اكرر اننا لا نحدد مواعيد بل فقط نشجع بعضنا بعضا بقرب مجيء المسيح

وأيضاً أوضح أنه يوجد نبوات لم نراها بعد حدثت مثل ابن الهلاك وحرب هرمجدون وظهور

الشاهدين وحزقيال 38 وغيره ولا نعرف متى ولكن أشعر انها اقتربت.

ولكن ايضا علامات كثيرة من التي قال عنها الكتاب انها في الزمان الاخير وفي الجيل الأخير

بدأت تحدث بوضوح ويجب أن ننتبه اليها. فلا نعرف هل المسيح سيأتي في سنة ام سبع سنين ام

سبعين سنة أم أكثر فكرر لا احدد مواعيد وارفض من يحددون ولكن نذكر بعضنا باننا نحتاج ان

نستعد. والاستعداد ليس فقط قبل مجيء المسيح بل ايضا قبل الظلمة التي ستسبق مجيؤه ليكون

عندنا زيت في مصابيحنا يكفي ان نعبر هذه الظلمة وتكون مصابيحنا مضيئة وقت مجيؤه. بمعنى

نحتاج من الان ان نستعد بقوة بأيمان عامل وبتنقية القلب وان نشمر بالخدمة أي نجمع زيت في

مصايحنا لان الظلمة والضيقه اقتربت جدا ومن لن يستعد لها بزيت كافي من الان لن يجد زيت في الضيقه لان وقتها تجميع زيت سيكون صعب جدا بل أستطيع ان أقول من مثل العذاري انه لن يكون هناك زيت الا ما جمعه سابقا. فأكرر لا نحدد المواعيد ولكن أفضل ان اقول لنفسي ولكم استعدوا الان لأنه اقترب فنكون مستعدين سواء جاء او نحن ان سلمنا وديعتنا عن أنى لا اقول انه اقترب لكيلا يقال عني كاذب وانشر اشاعات ولكنه يأتي بسرعة بغته. لا اعتقد اي أحد ندم لانه كان مستعد ومنتظر مجيء المسيح ولم ياتي المسيح في زمنه ولكنه انتقل وهو مستعد ولكن كثيرين جدا ندموا على عدم الاستعداد عندما انتقلوا

فيجب علينا ان نذكر الكل بالاستعداد والتوبة من الان حتى لو كان سيتأخر فقد نسلم وديعتنا في اي وقت

بعض الاحداث التي قال عنها الرب يسوع

Sun unleashes two huge solar flares. How will they affect us?

The sun underwent two powerful eruptions that could potentially disrupt radio communications on Earth, say scientists.

The sun unleashed two major solar flares early Tuesday (June 10) in amazing back-to-back storms from our nearest star.

The first flare, a powerful X2.2-class solar flare, hit its maximum at about 7:42 a.m. EDT (1142 GMT). The second powerful X1.5-class flare, followed quickly behind, blasting out from the sun at 8:36 a.m. EDT (1236 GMT). Both flares could cause radio communication blackouts on Earth for about an hour, according to an alert from the U.S. Space Weather Prediction Center in Boulder, Colorado. Solar Flares Could Send Shockwaves on Friday the 13th

By Colleen
Curry

Jun 11, 2014 4:34pm

The sun has had three major solar flares on its surface in the past two days that have affected communications on Earth and could send a shockwave through Earth this Friday, according to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

The "solar events" caused brief blackouts in high frequency communications when they struck, twice on Tuesday morning and once this morning, all between the hours of 7 a.m. and 9 a.m. EDT.

Three X-class flares erupted from the left side of the sun; the first two from left occurred June 10, 2014, and the last occurred June 11, 2014. (Goddard/SDO/NASA)

Solar flares are bursts of radiation on the sun's surface. The disturbance to Earth's atmosphere can disrupt GPS and communications signals, according to NASA.

One of the flares created a "coronal mass ejection" that actually could come into contact with Earth on Friday, according to NOAA. The ejection is essentially a huge cloud of plasma that could hit the Earth and cause a shock wave, affecting communications systems. If an ejection were to hit Earth on Friday, scientists expect it would only cause a minor geo-magnetic storm, according to NOAA.

Awakening? seismic unrest reported at Alaska's remote Semisopchnoi Volcano

Posted on June 14, 2014

June 2014 – ALASKA - Another remote volcano in Alaska is showing signs of unrest or possible activity. The Alaska Volcano Observatory (AVO) sent out the following alert: "A swarm of earthquakes at Semisopchnoi volcano that started at 10:00 AKDT (18:00 UTC) on June 9 escalated yesterday, June 12, at approximately 12:00 AKDT (20:00 UTC). The continuation of this anomalous seismic activity through the night prompts AVO to raise the Aviation Color Code to YELLOW and the Volcano Alert Level to ADVISORY. No eruptive activity is currently indicated. AVO is closely monitoring the situation and will issue further updates as conditions change."

