والعلامات حتى 23 سبتمبر 2014

Holy_bible_1

اكرر اننا لا نحدد مواعيد بل فقط نشجع بعضنا بعضا بقرب مجيء المسيح

وأیضا أوضح أنه يوجد نبوات لم نراها بعد مثل ابن الهلاك وهرمجدون

ولكن ایضا علامات كثيرة من التي قال عنها الكتاب انها في الزمان الاخير بدأت تحدث بوضوح

ويجب أن ننتبه اليها. و نذكر بعضنا باننا نحتاج ان نستعد. والاستعداد ليس فقط قبل مجيء

المسيح بل ایضا قبل الظلمة التي ستسبق مجيؤه ليكون عندنا زيت في مصابيحنا يكفي ان نعبر

هذه الظلمة وتكون مصابيحنا مضيئة وقت مجيؤه. بمعنى نحتاج من الان ان نستعد بقوة بأيمان

عامل وبتنقية القلب وان نثمر بالخدمة أي نجمع زيت في مصابيحنا لان الظلمة والضيقة اقتربت

جدا ومن لن يستعد لها بزيت كافي من الان لن يجد زيت في الضيقة لان وقتها تجميع زيت

سيكون صعب جدا بل أستطيع ان أقول من مثل العذارى انه لن يكون هناك زيت الا ما جمعه

سابقا. أفضل ان اقول لنفسي ولكم استعدوا الان لأنه اقترب فنكون مستعدين سواء جاء او نحن
ان سلمنا وديعتنا عن أنى لا اقول انه اقترب لكيلا يقال عني كاذب وانشر اشاعات ولكنه يأتي
بسرعة بغته. لا اعتقد اي أحد ندم لانه كان مستعد ومنتظر مجيء المسيح ولم ياتي المسيح في
زمنه ولكنه انتقل وهو مستعد ولكن كثيرين جدا ندموا على عدم الاستعداد عندما انتقلوا
بعض الاحداث التي قال عنها الرب يسوع

انجيل متى 24

مت 24: 6 و سوف تسمعون بحروب و اخبار حروب انظروا لا ترتاعوا لانه لا بد ان تكون هذه
كلها و لكن ليس المنتهى بعد

مت 24: 7 لانه تقوم امة على امة و مملكة على مملكة و تكون مجاعات و اوبئة و زلازل في
اماكن

مت 24: 8 و لكن هذه كلها مبتدا الاوجاع

مت 24: 9 حينئذ يسلمونكم الى ضيق و يقتلونكم و تكونون مبغضين من جميع الامم لاجل
اسمي

مت 24: 10 و حينئذ يعثر كثيرون و يسلمون بعضهم بعضا و يبغضون بعضهم بعضا

مت 24: 11 و يقوم انبياء كذبة كثيرون و يضلون كثيرين

مت 24: 12 و لكثرة الاثم تبرد محبة الكثيرين

مت 24: 13 و لكن الذي يصبر الى المنتهى فهذا يخلص

مت 24: 14 و يكرز ببشارة الملكوت هذه في كل المسكونة شهادة لجميع الامم ثم ياتي المنتهى

انجيل لوقا 21

21: 10 ثم قال لهم تقوم امة على امة و مملكة على مملكة

21: 11 و تكون زلازل عظيمة في اماكن و مجاعات و اوبئة و تكون مخاوف و علامات

عظيمة من السماء

21: 25 و تكون علامات في الشمس والقمر والنجوم وعلى الارض كرب امم بحيرة البحر والامواج

تضج

21: 26 والناس يغطى عليهم من خوف وانتظار ما يأتي على المسكونة لان قوات السماوات

تترزعزع

27: 21 و حينئذ يبصرون ابن الانسان اتيا في سحابة بقوة و مجد كثير

سفر اعمال الرسل 2

2: 19 واعطي عجائب في السماء من فوق وآيات على الارض من أسفل دما ونارا وبخار دخان

2: 20 تتحول الشمس الى ظلمة والقمر الى دم قبل ان يجيء يوم الرب العظيم الشهير

2: 21 ويكون كل من يدعو باسم الرب يخلص

المسيح لا يتنبأ ولا يتوقع بل يعرف

لماذا قال المسيح بعض العلامات؟

إنجيل يوحنا 14: 29

وَقُلْتُ لَكُمْ الْآنَ قَبْلَ أَنْ يَكُونَ، حَتَّى مَتَى كَانَ تُؤْمِنُونَ.

وايضا لنتنبه ونستعد

انجيل لوقا 21

28 وَمَتَى ابْتَدَأَتْ هَذِهِ تَكُونُ، فَانْتَصِبُوا وَارْفَعُوا رُؤُوسَكُمْ لِأَنَّ نَجَاتَكُمْ تَقْتَرِبُ.»

Odile will unload tremendous rainfall over a large part of the Southwest United States that will run off the mountains and into the desert valleys and plains through the end of the week.

According to Western Weather Expert Ken Clark, "There is the potential for devastating, catastrophic and historic flooding in this scenario."

The heaviest rainfall will hit the Southwestern states of Arizona and New Mexico where a general 3 to 6 inches will fall, but local amounts of 10 inches or more are possible on the slopes of the mountains. Rainfall of 1 to 2 inches per hour can occur.

There is a significant risk to lives and property in the region.

"Not only will flash and urban flooding occur in this case, but there is the potential for major river flooding," Clark said.

CATASTROPHIC FLOODING

AccuWeather.com

This is the type of threat that can cause water to sweep through normally dry stream beds, called arroyos, and into villages, towns and major cities rapidly. Major roads can be damaged and some bridges along secondary roads could be swept away. Mudslides and dust storms can block roads in a few locations.

