the fish died due to a lack of water and oxygen.

Kumisi Lake is a popular place for anglers and lies about 20 km south of Tbilisi.

Specialists studied the situation in the lake and found that the fish did not die due to disease or poisoning, but lack of oxygen, the National Food Agency explained to Interpressnews.

According to Wikipedia, oxygen depletion is the most common cause of mass fish die-off. The level of oxygen dissolved in the water fluctuates over the course of a day due to factors such as weather, temperature, sunlight and the amount of living and dead plant and animal matter in the water.

The agency says an entrepreneur built a fish farm on the lake and managed to sell his fish before it died. The fish which was found dead was collected and buried with the attendance of agency representatives.

National agency representatives assure that the dead fish won't make it to shops and markets, but it is not excluded that the local population may sell the dead fish.

Avian botulism strikes down thousands of birds

The Dollar And Euro Are Doomed. These 3 Currencies Will Take Over.

A suspected outbreak of avian botulism is killing thousands of birds in Waikato.

The disease, which causes paralysis in birds, has been recorded in Matamata-Piako District, Waipa District and Waikato District this summer.

There have also unconfirmed reports of bird deaths in the Hauraki District.

About 3000 birds are estimated to have died from the disease in the Waikato region, Fish & Game gamebird manager David Klee said. Along with game ducks, the bacteria was killing black swans, grey teals and the New Zealand dabchick, among others, he said. "It's pretty indiscriminate, anything that sits on those ponds, seems to be affected." Although blood samples had not been taken, Mr Klee said the bird deaths all showed "clinical symptoms" of botulism.

Affected birds were showing signs of paralysis, they were flightless and, in the critical stage, had "lolling" and "drooping" heads.

Most outbreaks were occurring at municipal wastewater treatment plants - and in particular older, less used, oxidation ponds.

"The problem is a lot of these ponds no longer have working aerators, they're filling up with sludge at a great rate.

"Basically in summer, when these ponds get drawn down, you've got the perfect microclimate for botulism to occur."

The drought-like weather may have also played a part in the outbreaks, Mr Klee said. "In years like this, when we've got long dry spells of weather it's more likely to occur."

Te Awamutu farmer Carl Webber has had to pick up dozens of dead birds from his paddocks, which surround the Te Awamutu wastewater treatment plant, this summer.

He said outbreaks happened every year but this year had been a bad one.

"It hasn't been big, big numbers this year, but it has been consistent. The whole summer birds have been dying."

He said up to 20 or 30 carcasses could be seen floating in the pond at any one time. "The [Waipa] council has to be more proactive," he said.

Swett said the majority of his 25 honeybee hives are now full of dead bees.

"I have dead bees, and I still have combed honey here and the bees are just basically starved to death," said Swett.

Some of Squaw Creek Honey is produced near Swett's Ames house. Out of a total of six hives there, only one is thriving.

The strong wave of drought in Casanare has caused for four months death by dehydration of about 20,000 animals, mainly capybaras, deer, foxes, fish, turtles, reptiles and cattle.

The impact has been so strong that the Government of that department is considering Friday whether to declare an environmental emergency, especially in the town of Peace Ariporo, the third largest in Casanare. But for this they need legal arguments being collected.

Doing so would mean that the medium-term works as drilling deep wells with pumps would provide water.

But the problem is not lack of enough wells but a forest reserve, as explained to Semana.com Adriana Soto, former deputy environment minister and expert on climate change adaptation.

"There will be more droughts and extreme rainfall. The regions have been better natural hedges (such as forests, jungles, etc.) can better withstand these impacts because they help regulate water and soil," he said.

Soto specified that if there is a well maintained trees and forest area, rainwater does not accumulate in the wells and increasingly severe droughts are generated.

"We're betting on the wrong thing because ranching and farming activities in a clean field think of trees as productive but this country has to realize that deforestation is against his own productivity," he said.

The apocalypse has a new date: 2048.

That's when the world's oceans will be empty of fish, predicts an international team of ecologists and economists. The cause: the disappearance of species due to overfishing, pollution, habitat loss, and climate change.