"Semisopchnoi volcano is monitored by a 6-station seismic network as well as satellite imagery. Five of the seismic stations on Semisopchnoi are currently operational. The telemetry system for the Semisopchnoi stations, located on Amchitka Island, was just repaired in late May. Semisopchnoi Island is located 65 km (40 mi) northeast of Amchitka and 200 km (130 mi) west of Adak in the remote western Aleutian Islands. The last eruption of Semisopchnoi occurred in 1987." - Volcano Discovery

Five active volcanoes keeping Alaska scientists busy

An advisory alert has been issued for a remote volcano in the western Aleutian Islands after dozens of earthquakes were reported in the area, an early sign of volcanic unrest.

The change means that five volcanoes being monitored in Alaska are now simultaneously active, the most in recent memory, said Matt Haney, a research geophysicist at the Alaska Volcano Observatory.

"We might have had four before, but we haven't had five," Haney said.

A total of 52 volcanoes in Alaska are considered by the observatory to be "historically active." All are monitored daily through satellites, and about 30 are monitored with ground-based seismometers that measure earthquake activity. On Friday, the observatory raised the color code alert level for the Semisopochnoi (pronounced Semi-so-poch-noi) volcano to "yellow," a reflection of heightened unrest.

Haney said there doesn't appear to be a connection between the five, just random chance. The other four volcanoes -- Cleveland and Veniaminof volcanoes are in the "yellow" alert level, and the Pavlof and Shishaldin volcanoes are classified as "orange" -- are among the most active in the state.

But Semisopochnoi is "kind of the oddball," Haney said. It's only erupted twice in recorded history, first in 1873 and then in 1987.

An alert has been issued for Semisopochnoi, a volcano in the Aleutian Islands, after dozens of earthquakes were reported in the area, an early sign of volcanic unrest. Five volcanoes in the Aleutians are now active, the most in recent memory.

After 30 years: Hawaii's Mauna Loa Volcano showing signs of stirring

Posted on June 14, 2014

Geologists warn the sleeping giant known as Mauna Loa may be awakening. Mauna Loa is the largest active volcano on Earth.

June 2014 - HAWAII - After a 30-year repose, Mauna Loa may be slowly stirring to life. While there are no signs of impending eruption, the Hawaiian Volcano Observatory has recorded an increased level of seismic activity on the flanks and summit of Mauna Loa over the past 13 months. Four distinct earthquake swarms — clusters of earthquakes occurring closely in time and location — have occurred since March 2013. Each swarm began with earthquakes northwest of the summit (Moku'āweoweo Crater) at 4 to 15 km (2.5-9 mi) deep, followed by shallow earthquakes at the summit from several days to one month later. These earthquakes have all been less than magnitude-2.2, except for a magnitude-3.5 earthquake on May 9, 2014. The recent swarms have not been associated with the deformation of the ground surface that we would expect from intrusion of significant amounts of magma into shallow levels beneath Mauna Loa. However, ground deformation indicating shallow magma accumulation has been measured during many of the past 30 years, including two episodes of very rapid inflation immediately following the most recent eruption in 1984, and again from 2004-2006. The latter inflation started with a swarm of deep, long-period earthquakes at 45 km (28 mi) under the volcano. Prior to the 1984 eruption, seismicity was elevated for at least three years, with 28 earthquakes greater than magnitude 3, and 2 earthquakes greater than magnitude 4. The magnitude-6.7 earthquake on November 16, 1983, may also have been triggered by the pressurizing magma system of Mauna Loa. Earthquakes prior to the 1984 eruption were typically located northwest of the summit at depths greater than 5 kilometers (3 miles) and on the upper Southwest Rift Zone at depths less than 5 km (3 mi).

Dead fish remain on Samos beach

Thousands of dead fish that washed up on the beach at Karlovasi on the northern Aegean island of Samos last Friday were still there on Monday, despite the smell.

An investigation launched by the Greek coast guard was under way in order to determine whether the fish had been poisoned or killed as a result of illegal fishing practices.

However, local fishermen claimed that the fish were too small to be caught in their nets.

Guanay Cormorant Birds were found dead on shoreline of Iquique

A new episode of animal deaths took place in Iquique. More than a dozen bird species Guanay Cormorant were found in the area of Playa Brava in Iquique.