September 2014 – KASHMIR - An epidemic threat is looming large over flood hit Srinagar with thousands of carcasses of livestock lying dead in the streets of the summer capital. In Army's largest dairy farm at Bemina on the Srinagar-Baramulla highway, bodies of hundreds of Jersey cows and buffaloes are lying unattended for the past eight days after the flood hit the city. The farm opposite to the Army's cantonment, Toto Ground, is spread over hundreds of kanals of land in the middle of residential area. Doctors termed the situation as "very threatening" saying if the dead animals were not removed and buried along with decomposing agents, the situation could lead to an epidemic outbreak. "This situation is a breeding ground for deadly diseases like cholera, hepatitis and typhoid," said a known doctor at SMHS hospital. A young boy who identified himself as Saifullah Gulzar of Al-Shakir colony, Bemina said there were 370 cows and buffaloes in the Army run farm. He said the farm got submerged on Sunday (September 7). "The main gate of the farm was closed which led to the death of the animals. Only seven cows could be saved while they were being washed away by floods," said Gulzar. While most of the carcasses have got stuck in the mud and flood water in the farm, many of them which were washed away by the flood were lying on the roadside, on the Srinagar-Baramulla highway.

With water level receding and sun shining bright, hundreds of dogs and vultures are preying on these carcasses. The whole area stinks and people moving on the road by foot or in vehicles cover their mouths to avoid the stinking smell. "It is becoming very dangerous day-by-day to return to our homes due to this stink and there are chances of deadly diseases taking places due to these unattended carcasses," said another local

Magnitude 7.1 Earthquake Strikes Just 25 Miles From Guam

A magnitude 7.1 earthquake struck 25 miles northwest of Guam in the Pacific Ocean on Wednesday, the U.S. Geological Survey said. There were no immediate reports of serious damage. The quake struck at more than 100 miles deep, USGS said. The Pacific Tsunami Warning Center added that it was too deep to trigger a tsunami.

"There were no reports of structural damage," a statement from the Office of the Governor in the small U.S. territory said. Authorities there said the tremor was too deep to cause any serious damage to buildings.

Bardabunga set to blow?

It's not just the magma that could be a problem if Iceland's rumbling Bardabunga erupts; the volcano also sits on the country's largest glacier.

The red-hot fountains of molten lava, glowing like wildfire, are nothing short of spectacular. Yet they could be ominous portents of things to come.

For the second time in four nail-biting years, seismologists in the land of fire and ice, Iceland, are bracing for a monumental volcanic eruption that, once again, threatens to disrupt European

Thousands of fish die in Atlixco jagüey

Share this note:

Atlixco. Alleged excessive chlorination of water caused thousands of fish dead in amaneceran one side of jagüey located on the auxiliary board of San Jerónimo Coyula, confirmed the director of public security and governance Javier Vargas Machuca.

During a brief interview with this newspaper, adding that actually became aware of that incident recently and one of the first explanations obtained, after an investigation, is that the water from this well would not be contaminated, and instead was applied "chlorine" more.

The complaint of several residents of that community, close to the slopes of Popocatepetl volcano struck not only by the authorities, also those of the media nationwide.

So the company Televisa reported that thousands of fish lay prostrate within jagüey located in Coyula. "There are many theories of people, some say they were poisoned, some gentlemen say it is by the rains that are already contaminated, others say it is normal, that every year this happens but had never seen this many dead fish," said Francisco Espinosa, president of Coyula who said that it is used by the inhabitants mojaras for sale and home consumption.

The people of the community were concerned about the smell coming from the jagüey. "I'm afraid of getting sick because of the smell it has is strong, many fish are dead, are not few, and the animals that come to drink water can get sick," said Zensaida Rojas.

Carcasses float on flooded roads, Sgr faces epidemic outbreak

Dead dairy animals float in Bemina farm
MUDDA SIR ALI

Srinagar, Sep 15: An epidemic threat is looming large over flood hit Srinagar with thousands of carcasses of livestock lying dead in the streets of the summer capital.

In Army's largest dairy farm at Bemina on the Srinagar-Baramulla highway, bodies of hundreds of Jersey cows and buffaloes are lying unattended for the past eight days after the flood hit the city. The farm opposite to the Army's cantonment, Toto Ground, is spread over hundreds of kanals of land in the middle of residential area.

"The main gate of the farm was closed which led to the death of the animals. Only seven cows could be saved while they were being washed away by floods," said Gulzar.

"It is becoming very dangerous day-by-day to return to our homes due to this stink and there are chances of deadly diseases taking places due to these unattended carcasses," said another local Shabir Ahmad. "Some of the families which had returned went back due to the epidemic threat in the area. We are not allowing our children to enter this entire area."

In posh Raj Bagh area which is one of the areas worst hit by floods, carcasses of dogs were floating on the flood water. Groups of crows and other carnivore birds were feeding on these dead dogs at many places along the Jawahar Nagar-Raj Bagh road.

"If you move into the interiors of Rajbagh, you will find scores of dead dogs floating around. They have become a source of disease," said Hashim Ahmad, member of a volunteer group from Ikhrapora, carrying rescue and relief operations in the inundated Raj Bagh and Jawahar Nagar.

The situation is equally worse in Lasjan on the Srinagar outskirts which remained completely submerged for many days as the area is located on the Jhelum River embankment.

Fish kill in Manteno lake likely caused by herbicides in 3 to 4 years

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

September 17, 2014 - 4:22 pm EDT

In this Sunday, Sept. 14, 2014 photo, dead fish float near the bank of Little Lake in Manteno, Ill. The kill that started as early as last Thursday night has had residents removing hundreds of pounds of dead fish from the water. The Illinois Department of Natural Resources says the fish were likely killed by herbicides. (AP Photo/The Daily Journal, Scott Anderson)

MANTENO, Illinois — Dead fish found floating in the small lake south of Lake Manteno likely were killed by herbicides, according to the Illinois Department of Natural Resources.

On Sept. 11, fish began to swim to the surface of the lake in search of oxygen, and started dying off the following day. One resident told The (Kankakee) Daily Journal (<http://bit.ly/1pjPtc7>) on Sunday that he has removed at least 800 pounds of dead fish.

Unknown disease worries Bhaktapur poultry keepers

BHAKTAPUR, SEP 19 - Poultry farmers of Bhaktapur district are once again worried after mysterious disease started killing adult fowls.

An epidemic of unknown disease has hit farms of Broiler poultry for the past one month. The disease which has not been yet identified has caused nervousness among poultry keepers, said poultry entrepreneur Laxman Gwachha.