The study by Boris Worm, PhD, of Dalhousie University in Halifax, Nova Scotia, -- with colleagues in the U.K., U.S., Sweden, and Panama -- was an effort to understand what this loss of ocean species might mean to the world.

Authorities warn Hekla Volcano might erupt soon

Posted on March 25, 2014

March 2014 – ICELAND – The magma chamber under mount Hekla is almost full now, more than last time when she erupted says Páll Einarsson, professor in geophysics at the University of Iceland. Hekla is the most active volcano in Iceland and usually erupts with very short notice. Hekla last erupted in the year 2000, just 79 minutes after the first quake. The time has always been shorter than that, but Hekla has erupted over 20 times in the last 1000 years. The last large eruption in Hekla volcano was in 1947. The volcano is monitored closely, now as before, but due to her short notice before eruption, travelers are encouraged not to walk on or around Hekla while she is in this state. Hekla is a stratovolcano in the south of Iceland with a height of 1,491 meters (4,892 ft). Hekla is one of Iceland's most active volcanoes; over 20 eruptions have occurred in and around the volcano since 874. During the Middle Ages, Europeans called the volcano the "Gateway to Hell." Hekla is part of a volcanic ridge, 40 kilometers (25 mi) long. The most active part of this ridge, a fissure about 5.5 km (3.4 mi) long named Heklugjá, is considered to be the volcano Hekla proper. Hekla looks rather like an overturned boat, with its keel being a series of craters, two of which are generally the most active.

Iceland's Hekla Volcano Could Blow Soon, Claims Scientist

Hekla volcano, one of Iceland's most active volcanoes, could be close to erupting, a University of Iceland geoscientist claims.

The most prominent sign of an impending eruption is bulging ground on the northern side of the volcano. This surface swelling indicates magma (molten rock) is rising under the volcano, pushing up the ground as it fills fractures and pipes beneath Hekla. According to GPS monitoring of the expanding surface, there is now more magma underneath Hekla than before the volcano's last eruption in 2000, University of Iceland geophysicist Páll Einarsson said in a report published in the Icelandic newspaper Morgunblaðið yesterday (March 17). Hekla volcano "could erupt soon," Einarsson said.

LUIS ANDRES HENAO

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — More than 300 earthquakes have shaken Chile's far-northern coast the past week, keeping people on edge as scientists say there is no way to tell if the unusual string of tremors is a harbinger of an impending disaster.

The unnerving activity began with a strong magnitude-6.7 quake on March 16 that caused more than 100,000 people to briefly evacuate low-lying areas, although no tsunami materialized and there was little physical damage from the shaking.

But the land has not settled down. More than a dozen perceptible quakes were felt in the city of Iquique just on Monday.

"The situation is out of the ordinary. There's a mix of a string of tremors and their aftershocks that make things more complex to evaluate," Mario Pardo, deputy head of the Universidad de Chile seismology center, told the local newspaper La Tercera. "We can't rule out a larger quake."

Chile is one of the world's most earthquake-prone countries. A magnitude-8.8 quake and ensuing tsunami in central Chile in 2010 killed more than 500 people, destroyed 220,000 homes, and washed away docks, riverfronts and seaside resorts.

The strongest earthquake ever recorded on Earth also happened in Chile — a magnitude-9.5 tremor in 1960 that killed more than 5,000 people.

Defiant Putin Blasts West as Hypocrites ...

In a defiant speech to lawmakers today, Russian President Vladimir Putin made it clear he has no intention to back down from plans to annex Crimea, despite warnings from President Obama that doing so would incur further U.S. sanctions.

Putin outlined the long historic ties between Crimea and Russia. He said that Russia had been "robbed in broad daylight" when Crimea remained part of Ukraine after the collapse of the Soviet Union and that Crimea had been given away "like a sack of potatoes."

Japan imposes sanctions against Russia over Crimea independence

TOKYO – Japan has announced a set of sanctions against Russia for its recognition of Crimea as an independent state.