June

The week just passed, the death of Koi had generated a number of challenges to those responsible in Iquique. Now, in the Playa Brava, were found dead birds of 17 species Guanay Cormorant.

Guanay Cormorant is a seabird that inhabits the coasts of Peru and our country, belongs to the family of the famous "Ducks Yecos" that abound in Iquique. Representatives Kaitieki Conservation Society came to the site after receiving alert people who saw dead birds in the sand.

After verifying the deaths of about 16 cormorants on Playa Brava, Kaitieki reported facts through its platforms on social media, "We went to the place and soon we go was not difficult to find one which was effectively dead, but showed no injury. Touring the place we started meeting with a total of 16 dead birds in different states, and some whole other half eaten by dogs."

"Near the end of the tour we found a live one obviously weak and sick, and unfortunately despite all the care that was provided died overnight," said Conservation Society Kaitieki.

They filed a complaint at the SAG this morning, presenting even a dead bird, to request the autopsy and figure out what could be the cause of the deaths of the cormorants. Made an important addition to the community called, "If you see any live by the beach or dead please do not take it, could tr

More Than 90 Tons of Fish Dead After Storm in Kompong Thom

BY BEN SOKHEAN | JUNE 12, 2014

More than 90 tons of fish died after gale-force winds hit the Tonle Chhmar Fish Conservation Center in Kompong Thom province Wednesday, according to local officials.

The gale started around 2:30 p.m. and lasted for approximately half an hour, said Korn Chanseiha, the Ministry of Agriculture administrator for Stong district.

"Yesterday we had a gale storm and a huge amount of fish died," Mr. Chanseiha said.

He said the fish are believed to have died after water was blown out of the lake as huge gusts of wind enveloped the conservation center.

A local official said that while fish have been killed in similar circumstances before, this is the most extreme example he has ever witnessed.

"The most amount of fish I have witnessed killed was 40 tons, this is over 90," said Khun Bunh, district military police commander.

Local villagers Wednesday attempted to collect the dead fish at the conservation center for selling and eating, Mr. Bunh said. Fishing is usually forbidden at the conservation center.

Illinois lake closed because of fish kill

WILMINGTON, Ill. (AP) - A lake southwest of Chicago has been closed to the public after officials discovered that virtually all of the fish in it did not survive the long, brutal winter.

Site superintendent of Milliken Lake at the Des Plaines State Fish and Wildlife Area near Wilmington spoke to The Daily Journal in Kankakee (<http://bit.ly/1joPUzK>).

He says officials found a nearly "total kill" that was worse than he'd seen since he arrived nearly 30 years ago.

Site Superintendent Jeff Wepprecht says that the public won't be allowed into the popular fishing area until the 20-acre lake is restocked.

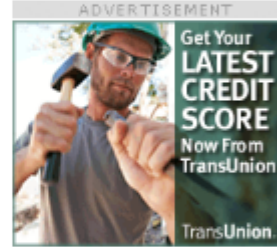

A recording at the agency's office says there will be no fishing or picnicking allowed for the rest of the 2014 season.

Bacteriophages could be a resource for fighting drug-resistant bacterial infections.

For decades, patients behind the Iron Curtain were denied access to some of the best antibiotics developed in the West. To make do, the Soviet Union invested heavily in the use of bacteriophages — viruses that kill bacteria — to treat infections. Phage therapy is still widely used in Russia, Georgia and Poland, but never took off elsewhere. “This is a virus, and people are afraid of

Scientists condemn 'crazy, dangerous' creation of deadly airborne flu virus

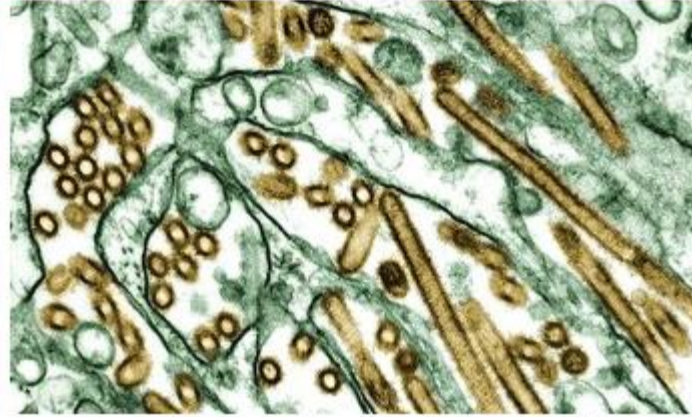

Researchers say recreation of Spanish flu strain highlights risk of pandemic, but critics say work puts global population at risk

Scientists have created a life-threatening virus that closely resembles the 1918 Spanish flu strain that killed an estimated 50m people in an experiment labelled as "crazy" by opponents.