The new disease shares the symptoms of the new castle disease. The Bhaktapur poultry farmers, who had been adversely affected by the outbreak of bird flu in the district a year ago, are worried as the mysterious disease is again likely to ruin their business.

Live fowls have also lost their weight. Chickens completing 30-35 days are dying due to the unknown disease. Generally, they become ready for supplying in 45-50 days of rearing.

The farmers visited the District Livestock Service Office and Central Livestock Research Centre with the dead fowls for test, but in vain.

EPA, PAAAF Probe Mass Death Of Fish

KUWAIT CITY, Sept 20, (KUNA): The Environment Public Authority and Public Authority For Agriculture Affairs and Fish Resources (PAAAF) affirmed on Saturday they are closely following up and probing the cause of mass death of fish in Jun Al-Kuwait, a small bay in the Arabian Gulf. In a press statement, the EPA said that marine pollution control and biodiversity departments and central laboratories are studying the causes of the mass death of fish.

It added that samples from the dead fish are being studied. Moreover, the EPA would seek the help of UK Centre for Environment, Fisheries & Aquaculture Science (Cefas) as per a recently agreement for cooperation to protect Kuwait marine life and ecosystem, said the statement.

Meanwhile, Head of the Public Relations Department at PAAAF Shaker Awadh told KUNA that there is coordination between PAAAF and others concerned bodies on this matter and laboratory results will provide an answer to the death of some fish. The amount of dead fish have declined, he said describing that a reassuring factor.

Hundreds of dead fish discarded by the river Summam

By Mourad Fenzl

Hundreds of dead fish were rejected yesterday by the river Summam, at the town of Sidi Aich, in the wilaya of Bejaia. The news quickly made the rounds of yesterday social networks, including Facebook.

A commission of inquiry, composed of representatives of the Directorate of Fisheries, Environment, Forests and hygiene of the municipality of Sidi Aich service immediately went to the scene to determine the causes, said yesterday at the APS, the Directorate of Fisheries. "It could be a suffocation due to lack of oxygen in the water due to the low flow or flood the river, generated by the latest storms, the flow of charge mud and sand is likely to clog their gills," said, APS, director of the environment. It should be remembered that several parties had sounded the alarm about the pollution of the river. "The river is very polluted and Summam do, under any circumstances, drink its water because the risk of poisoning is high. Avoid, too, to fish in this river" is the warning issued by the Director General of the National Development Centre for Fisheries and Aquaculture (CNDPA), Mohamed Kacher, taken in April by the site maghrebemergent.

Toxic Red Tide Threatens Florida Beaches, Marine Life Could Devastate Economy

Published: Sep 18, 2014, 2:21 PM EDT | Associated Press

Red Tide Off Florida Smothers Everything

A massive toxic algae called red tide is killing sea turtles, sharks and fish in the northeast Gulf of Mexico and is threatening the waters and beaches that fuel Florida's economy.

Fishermen who make a living off Florida's coast are reporting fish kills and reddish water.

This particular strain of red tide, called Karenia brevis, is present nearly every year off Florida, but large

The acknowledgement comes after a top German virologist told reporters Friday he does not expect the Ebola virus to burn out in Liberia or Sierra Leone until it infects half the population of the two countries and kills 5 million people.

Confirmed cases of Ebola have increased 57 percent in the past three weeks, with the death toll currently at 1,296 and no end in sight, according to updated World Health Organization statistics.

UPDATE 1-Death toll in W.Africa Ebola epidemic reaches 2,630 - WHO

(Updates with figures for Nigeria, Senegal and Congo, details)

(Reuters) - At least 2,630 people have died in the worst outbreak of Ebola virus in history, which has so far infected at least 5,357 people in West Africa, the World Health Organisation (WHO) said on Thursday.

In an update on the epidemic, which is raging through Guinea, Sierra Leone and Liberia and has spread into Nigeria and Senegal, the WHO said there were no signs yet of it slowing.

"The upward epidemic trend continues in the three countries that have widespread and intense transmission - Guinea, Liberia and Sierra Leone," the United Nations health agency said.

Those three countries account for the vast majority of cases and deaths in the outbreak - 8 others have died in Nigeria, out of 21 cases, and one case has been confirmed in Senegal.

The WHO said a surge in Ebola in Liberia is being driven primarily by a continued increase in the number of cases reported in the capital, Monrovia, where 1,210 bed spaces were needed, five times the current capacity.

The WHO has said it hopes to be able to "bend the curve" in the almost exponential increase in cases within three months.

The latest data updated five days of data for Liberia and one day for the other countries, and showed no new deaths in Sierra Leone since the previous update.

Ebola virus: new aid worker attack in Sierra Leone amid curfew – thousands cross the border into neighboring countries

Posted on September 21, 2014

September 2014 – FREETOWN, Africa – Health-care workers in a village east of Freetown, the capital of Sierra Leone, came under attack Saturday while attempting to bury five victims of the deadly Ebola virus disease, according to a police official cited by the Associated Press. Nevertheless, the attacks in the village of Waterloo did not derail a government effort to contain the virus through house-to-house inspections. Volunteers carrying out the inspections have reported that, by and large, most Sierra Leoneans have obeyed government orders to remain at home through Sunday evening. Sierra Leone, a small, impoverished West African nation seeking to emerge from decades of war and instability, has been among the countries most badly affected by the virus: Ebola has caused 560 deaths in the country, roughly one-fifth of the 2,600 fatalities registered in the region, as AP reported.