Foreign Minister Fumio Kishida said in a statement that Japan does not recognize the outcome of Crimea's referendum to split from Ukraine, saying it violates the Ukrainian constitution.

Japan's sanctions involve suspension of talks on relaxing visa requirements between Japan and Russia as well as planned talks on investment, space and military.

The moves are seen as modest compared to sanctions by the U.S. and European Union, which have frozen the assets of individuals linked to the unrest in Crimea or who support the region's vote to secede from Ukraine.

Moscow has imposed sanctions on Canada in response to sanctions that Ottawa earlier introduced against some Russian officials in connection with the situation in Ukraine, the Russian Foreign Ministry has said.

"This step comes in response to unacceptable actions by the Canadian side which seriously hurt bilateral relations," the Ministry's spokesman, Aleksandr Lukashevich, said.

The sanctions were slapped on 13 high-ranking Canadian officials, lawmakers and public activists.

Russia, however, remains open for constructive and honest cooperation with Canada, which was notable for its pragmatism and a large area of mutual interests, particularly regarding Arctic region issues, Lukashevich said.

"But we need this cooperation as much as Ottawa does. That said, we make no secret that we will react accordingly to unfriendly moves – no matter what motives they are explained by. We hope that Canadian officials and politicians will draw adequate conclusions," the diplomat added.

China demands clear explanation from US over spying

Beijing has demanded a clear explanation from Washington over reports of espionage by the US National Security Agency (NSA) on Chinese institutions.

Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesman, Hong Lei, said on Monday that Beijing is gravely concerned about the claims and demands that any such spying be stopped.

"China has already lodged many complaints with the United States about reports of its espionage activities," the Chinese official added.

Russian ships, bombers in Latin America worry US officials

A number of US lawmakers and Pentagon officials have raised concerns over Russia's plans for sending navy ships and long-range bombers to Latin America for the first time in years.

According to The Hill, Moscow is planning bases in countries in the region like Cuba, Venezuela, and Nicaragua and Russian President Vladimir Putin's national security team met last week to discuss strengthening military ties with the region.

The Dollar And Euro Are Doomed. These 3 Currencies Will Take Over.

WASHINGTON – As the world remains riveted on Moscow's annexation of the Crimean Peninsula, Russian President Vladimir Putin is shifting gears to Latin America.

As first outlined by Russian Defense Minister Sergei Shoigu last February, Putin now plans to keep the United States off-balance as Moscow sets up actual military bases and massive arms sales in the Latin American region.

Moscow's plan follows a recent announcement by Iran to have its warships patrol in waters off the U.S. coast.

Russia and Iran have stated their increased presence is also in response to U.S. military deployments near their countries, including the eastward expansion of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization up to Russia's borders.

The establishment of permanent Russian bases and a major Russian presence in the Western Hemisphere will challenge U.S. policies and threatens to diminish Washington's influence in the region. At the same time, it will give Moscow a basis to stage offensive weapons in the Western Hemisphere, placing another formidable challenge to U.S. homeland defenses from potential missile threats.

You'll never guess who's likely to go bankrupt next in America.

WASHINGTON – As the world focuses on the imminent Russian annexation of Ukraine's predominantly ethnic-Russian-populated Crimean Peninsula, Moscow has flexed its military muscle with jet fighter and helicopter flights over Georgia, a country with which Russia went to war in 2008.

efficiently.

The outcome of the five-day war resulted in Georgia's two breakaway provinces of Abkhazia and South Ossetia ultimately being annexed by Russia and declared by Moscow to be independent countries. The two provinces still have a major concentration of Russian troops, tanks and ground-to air missiles.

Moscow's show of force over Georgia is to deflate any notion it still has of joining the West's North Atlantic Treaty Organization. NATO has had an eastward policy that Russian President Vladimir Putin finds particularly threatening to Moscow's sphere of influence.

Evangelist Franklin Graham is praising Russian President Vladimir Putin for his aggressive crackdown on homosexuality, saying his record on protecting children from gay "propaganda" is better than President Obama's "shameful" embrace of gay rights.