US researchers said the experiments were crucial for understanding the public health risk posed by viruses currently circulating in wild birds, but critics condemned the studies as dangerous and called on funders to stop the work.

Scientists at the University of Wisconsin-Madison used a technique called reverse genetics to build the virus from fragments of wild bird flu strains. They then mutated the virus to make it airborne to spread more easily from one animal to another.

Scientists have suggested avoiding processed red meat [GETTY]

Enjoying a rasher or two of bacon or a couple of slices of ham can raise the risk of dying from heart failure by more than a third.

The stark findings come from a study of more than 37,000 men – but the researchers say the dangers are just as likely to apply to women.

It is the first research to distinguish between the effects of processed meat like bacon, ham, sausage or salami and unprocessed red, non-poultry, meat such as steak.

The unprocessed red meat did not have a big impact on heart failure and death rates.

As many as 100 feared dead, as northern Afghanistan hit by floods

Posted on June 10, 2014

June 2014 – AFGHANISTAN – It is believed that 58 people have died and it is feared that the death toll could reach three figures as a remote part of northern Afghanistan is hit by floods. In addition, thousands more have been left homeless. The flooding is the most recent in a series of deadly flash floods, landslides and avalanches in a part of the country that is almost cut off from the rest. Lt Fazel Rahman, the chief of police in the Guzirga i-Nur district of northeastern Baghlan, said that 54 bodies have been recovered so far including the remains of women and children, but many others are still missing. The Afghanistan Natural Disaster Management Authority has begun shipping out stockpiles of food and other supplies to the affected area, said Mohammad Aslim Sayas, the deputy director of the agency.

Guzirga i-Nur district is located more than 85 miles north of the provincial capital, Puli Khumri. Jawed Basharat, the spokesman for the Baghlan police, said that they were aware of the flooding, but that it would take eight to nine hours for them to reach the area by road. Although people in the north of the country have for the most part been spared the horrors of the war, they have been subjected to several natural disasters. Last month, a landslide triggered by heavy rain buried large sections of a remote northeastern village in Badakhshan which borders China, displacing some 700 families. Authorities have yet to provide an exact figure on the number of dead from the May 2 landslide, and estimates have ranged from 250 to 2,700. Officials say it will be impossible to dig up all the bodies. A landslide in Baghlan in 2012 killed 71 people. After days of digging unearthed only five bodies, authorities decided to halt the recovery effort and turn the area into a memorial for the dead. –Daily Mail

Scientists say it's extremely likely an El Niño will affect the world's weather in 2014

There is a 90 percent chance that a global El Niño will hit in 2014, The Guardian reports. An El Niño starts as a huge pool of warm water swelling in the tropical eastern Pacific Ocean, a phenomenon that triggers weather events around the world. It's not clear what makes the unstable Pacific Ocean-atmosphere system turn into an El Niño, but weaker trade winds that blow to the west are a key component. In India, under El Niño conditions, it's likely that weaker monsoon rains will cause problems for the country's food supply, while Australia will probably see soaring temperatures and droughts. It's not all disastrous, though: The western half of the United States could see the rain that is so desperately needs. More

Seoul (AFP) - North Korean leader Kim Jong-Un has censured his country's weather service for "incorrect" forecasts in a rare public dressing down of a government body in the reclusive nation, which suffers regular natural disasters.

Kim criticised the science used in observations and called for the use of modern equipment in the unusual rebuke, which came during an inspection of the Hydro-meteorological Service, the official Korean Central News Agency (KCNA) reported Tuesday.

US military base within Iranian striking distance, official warns

By Lisa Daftari · Published June 10, 2014 · FoxNews.com

Iranian Revolutionary Guard Corps (IRGC) adviser Mojtaba Zonnour boasted that Tehran's missiles could hit a U.S. military base.

A top Iranian defense official's claim that a U.S. military base in the Indian Ocean is now within missile range served both as a threat to American interests and a revelation that, if true, Tehran has doubled its striking distance.

"In the event of an irrational attack by the U.S., America's military bases will not be safe from our missiles, whether in Bahrain or at Diego Garcia in the Indian Ocean," the senior official, Iranian Revolutionary Guard Corps (IRGC) adviser Mojtaba Zonnour, was quoted as saying to Iran's "Defa Moghadas," or Holy Defense.