In their attempt to prevent the virus from spreading, government officials throughout the region have struggled to overcome insufficient medical equipment, poor transportation infrastructure and, occasionally, intransigence in the populations themselves. BBC News reported Thursday that villagers in Guinea, a nation bordering Sierra Leone, slaughtered eight Ebola aid workers in cold blood. Ebola is one of the world's deadliest diseases, with roughly one-half of those infected in West Africa since December having died. U.S. President Barack Obama has pledged to rally support for combating Ebola when world leaders gather in New York for the United Nations General Assembly meeting this week. And, last week, the president announced he would dispatch 3,000 American troops to the region, marking the first time a U.S. president has promised military assistance to fight a disease outbreak in Africa. – IB Times

Sierra Leone's Ebola shutdown uncovers 92 dead in capital, 56 new cases reported

Posted on September 21, 2014

September 2014 – FREETOWN, Africa – Sierra Leone wrapped up its 72-hour shutdown on Sunday, with authorities reporting that the action aimed at containing the Ebola epidemic had uncovered up to 70 dead bodies in and around the capital. Most of the West African country's six million people were confined to their homes for a third straight day, with only essential workers such as health professionals and security forces exempt. Almost 30,000 volunteers have been going door-to-door to educate locals and hand out soap, in an exercise that was expected to lead to scores more patients and bodies being discovered in homes. Deputy Chief Medical Officer Sarian Kamara revealed that the authorities had received thousands of calls but only a handful of new patients in the Western Area covering Freetown and its surroundings. "We were... able to confirm new cases which, had they not been discovered, would have greatly increased transmission," she said. "Up to this morning, we had 22 new cases. The response from the medical (teams) has improved and the burial teams were able to bury between 60 to 70 corpses over the past two days." Independent observers have voiced concerns over the quality of advice being given out, deeming the shutdown a "mixed success" and complaining about the poor training of the door-to-door education teams. Meanwhile aid organizations and medical experts have questioned the feasibility of reaching 1.5 million homes in three days and have argued that confining people to their homes could erode trust between the government and the people.

Spain: Ebola test drug out of supply worldwide

MADRID (AP) -- Doctors treating a Spanish priest who was repatriated from West Africa on Monday after being diagnosed with the Ebola virus said there were no samples of experimental drug ZMapp available in the world right now, and they were considering alternative treatments.

The priest, Manuel Garcia Viejo, 69, was in serious condition and was suffering from dehydration, with kidney and liver complications, said Javier Rodriguez, chief health officer for the Madrid region.

Garcia Viejo, a medical director of the San Juan de Dios Hospital in Lunsar, Sierra Leone, was transferred to Madrid Carlos III hospital after being flown back from Sierra Leone in a medically-equipped military plane.

Mapp Biopharmaceutical, the company that makes ZMapp, says the drug's supplies are exhausted and that it takes months to make even a small batch.

Ebola epidemic far worse than being reported: running out of space in cemeteries to bury bodies

Posted on September 23, 2014

September 2014 – FREETOWN, Sierra Leone — The gravedigger hacked at the cemetery's dense undergrowth, clearing space for the day's Ebola victims. A burial team, in protective suits torn with gaping holes, arrived with fresh bodies. The backs of the battered secondhand vans carrying the dead were closed with twisted, rusting wire. Bodies were dumped in new graves, and a worker in a short-sleeve shirt carried away the stretcher, wearing only plastic bags over his hands as protection. The outlook for the day at King Tom Cemetery was busy. "We will need much more space," said James C. O. Hamilton, the chief gravedigger, as a colleague cleared the bush with his machete. The Ebola epidemic is spreading rapidly in Sierra Leone's densely packed capital — and it may already be far worse than the authorities acknowledge. Since the beginning of the outbreak more than six months ago, the Sierra Leone Health Ministry reported only 10 confirmed Ebola deaths here in Freetown, the capital of more than one million people, and its suburbs as of Sunday — a hopeful sign that this city, unlike the capital of neighboring Liberia, had been relatively spared the ravages of the outbreak.

Death toll from Chikungunya hits 113 in the Caribbean, PAHO says

Published September 15, 2014 / EFE Print Email Share Share 74 Tweet 22 Share

At least 113 people have died in the Americas, with all the fatalities reported in the Caribbean region, after becoming infected with the Chikungunya virus, the Pan American Health Organization, or PAHO, said, adding that it was not yet clear if these deaths were directly attributable to the virus.

In its latest report, which includes figures as of Sept. 12, the PAHO confirmed 55 deaths linked to the virus in Martinique since last December, when the disease was first detected in the Americas.

Forty-nine deaths were reported in Guadeloupe, six in the Dominican Republic and three in St. Martin, where the virus was first found in the Americas.

Although all the victims were infected with the virus, health authorities said Chikungunya may not have been the main cause of death.

Epidemiologist declares chikungunya epidemic in V.I.

Daily News file photo An Aedes aegypti mosquito takes flight as it leaves its host's skin surface. Aedes aegypti mosquitoes are responsible for spreading chikungunya.

ST. THOMAS - While the V.I. Health Department stood up to public criticism of its mitigation plan for the spread of chikungunya, a debilitating mosquito-borne virus, the department also declared that the territorial outbreak is officially an epidemic.

In fact, it has been an epidemic since May.

"As soon as we knew of the first case, it was an outbreak," said the Health Department's territorial epidemiologist, Dr. Esther Ellis.

An outbreak, Ellis said, is when more cases of a health concern occur than is expected at any one time. An epidemic, on the other hand, is when a doubling of cases occurs in a period of three weeks or less, she said.

The first confirmation of the virus in the U.S. Virgin Islands was May 20, according to health officials, who said that the person had traveled to Dominica, which reported confirmed cases prior.

"It's really the humans that move the virus," Ellis said.

Currently, the DOH has counted 514 suspected cases on St. Thomas, with 41 confirmed or probable; 25 suspected cases on St. Croix, with three confirmed or probable; and 13 suspected are on St. John, with two confirmed or probable.

In the Americas altogether, 708,093 cases were suspected and 8,651 were confirmed as of Sept. 12, according to the Pan American Health Organization. In total, 113 deaths have resulted from the disease, according to the organization.

The U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, which has been dispatched to most, if not all, of the islands affected, has been offering free blood testing to confirm cases. Most of the patients coming in exhibit the typical symptoms, including fever, rash and joint pain. The symptoms typically begin to show within three to five days of being bitten by the carrier-mosquito.

While most of the symptoms will dissipate within a week's time, some people with chikungunya may develop prolonged joint pain that can last for months, even years, according to Health officials Tuesday.