Graham, who now heads the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association started by his famous father, praises Putin in the March issue of the group's Decision magazine for signing a bill that imposes fines for adults who promote "propaganda of nontraditional sexual relations to minors."

The Russian law came under heavy criticism from gay rights activists, and from Obama, ahead of the Winter Olympics in Sochi, Russia. In response, Obama included openly gay athletes as part of the official U.S. delegation to Sochi.

"In my opinion, Putin is right on these issues," Graham writes. "Obviously, he may be wrong about many things, but he has taken a stand to protect his nation's children from the damaging effects of any gay and lesbian agenda."

Washington: Iran is building a nonworking mock-up of an American nuclear-powered aircraft carrier that US officials say may be intended to be blown up for propaganda value.

Intelligence analysts studying satellite photos of Iranian military installations first noticed the vessel rising from the Gachin shipyard, near Bandar Abbas on the Persian Gulf, last summer. The ship has the same distinctive shape and style of the Navy's Nimitz-class carriers, as well as the USS Nimitz's No. 68 neatly painted in white near the bow. Mock aircraft can be seen on the flight deck.

Some members of the Knesset question whether the allocation has to do with progress between Iran and six Western nations and an agreement reached last November. (Reuters) - Israel's defense minister has accused the United States of projecting weakness internationally and said Israel could not rely on its main ally to take the lead in confronting Iran over its nuclear program.

Moshe Yaalon, whose remarks were reported in the Haaretz daily on Tuesday, caused friction with the United States only two months ago when he described Secretary of State John Kerry's quest for Israeli-Palestinian peace as messianic and obsessive.

His latest comments, confirmed by an Israeli official who was present at lecture Yaalon delivered at Tel Aviv University on Monday, displayed deep disappointment with U.S.

Nigeria President Goodluck Jonathan (World Watch Monitor)

For five years, bombs and bullets from Nigeria's Islamist group Boko Haram have ripped through churches and their members, raising concerns over the security of Christians in majority Muslim regions of the country.

But as similar attacks ignite violent reprisals by pro-Christian militias in the Central African Republic, Christian leaders in Nigeria continue to insist on a path of dialogue and nonviolence.

The clerics have also pressed President Goodluck Jonathan to use the state security services against the militants.

These Christian leaders want Jonathan to negotiate with Boko Haram leadership and end the campaign of terror.

Recently, militants have slaughtered both Christians and Muslims in the states of Borno, Adamawa and Yobe.

"We are living in perpetual fear and tension here in Maiduguri," said the Rev. John Bakeni, secretary of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Maiduguri in Borno.

Gunmen Kill 6 in Attack on Kenyan Church

Gunmen shouting in a foreign language killed six worshippers in a church near the coastal city of Mombasa on Sunday, an attack of the kind that Islamist militants have been carrying out in retaliation for Kenya's intervention in neighboring Somalia.

Witnesses said the attackers burst in through the church's back door before shouting out and opening fire on the congregation.

"Both carried big guns and began shooting all over the place. I fell to the ground and could hear screams," said Lilian Omondi, who was leading a prayer meeting at the time.

Blood-spattered Bibles and overturned plastic chairs and bullet casings lay strewn across the floor.

The attackers tried to raid a second church nearby but fled when armed police on patrol in the area appeared. A top Interior Ministry official later said they had escaped, and there was no immediate claim of responsibility.

The Somali Islamist militant group al-Shabab and its local sympathizers have carried out similar attacks in Kenya, some of them on churches, in revenge for the Kenyan army's intervention against al-Shabab in Somalia.

The Kenyan coast's large Muslim minority, many of whom feel marginalized by the predominantly Christian government, have been a fertile recruitment ground for Islamist militant networks.

Breaking up those networks has become a priority for the Nairobi government, but moderate clerics say its heavy-handed tactics have fueled resentment among Muslim youths.