London: Conservative Muslim school leaders in Britain's second city, Birmingham, conducted an "organised campaign" to impose faith-based ideology on their pupils, Education Secretary Michael Gove says.

Clashes between Muslim governors and non-Muslim senior staff had led to a "culture of fear and intimidation" in which some head teachers felt forced to leave their jobs, leaving those remaining free to impose a narrow curriculum, the minister said on Monday.

Mr Gove was reporting the findings of two investigations into allegations of an Islamist plot to take over the leadership of state-funded schools in Birmingham with the intention of imposing a religious agenda.

Terror alerts, 9/11-style bombings and murders of British citizens will soon come to London's streets, according to chilling threats from UK citizens fighting alongside Islam's most violent terrorist group operating in Syria and Iraq.

The threat comes from British nationals fighting for the Sunni militant group calling themselves the Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant (ISIL/ISIS) in Syria. According to the Sunday Times, they promise that after they're done there, Britain is next. The message comes from three such fighters, all youngsters in their teens and twenties.

According to the Times, these aren't regular disenchanted youths at all: one is a 20-year-old hacker from Birmingham, who once stole Tony Blair's details and posted them online, later serving time for an unrelated violence charge.

The "black flag of jihad" will fly over Downing Street, Junaid Hussain warned on June 4, spelling out the horrors to come. He's been fighting in Syria for over a year now.

Second Iraq city falls to Al Qaeda-aligned militants

Published June 11, 2014 · Associated Press  1365  423  17

BAGHDAD – Al Qaeda-inspired militants pushed deeper into Iraq's Sunni heartland Wednesday, swiftly conquering Saddam Hussein's hometown of Tikrit as soldiers and security forces abandoned their posts and yielded ground once controlled by U.S. forces.

The advance into former insurgent strongholds that had largely been calm before the Americans withdrew less than three years ago is spreading fear that Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki, struggling to hold onto power after indecisive elections, will be unable to stop the Islamic militants as they press closer to Baghdad.

Sunni Muslim militants fighting to set up a hardline Islamic regime in Iraq posted shocking photos over the weekend showing captured Iraqi government soldiers being loaded by the dozen onto trucks, then gunned down in a mass grave on the side of the road.

The graphic images were taken in the Salahuddin province north of Baghdad, after militants with the Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant seized an Iraqi Army base in the area, reported the Long War Journal, a publication which tracks Islamist militant groups.

A photo essay posted on social media platforms associated with the militant group appeared to document the disturbing events as they played out.

(Warning: some of the images are graphic and may be unsettling to some readers.)

The photos documented dozens of men being loaded onto flatbed trucks then taken to a shallow ditch where it appears that they were summarily executed face down with their hands tied behind their backs.

Al-Qaida Establishes Islamic Caliphate Across Syria, Northern Iraq

THE DAILY CALLER June 11, 2014 3:48 PM

Al-Qaida Establishes Islamic Caliphate Across Syria, Northern Iraq

Al-Qaida has established a new Islamic Caliphate.

The Obama administration's failure to secure a status-of-forces agreement with the government of Iraq, or to take decisive action in Syria to end that civil war, has provided al-Qaida an opportunity to fulfill its dream of creating a new Islamic Caliphate governed under Sharia law — and it is a direct threat to U.S. national security.

On Tuesday, June 10, 2014, just days shy of the two and a half year anniversary of the departure of the last U.S. combat forces from Iraq, news broke that hundreds of al-Qaida-linked terrorists belonging to Islamic State in Iraq and the Levant (ISIS) had taken Iraq's second-largest city, Mosul, and possibly all of the surrounding Nineveh Province. Iraq security forces abandoned their posts, leaving advanced military equipment and weaponry to al-Qaida. As they advanced, 500,000 civilians out of an estimated two million that live in Mosul fled, and al-Qaida now controls the city — a gateway to Iraq's oil rich north.

Iran deployed its Revolutionary Guard to help Iraq battle insurgents from a group inspired by Al-Qaeda, according to a recent report. In the meantime, the US is mulling airstrikes to support the Iraqi government.

On Wednesday, Al-Qaeda affiliate insurgents from the armed group Islamic State in Iraq and the Levant (ISIL or ISIS) conquered former dictator Saddam Hussein's hometown of Tikrit, marking the second major loss for the Iraqi government of Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki. Earlier this week, insurgents captured Mosul, the second-largest city in the country. With jihadists threatening Baghdad and security forces unable resist the Sunni Islamists' assault, Maliki turned to foreign powers for help, getting responses from two unlikely allies, Iran and the US.