Unknown avian virus strikes poultry farms in Nepal

Posted on September 20, 2014

September 2014 – Bhaktapur, NEPAL – Poultry farmers of Bhaktapur district are once again worried after mysterious disease started killing adult fowls. An epidemic of unknown disease has hit farms of Broiler poultry for the past one month. The disease which has not been yet identified has caused nervousness among poultry keepers, said poultry entrepreneur Laxman Gwachha. The new disease shares the symptoms of the Newcastle disease. The Bhaktapur poultry farmers, who had been adversely affected by the outbreak of bird flu in the district a year ago, are worried as the mysterious disease is again likely to ruin their business.

Live fowls have also lost their weight. Chickens completing 30-35 days are dying due to the unknown disease. Generally, they become ready for supplying in 45-50 days of rearing. The farmers visited the District Livestock Service Office and Central Livestock Research Centre with the dead fowls for test, but in vain. -EK

PHARMACEUTICAL GIANT DUMPS LIVE POLIO VIRUS INTO BELGIAN WATER

Health authorities claim incident poses "negligible" risk

Employees with pharmaceutical giant GlaxoSmithKline (GSK) dumped more than 45 liters of concentrated live polio into the water at a Belgian treatment plant earlier this month according to a statement from health officials.

A press release from the Federal Public Service \(FPS\) Health, Food Chain Safety and Environment in Belgium stated that "human error" resulted in the live virus making its way into the Lasne and Dyle rivers in Rixensart on Sept. 2.

"The liquid was rejected, according to initial information provided by the firm GSK, due to human error during the process of vaccine production," the press release states. "The water from the treatment plant in question is not discharged to the supply network for drinking water."

Swimmers and fishermen face "limited" danger according to a risk analysis conducted by the Scientific Institute of Public Health and the Supreme Council of Health, which also encouraged worried residents to contact their doctors to debate "re-vaccination."

Military Plant In East Ukraine Devastated By Massive Explosion

Last night's headlines crowded in bright red flashing text that Russia and Ukraine had (once again) agreed a cease-fire and terms over the borders between the two nations. Perhaps not surprisingly, mere hours later, Ukraine is claiming that Russia has broken the truce... with the use of a tactical nuclear weapon at Luhansk airport. This comes on the heels of claims by the pro-Russia separatists that Kiev forces destroyed a massive military plant in Donetsk. Russia's defense ministry flatly denies the 'nuclear strikes' adding that "no reasonable person will take them seriously." This truce-breaking action has once again raised calls among Ukrainians for the nation to get its nuclear status back; something Russia is clearly strongly against. More

Russia will not "buy tickets" to the international coalition that is being created by the US to fight the Islamic State, but will continue its aid to Iraq, Syria and other nations that are fighting terrorists on the spot.

"The anti-ISIL coalition is not a club party – we do not expect any invitations and we are not going to buy entry tickets," said Ilya Rogachev, the head of the Foreign Ministry's Department for New Challenges and Threats. At the same time Russia will continue to support all states that fight against the Islamic State, the official told the Interfax news agency on Friday.

Rogachev used the older name ISIL (Islamic State of Iraq and Levant) for the group that was also known as ISIS (Islamic State of Iraq and Syria) and that is now acting simply under the name Islamic State (IS).

Russia supports Iraq and its help has already allowed this country to improve its defenses markedly. It is also supporting the Syrian government in its fight against extremism, Rogachev told reporters. He added that Russia was ready to help all IS opponents, (NaturalNews) The Cold War ended with the collapse of the Soviet Union in December 1991, but under the stewardship of President Vladimir Putin, a former KGB agent, a new cold war between Russia and the United States appears to be forming. At least, it's cold for now.

Over the past 30 months, Russian strategic (read nuclear) forces have begun testing U.S. defenses on a much more regular basis. The most recent attempt occurred just days ago when a pair of Russian strategic bombers practiced cruise missile attacks on the U.S. during a training mission -- a

Russia is set to renew the country's strategic nuclear forces by 100 percent, not 70 percent as previously announced, according to Deputy Prime Minister Dmitry Rogozin.

"The formation of the technical basis for strategic nuclear forces is going at a faster rate, and in fact, we will renew not 70 percent of the SNF, but 100 percent," Rogozin told Rossiya TV channel.

The deputy premier, who's responsible for the Russian defense industry, also declared that in 2015 the army and the navy are to switch 30 percent of their weapons to "cutting edge" technology, and by 70 percent in 2020.

The clue is in the name. The Shanghai Co-operation Organisation (SCO) groups six countries--China, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Russia, Tajikistan and Uzbekistan--and aims to be the dominant security institution in its region; but its origin and purposes are largely Chinese.

So it looks rather worrying from a Western point of view that the group has agreed to expand and that India, Pakistan and Iran are all keen to join: the rise of a kind of China-led NATO to which even America's friends, such as India and Pakistan, seem drawn. Yet that is to Tehran, Iran: Two Chinese warships have docked at Iran's principal naval port for the first time in history, Iranian admirals told state television on Sunday, adding that the countries would conduct four days of joint naval exercises.

On Sunday, Xinhua, the official Chinese news agency, reported that on Saturday, Chinese navy ships involved in protecting shipping in the Gulf of Aden stopped at an Iranian port for a "friendly visit". One of the vessels was the Changchun, a guided-missile destroyer, the report said.

China And Russia's Nuclear Submarines Capable Of Striking American Bases, Says U.S. Navy

China and Russia's nuclear submarine capabilities have been increasing rapidly in recent years and the U.S. Navy is already assessing how it will change its strategy based upon recent advancements in technology. A U.S. Navy Admiral is also warning that both the Chinese and Russian navy are becoming capable of striking American bases.

In a related report by The Inquisitr, the Russian military successfully tested a Bulava inter-continental ballistic missile (ICBM) launched from the Russian nuclear submarine the Vladimir Monomakh. The test nuclear missile flew from the White Sea near Russia's border with Finland and hit its target nearly 3,500 miles away on the Kamchatka peninsula north of Japan. This was considered significant since the Bulava ICBM has suffered repeated glitches in the past which lead to launch failures. Vladimir Putin also discussed a 2016-2025 Russian nuclear weapons modernization program focused on creating a "guaranteed nuclear deterrent."

Russian strategic nuclear bombers carried out air defense zone incursions near Alaska and across Northern Europe this week in the latest nuclear saber rattling by Moscow.