Why This 'Drunk Jesus' T-Shirt Should Make You Mad at the Devil

Urban Outfitters' 'Jesus, I'm Drunk' T-shirt is making people mad. But are we directing our anger at the wrong enemy?

It's clear that antichrist spirits are growing bolder. Look no further than the endless stream of battles in the culture wars. Christian or not, Moral America is pushing back the onslaught of gay marriage and abortion even while our government seems to be working overtime to squash religious liberties.

I wrote some weeks ago about a pro-choice campaign where our Lord and Savior referred to Himself as "Jesus F-ing Christ." Now Urban Outfitters seems to think it's groovy to print T-shirts showing an inebriated Emmanuel. That's right, the clothing retailer is proudly displaying a new design called "The Drunk Jesus." It debuted just in time for St. Patrick's Day.

The T-shirt, which is green with white lettering that says "Jesus, I'm Drunk" and dons an image of Christ holding a mug of sudsy beer, sells for $24. The ploy takes merchandising the gospel to a whole new level. On its website, Urban Outfitters uses this marketing line: "Throw some back with the holy man himself in this epic tee!"

A parent is accusing a North Carolina public school of impeding her child's First Amendment rights by purportedly preventing the 8-year-old from writing about Jesus.

Heather Watts told WECT-TV that her daughter Ryleigh, a second-grade student at Cerro Gordo Elementary School in Cerro Gordo, N.C., submitted an assignment that described Jesus as her hero, but that her teacher rejected it.

Watts said the educator asked Ryleigh if she could write about something different — and the frustrated mother dubbed the treatment of the situation a threat to her daughter's free-speech rights.

"I think she should have freedom to write about what she wants to write about," the mother told the outlet. "If she wants to write about Jesus, she should write about Jesus."

A Ten Commandments display erected in 2012 on the grounds of the state capitol building of Oklahoma City, Okla.

March 17, 2014 | 4:35 pm

Followers of Wicca are suing a New Mexico city for having a Ten Commandments display on their government property.

A court recently heard the suit of Jane Felix and B.N. Coone against the city of Bloomfield in the United States District Court for the District of New Mexico.

Felix and Coone are being represented by the state chapter of the ACLU, and call the display a "violation of civil rights."

"The placement of the city's Ten Commandments monument by defendants amounts to their endorsement of a particular religion in violation of the Establishment Clause of the First Amendment to the United States Constitution," reads the suit in part.

"Because the Ten Commandments monument is displayed at such a prominent location, Plaintiffs are brought into direct and unwelcome personal contact with it or plaintiffs must alter their behavior to avoid contact with the monument."

Ryan Lane, city attorney for Bloomfield, told The Christian Post about the background of the Ten Commandments display.

"The Ten Commandments historical monument was erected on the city of Bloomfield City Hall lawn on July 4, 2011, by a group of private citizens," said Lane.

Nigel Farage says Ukip would strip Christian weddings of legal status

6:11PM GMT 18 Mar 2014

Nigel Farage, the Ukip leader, has said that the traditional Christian wedding ceremony should be stripped of its legal status.

Mr Farage suggested that couples who want to wed in church should have to undertake two ceremonies, one recognised by the state and one a religious ceremony.

He also said he would not abolish same-sex marriage, despite having campaigned forcefully against the bill before it came into law.

His call for French-style reforms of the marriage system came after similar proposals by Simon Hughes, the Liberal Democrat justice minister.

In an interview with PinkNews Mr Farage urged gay, lesbian and transgender people to join his party.

Wisconsin Governor Scott Walker

BY MICHAEL GRYBOSKI, CHRISTIAN POST REPORTER

March 10, 2014 | 9:32 am

A Wisconsin-based atheist organization has demanded that that Governor Scott Walker remove a posting on the social media website Twitter that is religious in nature.

The Freedom From Religion Foundation stated Tuesday that they took exception to Walker's official account, including a tweet posted Sunday that simply read, "Philippians 4:13."

As rendered by the New King James Version, Philippians 4:13 states, "I can do all things through Christ who strengthens me."