Iran's Revolutionary Guard

TEL AVIV – The deployment of Iran's Revolutionary Guard to Iraq came after the Obama administration quietly gave its approval of the Shiite troop movement, according to informed Middle Eastern security officials.

The Obama administration pressed Iraqi Prime Minister Nuri al-Maliki to allow battalions of the Quds Force to aid the Iraqi military in its fight against the Sunni Muslim Islamic State of Iraq and Syria, or ISIS.

The Quds Force is special unit of the Revolutionary Guard responsible for international operations.

Sunni insurgents led by ISIS jihadists captured the northwestern Iraqi town of Tal Afar on Sunday, reports say, as the militants continue their advance on Baghdad. The US says it is relocating some of its embassy staff to other Iraqi cities. Tags Iraq

The militants from the Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant (ISIS/ISIL) overran the town after fighting with security forces, several people in the town told Reuters over the phone.

Iraqi Gen. Mohammed al-Quraishi confirmed to CNN that the city fell to Sunni rebels. Tal Afar is located in the Nineveh province and has a population of about 80,000 people, most of whom are Iraqi Turkmen.

ISIS has also reportedly captured two villages in Diyala province.

Texas Sen. Ted Cruz told a small gathering of pro-Israel American leaders Tuesday that an Israeli strike against Iranian nuclear facilities "could happen in a matter of months."

"In my view, [Iranian Supreme Leader Ali] Khamenei believes there is no credible deterrence from the United States, there's not realistic risk of significant consequence for moving forward with their nuclear development," the Republican told the Spring National Leadership Meeting of the Jewish Institute for National Security & Affairs (JINSA) at the Willard Hotel. "That means, that if they keep going forward, I think if it comes down to it, I have real confidence that the nation of Israel will act to preserve her national security, even if this administration will not act first. Turkey Dries Up the Euphrates

June 11, 2014 • From theTrumpet.com

An impending water shortage threatens millions in the Middle East.

BY CALLUM WOOD

The Syrian civil war has once more taken a dire turn for the worse. Turkey has altered its strategy against its opponents, the forces of Syrian President Bashar Assad. Instead of simply aiding the Syrian rebels, Turkey is now also killing them with dehydration. The problem is, this brutal act threatens the lives of millions of Syrian and Iraqi citizens.

The crisis revolves around the Euphrates River, which quickly became the Euphrates Creek when Turkey completely cut off the water flow upstream of Syria, reported Al Akhbar on May 30. The Euphrates originates in Turkey and passes through the Atatürk Dam before flowing into Syria and Iraq. By cutting off the flow and directing it into the reservoir, Turkey has lowered water levels downstream.

Water levels in Lake Assad, Syria's largest body of water, have dropped by 20 feet since Turkey shut off the water supply. The Euphrates hydrates large parts of Syria.

The Obama Administration's Slow-Motion Surrender to Jihad

Is the Obama administration in a pattern of capitulating to jihadis? (ACLJ)

If there's one political silver lining for the Obama administration in the ongoing firestorm over handing the Taliban a substantial victory to retrieve a probable American deserter, it's that the pundit class has been all but ignoring the supreme foolishness of administration policy in Palestine. Is the State Department actually justifying its embrace of the new Palestinian "unity government" (that includes Hamas, a designated foreign terrorist organization) by claiming that the PA is really run by "technocrats?"

Why, yes it is.

Hamas certainly has a long history of complying with the rule of law, supporting an independent civil service, and overall policy wonkery, doesn't it? What's next, a Palestinian technocrat blog on Vox? Complete with charts?

Never fear, even if these technocrats have Hamas bosses, the State Department assures us that its eyes are wide open, and it will judge the new government by its "actions."

Will it really? After all, Hamas's record is already decades long, and it includes launching hundreds of rockets at Israeli civilians, including children. Is the State Department wiping away a generation of actions in the hopes that Hamas has turned over a new leaf?

Christian Kenyans specifically targeted for execution

by KURT NIMMO | INFOWARS.COM | JUNE 16, 2014

Terrorists from al-Shabaab, the Somali al-Qaeda affiliate, attacked the small Kenyan coastal town of Mpeketoni near the tourist center of Lamu on Sunday and killed 48 people, according to officials in the east African nation.

Men watching the World Cup at a hotel were systematically executed while women were forced to watch, according to Kenya police commander David Kimaiyo. The terrorists said the execution was in response to the activity of Kenyan troops in Somalia. Kenya has sent troops there to counter al-Shabaab kidnappings and attacks.

Like Nairobi's Westgate Mall attack last year, the Mpeketoni attackers reportedly gave life-or-death religious tests.