Six Russian aircraft, including two Bear H nuclear bombers, two MiG-31 fighter jets and two IL-78 refueling tankers were intercepted by F-22 fighters on Wednesday west and north of Alaska in air defense identification zones, said Navy Capt. Jeff A. Davis, a spokesman for the U.S. Northern Command and North American Aerospace Defense Command. Two other Bears were intercepted by Canadian jets on Thursday.

"The group of Russian aircraft flew a loop south, returning westward toward Russia," Davis told the Free Beacon.

A day later two more Bear bombers were intercepted by Canadian CF-18 jets in the western area of the Canadian air defense identification zone near the Beaufort Sea, north of Alaska, he said.

The Russian bombers did not enter U.S. airspace but flew within 63 miles of the Alaskan coast and 46 miles of the Canadian coastline, Davis said.

In both instances, the Russian bombers did not enter sovereign airspace, he added, noting the Russian aircraft flew within about 55 nautical miles of the Alaskan coastline, and within about 40 nautical miles of the Canadian coastline.

One defense official said the Russian bomber activity appeared timed to the visit to the United States and Canada by Ukrainian President Petro Poroshenko. The Ukrainian leader was in Ottawa for meetings with Canadian leaders on Wednesday. He met with President Obama on Thursday.

Ukraine is locked in a battle with Moscow over the Russian military annexation of Crimea and continuing backing of pro-Russian Ukrainian militias in eastern Ukraine.

Over Europe on Tuesday, two Bear H bombers conducted practice strategic bombing runs on Tuesday and were met by interceptor jets from Norway, Denmark, Britain, and Netherlands, defense officials told the Free Beacon.

NEW RECRUITS FLOCK TO ISIS FOLLOWING OBAMA SPEECH

US airstrikes will only embolden support for terrorists say those among local populations in Syria

The Islamic State terrorist group has seen an uptick in recruits following president Obama's address last week, when he indicated that airstrikes to combat the extremists would be expanded from Iraq to Syria.

The intelligence comes via The Syrian Observatory for Human Rights, an independent group monitoring all aspects of the conflict within the country.

The group indicated that 162 people had attended two separate training camps set up by ISIS in Aleppo province in the last week alone.

Among the recruits, according to the Observatory, were four Australian nationals, as well as 15 non-Syrian Arabs who entered the country across the Turkish border. The remaining new recruits are Syrians, and most former fighters with the Syrian al Qaeda affiliate The Nusra Front, which has been going up against ISIS in a battle for regional supremacy.

As was widely reported last week, ISIS militants and so called 'moderate' Syrian rebels signed a non-aggression pact. In addition, Al Qaeda in the Arabian Peninsula and al Qaeda in the Islamic Maghreb have set about a campaign to unite the rival militant groups in Iraq and Syria against the U.S.-led alliance and Shi-ite fighters.

ISIS Calls On Muslims In America To Go To Homes Of U.S. Soldiers and "Slaughter Them"

A law enforcement bulletin obtained by FoxNews.com warned that Islamic State fighters have increased calls for "lone wolves" to attack U.S. soldiers in America in recent months, citing one tweet that called for jihadists to find service members' addresses online and then "show up and slaughter them." There will be "a continued call – by Western fighters in Syria and terrorist organizations – for lone offender attacks against U.S. military facilities and personnel," warned a July law enforcement intelligence bulletin from the Central Florida Intelligence Exchange, a state-run agency that gathers, assesses and shares threat information and works with the Department of Homeland Security. "These threats will most likely increase should the U.S. or its allies attack the Islamic State of Iraq and Sham (ISIS) in Syria or Iraq." In one example cited in the bulletin, a British jihadist encouraged radicals still living in the West to use Facebook and LinkedIn to find and target soldiers. More

Much has been reported about Latin Americans sneaking across the U.S. southern border, but there may be a greater danger looming in America's heartland in the form of nearly 2 million Muslims who have made their way to the U.S. since 1992.

And, unlike the surge at the southern border, most of those coming from the Middle East have done so legally, with the full support of the U.S. federal government.

Scholars such as Robert Spencer, Pamela Geller and Daniel Pipes have warned for years of the Muslim Brotherhood's doctrine of immigration, or "al-hijra," as the long-term strategy to transform America into a different type of society – one that subjugates all other religions under Islam.

BEIRUT (AP) — Islamic State fighters backed by tanks have captured 16 Kurdish villages over the past 24 hours in northern Syria near the Turkish border, prompting civilians to flee their homes amid fears of retribution by the extremists sweeping through the area, activists said.

For more than a year, the Islamic State group and Kurdish militias have been locked in a fierce fight in several pockets of northern Syria where large Kurdish populations reside. The clashes are but one aspect of Syria's broader civil war — a multilayered conflict that the U.N. says has killed more than 190,000.

Islamic State militants have taken over the 16 Kurdish villages in Syria's northern Kurdish region of Kobani, also known as Ayn Arab, since Wednesday, the Britain-based Syrian Observatory for Human Rights said. It said there were casualties on both sides, but that Kurdish civilians were fleeing their villages for fear that Islamic State group fighters "will commit massacres against civilians."

Nawaf Khalil, a spokesman for Syria's powerful Kurdish Democratic Union Party, the Kurdish fighters withdrew or lost up to 20 villages in the Kobani region and evacuated civilians with them.

"The battles that are taking place in Kobani are the most violent," Khalil said adding that Islamic State group fighters were using tanks in their offensive. Khalil called on Kurds around the world to come to Syria to defend Kobani.

Islamic terrorists operating in Mexican border city of Ciudad Juarez...

Federal law enforcement sources in El Paso say that a United States congressman called their office to prohibit contact with Judicial Watch in the aftermath of a disturbing story confirming that Islamic terrorists are operating in the Mexican border city of Ciudad Juarez. Sources tell JW that Beto O'Rourke, a Democrat who represents El Paso in the U.S. House of Representatives, telephoned the area offices of the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), Homeland Security Investigations (HSI) and the U.S. Border Patrol (USBP) in an effort to identify—and evidently intimidate—sources that may have been used by JW. On August 29 JW reported that the militant group Islamic State of Iraq and Greater Syria (ISIS) is working in Juarez and planning to attack the United States with car bombs or other vehicle borne improvised explosive devices (VBIED). BAGHDAD — The United States has conducted an escalating campaign of deadly airstrikes against the extremists of the Islamic State for more than a month. But that appears to have done little to tamp down the conspiracy theories still circulating from the streets of Baghdad to the highest levels of Iraqi government that the C.I.A. is secretly behind the same extremists that it is now attacking.