Based in Madison, FFRF sent a letter to the Wisconsin governor on Tuesday arguing that the tweet was a "misuse of gubernatorial and state of Wisconsin imprimatur."

Signed by FFRF co-presidents Annie Laurie Gaylor and Dan Barker, the letter expressed "dismay" over the tweet, which was also posted on Facebook.

"This braggadocio verse coming from a public official is rather disturbing," wrote Gaylor and Barker to Walker.

British Courts to Adopt Sharia Law

British legal system issues guidelines for solicitors on drawing up 'Sharia compliant' wills, reveals the Telegraph.

Islamic law is to be effectively enshrined in the British legal system for the first time under guidelines for solicitors on drawing up "Sharia compliant" wills, reports the Telegraph.

The "ground-breaking guidance" by The Law Society will allow solicitors able to write Islamic wills that deny women an equal share of inheritances and exclude non-Muslims altogether.

The documents, which would be recognized by Britain's courts, will also bar children born out of wedlock – and even those who have been adopted – from being counted as legitimate heirs.

Anyone married in a church, or in a civil ceremony, could be excluded from inheritance under Sharia principles, which recognize only Muslim weddings for inheritance purposes.

Nicholas Fluck, president of The Law Society, told the Telegraph the guidelines would promote "good practice" in applying Islamic principles in the British legal system.

Some lawyers, however, described the instructions as "astonishing", and Baroness Cox, who leads a Parliamentary campaign to protect women from religiously sanctioned discrimination, said it was a "deeply disturbing" development and pledged to raise the matter with ministers.

"This violates everything that we stand for," she said. "It would make the Suffragettes turn in their graves."

Vladimir Putin urged religious leaders meeting here to counter what he said were efforts to set Christians and Muslims against each other, warning that a potential clash of civilizations could bring disaster.

The representative of the Russian Orthodox Church has told Russian Prime Minister Vladimir Putin this week of the urgent situation Christians are facing around the world in persecution hot spots, and has asked him to use his power to aid their situations.

RT online reported that Metropolitan Hilarion, foreign relation chief of the Russian Orthodox Church presented evidence and statistics that stated, "Every five minutes one Christian was dying for his or her faith in some part of the world."

Christians face persecution in many nations; from church demolition in Afghanistan and bombings of churches in Iraq, to the violence against Christians taking place in rebellious towns in Syria.

After delivering the facts, Metropolitan Hilarion asked Putin to make protection and defense of Christianity around the globe a major part of his foreign policy.

And, as reported by Interfax, Putin replied, "You needn't have any doubt that that's the way it will be," assuring Hilarion that Russian foreign policy would defend Christians from persecution abroad.

LOS ANGELES — As hundreds of gay couples in Michigan flocked to clerks' offices on Saturday — only to have a federal appeals court again halt same-sex marriages in the state hours later — Vice President Joseph R. Biden Jr. made a forceful case for gay rights, both in the United States and worldwide.

"The single most basic of all human rights is the right to decide who you love," Mr. Biden said, adding that Americans in 20 years would look back with dismay at current discrimination against gays and lesbians in some states.

"It's been a long struggle, and recently there's been some real progress, but there's so much left to do," he said.

Mr. Biden has hinted that he may run for president again in 2016. And speaking to an annual gathering of the Human Rights Campaign, an organization that works for gay, lesbian and transgender rights, Mr. Biden sought to underscore his own bona fides as a champion of gay men and lesbians, who make up an important donor base within the Lawmakers in Ethiopia are expected to pass into law a bill that would make same-sex acts a non-pardonable offense.

Other anti-gay actions and measures in Ethiopia are inducing a climate of fear and panic among the country's LGBT community.

Ethiopia's Council of Ministers endorsed the bill last week with parliament expected, according to local activists, to vote it into law as early as next week.

The bill aims to curb the president's power to pardon prisoners who committed certain "crimes," including those imprisoned for homosexuality acts. Other offenses included in the list are corruption, human-trafficking, smuggling, rape and terrorism.

Ethiopia's Minister of State Getachew Bedane urged a quick vote.