It is said Shakir Wahiyb, described as an enforcer for the Islamic State of Iraq and al-Sham (ISIS), has executed people who failed his "Quranic quiz" in Iraq. ISIS has captured large areas of northern Iraq in the past week and has posted videos of mass executions.

Virginia Students Defy ACLU's Demand to Remove Christian Song from Graduation

EWING, Va. – Members of the senior class at a high school in Virginia defied the American Civil Liberties Union's (ACLU) demand to remove a Christian song from their graduation ceremony this past Friday, which would have ended a 70-plus year tradition at the school.

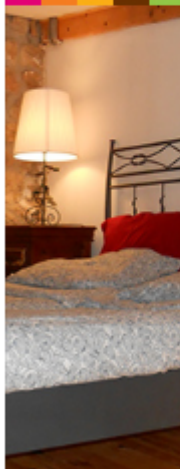

Students at Thomas Walker High School in Ewing lined up after receiving their diplomas, linked arms and began to sing God Be with You Til We Meet Again, a song that has been sung during graduation since the school was founded in 1940. Members of the audience began to sing along, and some clapped in support of the student's stand for their faith.

The ACLU had sent an email to officials at the school last month, stating that students should not be allowed to sing the song at the ceremony because of its religious content.

"Based on the information we have been given, school officials, including teachers and administrators, are actively promoting religious practices during school hours on school grounds as part of official school activities. I write to ask that immediately address this situation," wrote ACLU attorney Rebecca Glenberg on behalf of an unidentified parent whose child graduates this year.

"They are taught the lyrics [of the hymn] and practice them at school, and are expected to have the hymn memorized by graduation," she said. "This violates the First Amendment."

Glenberg also took issue with a Ten Commandments plaque displayed in the halls of the high school, which she contended was unconstitutional and violated Supreme Court precedent.

Officials at Thomas Walker High School consequently removed the plaque and eliminated God Be with You Til We Meet Again from the ceremony, but students decided to revolt.

According to local television station WJHL, a crowd of nearly 100 supporters gathered outside of the school on Wednesday, holding signs and joining together to sing the song. They also spoke of their desire to see the Ten Commandments restored to the walls of the high school.

"They're eliminating Jesus," George Sowels of Souls Harbor Pentecostal Church, who led the event, told reporters. "The ACLU, which I call the 'Anti-Christian Liberal Union,' is trying to make the citizens take Jesus out of the school, out of the system."

Christian Group Loses Recognition at College for Requiring Leaders to be Christian

BRUNSWICK, Maine – A Christian group at a liberal arts college in Maine has lost its recognition for refusing to follow the school's 'anti-discrimination' policy by requiring group leaders to be born again Christians.

Bowdoin Christian Fellowship has been recognized on the campus of Bowdoin College for the past forty years. But after this summer, it will be losing its privileges at the school simply because the groups wants its leaders to be Christian.

"I want them on campus, because it's a sanctuary for many of our conservative evangelical students—Bowdoin has accepted these students, and they need a place, and they need to have their faith challenged," Robert Ives, a United Church of Christ minister who also serves as the director of religious and spiritual life at the college told the New York Times. "But every organization has to be open to every student, and every position of leadership has to be open to any individual, without discrimination."

Ives was referring to Bowdoin College's anti-discrimination policy, which requires that all students, regardless of their religious affiliation, be permitted to run for leadership positions.

"It would compromise our ability to be who we are as Christians if we can't hold our leaders to some sort of doctrinal standard," former member and now graduate Zackary Suhr, 23, told reporters.

The college has already revoked the keys that the group possesses, which granted them access to college facilities. Bowdoin Christian Fellowship will now only meet informally as a group.

As previously reported, a similar situation took place in February 2013 when University of Michigan officials revoked the recognition of InterVarsity Christian Fellowship for refusing to change its constitution to allow non-Christian leaders.

"For us, there's no other option than to hold to the tenets of our faith," stated member Sara Chang. "We want to model a lifestyle of integrity. Holding the Bible as the inspired, divine word of God and seeing the commands for us to choose leaders who have a vibrant faith in Jesus is obviously something very important that we want to continue to uphold."

(CNSNews.com) – The Satanic Temple, which gained international notoriety in May when it tried to hold a Black Mass reenactment at Harvard University, said one of the issues it feels strongly about is “gay rights” and explained that homosexual marriage is “a sacrament,” just like heterosexual marriage.

The Satanic Temple (TST) spokesman, Lucien Greaves, who reportedly is a graduate of Harvard University, explained why TST focuses on gay rights in a recent interview with the Detroit Metro Times and expanded on those views in an email to CNSNews.com.