“We know about who made Daesh,” said Bahaa al-Araji, a deputy prime minister, using an Arabic shorthand for the Islamic State on Saturday at a demonstration called by the Shiite cleric Moktada al-Sadr to warn against the possible deployment of American ground troops. Mr. Sadr publicly blamed the C.I.A. for creating the Islamic State in a speech last week, and interviews suggested that most of the few thousand people at the demonstration, including dozens of members of Parliament, subscribed to

US Allies bomb Islamic State targets in Syria

The United States has begun striking targets of the Islamic State in Syria, without authorization from the government of Bashar Assad in Damascus but in conjunction with "coalition forces," the Pentagon said on Monday night. "Given that these operations are ongoing, we are not in a position to provide additional details at this time." US President Barack Obama made the decision to begin air strikes against the group, which holds court in Raqqa, eastern Syria, earlier in the day. More than 1,000 dissenting scientists (updates previous 700 scientist report) from around the globe have now challenged man-made global warming claims made by the United Nations Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) and former Vice President Al Gore. This new 2010 321-page Climate Depot Special Report — updated from the 2007 groundbreaking U.S. Senate Report of over 400 scientists who voiced skepticism about the so-called global warming “consensus” — features the skeptical voices of over 1,000 international scientists, including many current and former UN IPCC scientists, who have now turned against the UN IPCC. This updated 2010 report includes a dramatic increase of over 300 additional (and growing) scientists and climate researchers since the last update in March 2009. This report’s release coincides with the 2010 UN global warming summit in being held in Cancun.

The more than 300 additional scientists added to this report since March 2009 (21 months ago), represents an average of nearly four skeptical scientists a week speaking out publicly. The well over 1,000 dissenting scientists are almost 20 times the number of UN scientists (52) who authored the media-hyped IPCC 2007 Summary for Policymakers.

The chorus of skeptical scientific voices grew louder in 2010 as the Climategate scandal — which involved the upper echelon of UN IPCC scientists — detonated upon on the international climate

With the unveiling of the Apple Watch Tuesday in Cupertino, California, Apple is attempting to put technology somewhere where it's never been particularly welcome. Like a pushy date, the Apple Watch wants to get intimate with us in a way we're not entirely used to or prepared for. This isn't just a new product, this is technology attempting to colonize our bodies.

U.S. Secretary of State, John Kerry.

U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry is currently drawing the ire of conservatives for charging that America has a biblical duty to protect Muslim countries from climate change.

At a ceremony to appoint Texas lawyer Shaarik Zafar to be special representative to Muslim communities, Kerry said America has a biblical "responsibility" to "confront climate change," which includes protecting "vulnerable Muslim majority counties."

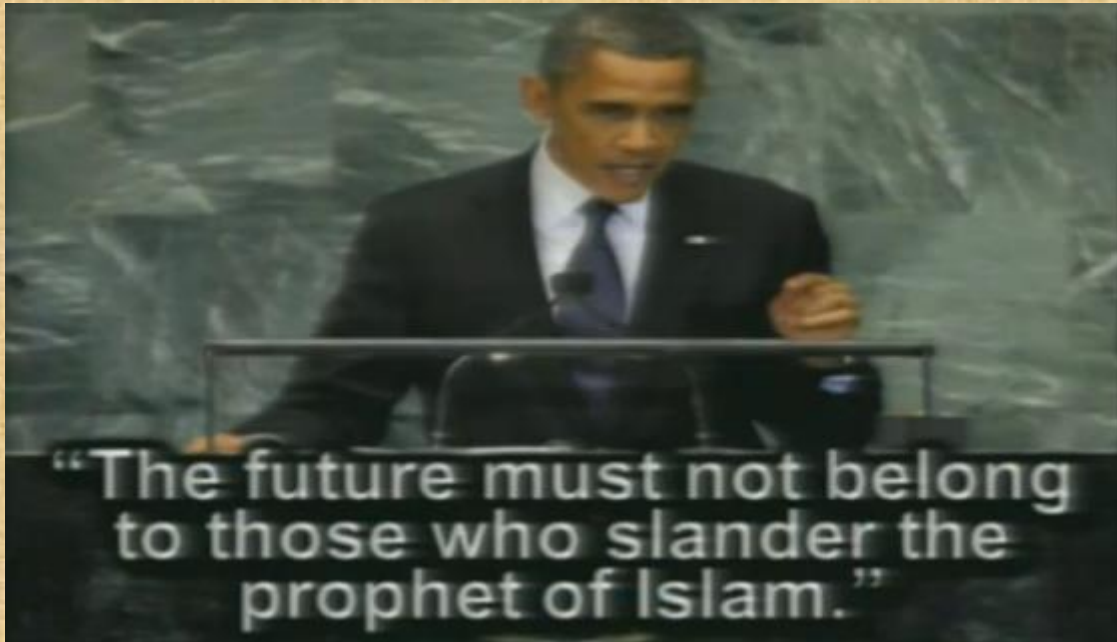

"Confronting climate change is, in the long run, one of the greatest challenges that we

The super-rich are looking to protect their wealth through buying record numbers of "Italian job" style gold bars, according to bullion experts.

The number of 12.5kg gold bars being bought by wealthy customers has increased 243pc so far this year, when compared to the same period last year, said Rob Halliday-Stein founder of BullionByPost.

"These gold bars are usually stored in the vaults of central banks and are the same ones you see in the film 'The Italian Job'," added David Cousins, bullion executive from London based ATS Bullion.

A grainy and gruesome photo has fueled speculation that the infamous leader of the Nigerian terror group Boko Haram is dead, even as the African nation's army presses fighters in the northern territory and the fate of hundreds of hostages hangs in the balance.