26 year-old Bereket, an Ethiopian gay rights blogger commented on the move: "The decision to include homosexuality in this bill is simply pure ignorance on the part of the

Kenya's parliament passes bill allowing polygamy

Bill that permits men to marry more than one person without wife's consent prompts furious backlash

Kenya's parliament has passed a bill allowing men to marry as many women as they want, prompting furious female MPs to storm out, reports say.

The bill, which amended existing marriage legislation, was passed late on Thursday to formalise customary law about marrying more than one person.

The proposed bill had initially given a wife the right to veto the husband's choice, but male members of parliament overcame party divisions to push through a text that dropped this clause.

Federal judge imposes first same-sex 'marriage' in one of Mexico's most conservative states

MEXICO CITY, March 21, 2014 (LifeSiteNews.com) – Last Tuesday, two women became the first homosexual couple to get "married" in the city of León, in Guanajuato, one of Mexico's most conservative states and in which same-sex "marriage" is illegal.

The "marriage" followed a lawsuit filed by the two lesbians when they were denied a marriage license in September last year. After suing the state in federal court they were granted an injunction forcing the state to "marry" them.

The lawsuit was based on the Mexican Constitution's first article, which prohibits discrimination for "sexual orientation."

However, in addition to being illegal in Guanajuato, article 156 of the Federal Civil Code lists "incurable impotence" as an impediment to contract legal marriage in the country, a provision that would seemingly invalidate same-sex "marriages" as well.

In an interview with local media before the event, Judge Rito Padilla, who presided at the "marriage," said the federal judge "forced us to celebrate this ceremony."

Padilla had personally refused to "marry" the lesbians last year.

"This show is church for people who don't like church," Our Lady J told HuffPost Gay Voices last week when we spoke about her "Gospel For the Godless." The acclaimed singer-songwriter and classically trained pianist will bring the regularly sold-out show, which she has toured around the world, to New York City's Joe's Pub on Sunday, March 23.

"I call it 'Gospel For the Godless' because I take the medium of gospel music and I take away the dogma and write my own gospel," she added.

Our Lady J has been writing her own gospel for years. Aside from penning and performing her own music, she is a much sought after pianist and has collaborated with Sia, Lady Gaga, Cyndi Lauper, Debbie Harry, Antony of Antony and the Johnsons and Scissor Sisters, among others. As a classical pianist, she has worked with American Ballet Theatre, Alvin Ailey American Dance Theatre, Los Angeles

The Federal Reserve Seems Quite Serious About Tapering – So What Comes Next?

By Michael Snyder, on March 19th, 2014

g+ Share Tweet Pinterest Email ShareThis

Will this be the year when the Fed's quantitative easing program finally ends? For a long time, many analysts were proclaiming that the Fed would never taper. But then it started happening. Then a lot of them started talking about how "the untaper" was right around the corner. That hasn't happened either. It looks like that under Janet Yellen the Fed is quite determined to bring the quantitative easing program to a close by the end of this year. Up until now, the financial markets have been slow to react because there has been a belief that the Fed would reverse course on tapering the moment that the U.S. economy started to slow down again. But even though the U.S. middle class is in horrible shape, and even though there are lots of signs that we are heading into another recession, the Fed has continued tapering.

Of course it is important to note that the Fed is still absolutely flooding the financial system with money even after the announcement of more tapering on Wednesday. When you are talking about $55,000,000,000 a month, you are talking about a massive amount of money. So the Fed is not exactly being hawkish.

But when Yellen told the press that quantitative easing could end completely this fall and that the Fed could actually start raising interest rates about six months after that, it really spooked the markets.

The Dow was down 114 points on Wednesday, and the yield on 10 year U.S. Treasuries shot up to 2.77%. The following is how CNBC described the reaction of the markets on Wednesday...

China, New Zealand Begin Direct Currency Trading

WELLINGTON, New Zealand March 19, 2014 (AP)

China on Wednesday allowed its currency to be directly traded with the New Zealand dollar in another step toward allowing greater international use of the yuan.