When asked about its work on gay rights, Greaves told The Times, “We work on social issues, engaging the socio-political dialogue. One of the things we felt strongly about is gay rights. And there’s been a lot of progress, but there’s still a lot of progress to be made.”

with the world.

A brilliant new campaign is encouraging lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender (LGBT) couples to show their affection for one another proudly and share their love

Called HeartGoesPop, the campaign stemmed from the stigma many queer couples face from publicly showing affection for each other -- as evidenced on a large scale by the backlash Michael Sam faced for kissing his boyfriend after being drafted into the NFL. Mike Curry and Patrick Wallace are the brains behind HeartGoesPop, the two individuals who previously co-founded the grassroots movement A Note to My Kid in 2012.

"Through each photo and story featured on HeartGoesPop.com, we also hope to inspire more LGBT couples to publicly #KissProudly," organizers for the campaign said in a statement. "Many of us in the LGBT community have felt uncomfortable showing affection in public for fear that a simple kiss may be met with resistance by those around us. With all the problems we face in this world, shouldn't all kisses be celebrated? We think so. Here's to bringing more love into the world -- one sweet kiss

Texas Gov. Rick Perry

Texas Gov. Rick Perry caused some Commonwealth Club of California members to feel unsettled after he compared homosexuality to alcoholism during a discussion with them in San Francisco on Wednesday night.

Perry was asked his opinion on the Texas

Republican party's support of conversion therapy, and also whether he thought homosexuality was a disorder.

Gov. Perry answered that he is not sure if conversion therapy—a controversial series of treatments designed to turn homosexuals into heterosexuals—is effective, and that homosexuality is a choice.

"Whether or not you feel compelled to follow a particular lifestyle or not, you have the ability to decide not to do that," Perry told interviewer Greg Dalton.

"The zealotry of the far, far right fringe... and Alex Jones is unbowed."

CNN, formerly under the control of the Army's Fourth Psychological Operations Group, has jumped on the shooting in Las Vegas to kick start the rightwing extremist meme. The narrative has languished since the Department of Homeland Security backed off characterizing Americans who disagree with the establishment as domestic terrorists.

"The attack in Vegas is far from the only incident of violence by the American far right," writes Peter Bergen, billed as CNN's national security analyst. "According to data collected by the New America Foundation, right-wing extremists have killed 37 people in 16 violent incidents, in the United States since the 9/11 attacks. That number is more than the 21 people killed by militants motivated by al-Qaeda's ideology in the United States in the post-9/11 era."

Australia Seizes 360M From Dormant Bank Accounts And All 50 U.S. States Are Doing This Too

By Michael Snyder, on June 12th, 2014

Do you have a bank account that you don't actively use or a safe deposit box that you have not checked on for a while? If so, you might want to see if the government has grabbed your money. This sounds absolutely crazy, but it is true. All over the world, governments are shortening the time periods required before they can seize

"dormant bank accounts" and "unclaimed property". For example, as you will read about below, just last year the government of Australia seized a whopping 360 million dollars from dormant bank accounts. And this kind of thing is going on all over America as well. In fact, all 50 states actually pay private contractors to locate bank accounts and unclaimed property that can be seized. In some states, no effort will be made to contact you when your property is confiscated. And in most states, the seized property permanently become the property of the state government after a certain waiting period has elapsed. So please don't put money or property into a bank somewhere and just let it sit there. If you do, the government may come along and grab it right out from under your nose.

In this day and age, broke governments all over the globe are searching for "creative ways" to raise revenues. In Australia for example, the time period required before the federal government could seize a dormant bank account was reduced from seven to three years, and this resulted in an unprecedented windfall for the Australian government over the past 12 months...

High Water Stress Jeopardizes One-Third of World's Corn Crop

by  Francis Gassert and Andrew Maddocks - June 11, 2014

The $65 billion U.S. corn industry faces a range of water-related risks that could disrupt production of this key crop: unchecked groundwater withdrawals, nutrient pollution, shifting precipitation patterns from climate change, and increasing demand from cities and industries. But companies, investors, and governments have the opportunity to intervene.

Water limits to corn production are likely to be exacerbated as climate change alters global precipitation patterns. Photo Credit: Jane/Flickr

That's the central message of a U.S.-focused report released today by Ceres, featuring analysis and mapping from WRI's Aqueduct Water Risk Atlas. While the United States accounts for nearly 40 percent of global production, corn production all over the world faces similar threats. WRI finds that one-third of the world's corn production occurs in highly or extremely highly water-stressed regions.