The military in neighboring Cameroon claims to have killed Abubakar Shekau, the warlord seen earlier this year in a monstrous video vowing to sell nearly 300 kidnapped schoolgirls, and even released a photo purportedly of his corpse. Nigerian security forces are trying to

NFL reportedly tells Redskins' RG3 to remove 'Know Jesus, Know Peace' T-shirt

A uniform inspector from the NFL reportedly told Redskins quarterback Robert Griffin III that he could not wear his "Know Jesus, Know Peace" T-shirt during a Sunday post-game press conference. Michael Phillips, a reporter from The Richmond Times-Dispatch, posted on Twitter that an NFL uniform inspector made the quarterback, known as RG3, turn the shirt inside out before the press conference. The reason: it was not a Nike product, Phillips reported. CSN Washington reported that a Redskins spokesperson denied reports that RG3 was forced to flip the shirt by the NFL. The spokesperson said RG3 flipped the shirt on his own to avoid a possible fine. CSN cites NFL bylaws that state a player cannot wear clothing that sends a personal message on game days. Griffin has reportedly been fined in the past for wearing Adidas gear on game days. Fox News

Maybe not, according to one columnist.

The South Florida Sun-Sentinel's Daniel Vasquez wrote Tuesday that while Satanists may be allowed to give out their material to students, it's an entirely different question whether they will pay attention to it.

Vasquez explained that students are busy enough that they likely will reserve little time for the handouts.

The Internal Revenue Service continues to be secretive about its intentions to investigate churches and pastors.

It's more of the same. The Internal Revenue Service continues to be secretive about its intentions to investigate churches and pastors—nearly two months after it settled a lawsuit with an atheist group.

Alliance Defending Freedom (ADF) submitted a Freedom of Information request to the IRS, asking for documents related to a legal settlement with the Freedom From Religion Foundation (FFRF), in which the IRS apparently adopted new protocols and procedures for the investigation of churches.

The request was filed in July, but the IRS recently told ADF it would not provide information until Sept. 29—well past the timeframe allowed by law—even though the information ADF is requesting is the same that the IRS has already provided to the FFRF as part of the suit.

"It's time that government agencies stop keeping secrets from the American people and stop targeting conservatives and people of faith," said Tim Wildmon, president of the American Family Association. "It is no wonder the American people have lost faith in our leaders. A government that targets churches is not a

More than 200 police raided a house church on Sunday, eyewitnesses told International Christian Concern. More than 100 church members, including children, were arrested during the Sunday service in Foshan City, in China's Guangdong Province. As of Monday evening, more than 24 hours later, 30 parishioners still remained in police custody.

"We don't know exactly why they raided our church," a local believer told ICC during an interview. "The government does not want us to get together and worship as a church."

Local believers told ICC that the church was raided without any warning. The police left behind a notice stating that the church members were detained for conducting an "illegal gathering."

All house churches in China are considered "illegal gatherings" and are frowned upon by the government. Any believers meeting together to practice their faith in house churches risk being arrested. ICC has

Ben & Jerry's Signs Employers' Amicus Brief In Support Of Gay Marriage

The Huffington Post | By Curtis M. Wong

Ben & Jerry's is making a bold new stand in defense of same-sex marriage.

The Vermont-based ice cream giant has signed an Employers' Amicus Brief urging the U.S. Supreme Court to review pending marriage equality ban cases in Utah, Oklahoma and Virginia.

Company representatives confirmed the news in a lengthy post on the official Ben & Jerry's website, jokingly calling the brief "fancy lawyer speak for a formal legal petition asking the Supreme Court to review these latest circuit court rulings."

"Often, it's not enough to change the way you do business, or change the practice within your business," Chris Miller, Ben & Jerry's Social Mission Activism Manager, said in the post. "Unless you're willing to stand up and advocate for the rights of others, not just here in our backyard but around the world, it's often just not good enough."

Miller went on to note, "This is not just a concern of the gay rights community. There is a broad base of support for a single standard across all 50 states that recognize same sex marriage."

Cheerleaders at Tennessee High School Take a Stand for Pre-Game Prayer

ONEIDA, Tenn. — Cheerleaders at a high school in Tennessee have found a way to put prayer back into the pre-game period of athletic events in the face of a recent decision by school officials to replace the prayers with a moment of silence.

According to reports, the Tennessee Secondary School Athletic Association instructed schools two years ago to discontinue offering prayers over the sound system prior to athletic events. But officials at Oneida High School defied the order and kept praying.

"We just felt as long as no one here locally complained, we can continue to do it," announcer Kevin Acres told local television station WBIR.

But this year, outside organizations began to pressure Oneida High School to discontinue the practice. Therefore, the school replaced the prayers with a moment of silence.

▶ Acres recently spoke about the change over the loudspeaker.

"I have been asked many times over the past few weeks why we no longer have an opening prayer, like we have done at every football game that I am aware of since we started playing football at Oneida in 1930," he said, explaining that the removal of the prayer was due to threats of a lawsuit. "In an effort to protect the resources of our high school institution from any legal actions that these groups may take, we will from this point forward observe a moment of silence prior to the start of sporting events."

Acres then explained that each individual attendee is welcome to do as he or she wishes during the moment of silence.

"[D]uring the moment of silence, if you want to say a prayer, or choose not to say a prayer, that is your constitutional right as an American," he advised. "In other words, it is no one's place to tell you that you have to say a prayer, just as it is no one's right to say you can't say one."

"On a more personal note, I would like to conclude by saying, 'As for me and my house, we will worship the Lord,'" Acres stated.

Jerusalem holds annual Gay Pride Parade after multiple delays

Amid a Large contingent of Police, including a helicopter and officers on horseback, a relatively small number of gay and transgender men and women marched through the streets of the capital Thursday night in the annual Jerusalem Gay Pride parade. According to Jerusalem Open House, which represents the city's LGBT community, while the event normally attracts several thousand participants, two postponements during Operation Protective Edge diminished this year's showing. Nonetheless, roughly 2,000 people – gay and straight – marched downtown to support greater tolerance of the capital's thousands of LGBT residents. More