New Zealand Prime Minister John Key announced the start of trading during a trip to China.

Previously, a company that needed to trade New Zealand dollars for Chinese yuan in China had to use a third currency, typically the U.S. dollar.

New Zealand allows open trading of its currency. China has strict capital controls which allow it to control the value of the yuan, an important economic and political tool in a developing country where tens of millions of jobs are tied to exporting.

China's government is gradually expanding opportunities for the yuan to be used outside its borders for trade and investment. It has previously allowed only five currencies to be directly traded with the yuan: the U.S. dollar, the Japanese yen, the Australian dollar, the Russian ruble and the Malaysian ringgit.

China is New Zealand's largest export market. New Zealand in 2008 became the first developed nation to sign a free trade agreement with China.

Key said the move will make it easier for New Zealanders to do business in China and will stimulate trade and investment.

Nationwide Home Sales Collapse: There Is No Recovery and This Chart Proves It

Mac Slavo

SHTFplan.com

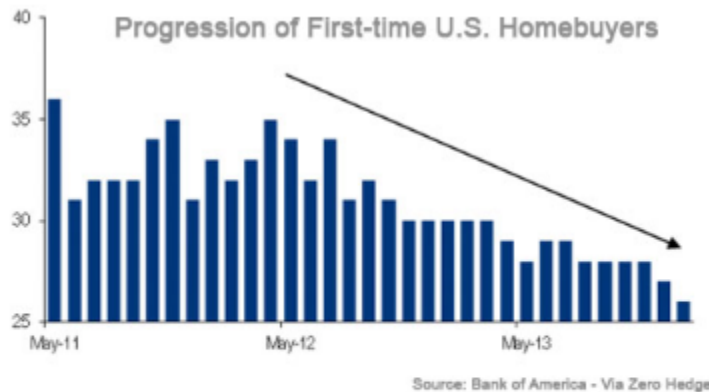

March 20th, 2014

Now may be the best time to buy a home. At least that's what the majority of real estate agents in America will tell you if you ask them how the housing market is doing.

They'll cite various statistics and give you a "feel" for the market from their personal experiences to convince you this is the case. But if you're paying attention, then it should be clear that there is, in fact, no recovery in the housing sector. And any gains we may have seen over the last few years are nothing short of a Federal Reserve fueled mirage, much like the stock market.

The following chart from Bank of America is indicative of some serious fundamental problems, not just with the housing market, but the broader economy as a whole.

If you ask the experts they'll give a host of reasons for why sales are down, as well as prognostications for why the real estate market is about to turn the corner and head back to new highs.

The weather, of course, is always to blame for lackluster sales in homes and consumer products, and that, apparently, is the case once again. But the National Association of Realtors has, for the first time ever, indicated that there is another key challenge facing home buyers.

Incredible Video Shows River Returning to the Desert in Israel After Years of Drought

March 19, 2014 11:09 AM

Trending Now

A truly remarkable and rare occurrence was captured on camera overseas as rainfall sent water gushing down a river for the first time in years.

The river Zin, which drains into the Dead Sea, is about 75 miles long and runs through the Neg-ev Desert, in southern Israel. While it's referred to as a river, usually only the dry bed of the Zin can be seen. Also called the Nahal Zin, the river rarely holds any water due to the arid desert conditions.

But that changed last week, and the transformation was captured in a video uploaded to YouTube on March 14. Heavy rainfall on mountains miles away caused water to run down and – Nature.com

A Switzerland based company called Evolva has developed a synthetic vanilla that is set to be released in 2014. The vanilla is created using a process of genetic engineering called synthetic biology.

Synthetic biology, according to a 2005 European Commission paper is "...the engineering of biology... the synthesis of complex, biologically based (or inspired) systems which display functions that do not exist in nature." Unlike the older science of splicing genes from different species together, synthetic biology is seeking to create whole new organisms that do not exist on earth.

Evolva's synthetic vanilla is created by inserting computer coded DNA into yeast. This new method of genetic engineering is called "natural" by Evolva.
