ليس فقط قبل مجيء المسيح بل ایضا قبل الظلمة التي

ستسبق مجيؤه ليكون عندنا زيت في مصابيحنا يكفي ان

نعبر هذه الظلمة وتكون مصابيحنا مضيئة وقت مجيؤه.

بمعنى نحتاج من الان ان نستعد بقوة بأيمان عامل

وبتنقية القلب وان نثمر بالخدمة أي نجمع زيت في

مصابيحنا لان الظلمة والضيقة اقتربت جدا ومن لن

يستعد لها بزيت كافي من الان لن يجد زيت في الضيقة
لان وقتها تجميع زيت سيكون صعب جدا بل أستطيع ان
أقول من مثل العذارى انه لن يكون هناك زيت الا ما
جمعتة سابقا. أفضل ان اقول لنفسي ولكم استعدوا الان
لأنه اقترب فنكون مستعدين سواء جاء او نحن ان سلمنا

NASA's All Sky Fireball Network

"What was that bright light in the sky last night?"

Intro: The NASA All-sky Fireball Network is a network of cameras set up by the NASA Meteoroid Environment Office (MEO) with the goal of observing meteors brighter than the planet Venus, which are called fireballs. The collected data will be used by the MEO in constructing models of the meteoroid environment, which are important to spacecraft designers.

Network: The network currently consists of 15 cameras, 6 of which are placed in locations in north Alabama, north Georgia, southern Tennessee, and southern North Carolina. 4 are in the northern Ohio/Pennsylvania area, and the remaining 5 are located in southern New Mexico and Arizona. The network is still growing, despite having achieved its initial goal of 15 cameras in schools, science centers, planetaria, and observatories in the United States, predominantly east of the Mississippi River, where there are few such systems.

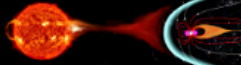

Cameras: Cameras in the network are specialized black and

The Sun and Solar Activity

Hyder Flares

What is a Hyder flare?

Flares are intense brightenings that occur in the solar chromosphere. Flares are generally observed from Earth using narrow band filters, typically with a bandwidth of less than 0.1 nm, and often centred on the Hydrogen-alpha wavelength of 656.3 nm. (Flares also have counterparts, that is, sudden outbursts, in the radio and X-ray spectrum).

Most flares occur around active regions associated with sunspot groups. However, occasionally a flare (sudden brightening) is observed well away from an active region or sunspot group. These flares are invariably associated with the sudden disappearance of a large (thick, long, 'bushy') dark solar filament, and are termed Hyder flares.

Why are Hyder flares so named?

Max Waldmeier wrote a paper in 1938 which described the phenomenon of suddenly disappearing filaments (disparition brusque), and mentioned that these can be associated with flare-like brightenings, but it was left to Charles Hyder to postulate the first comprehensive mechanism for the such flares.

Following on work from his doctoral thesis with the University of Colorado in Boulder (1964), Hyder published two papers in the second volume of the journal Solar Physics (1967) in which the mechanism by which Hyder flares might occur was discussed in detail. Hyder was then on the staff of the (US) Air Force Cambridge Research Laboratories at the Sacramento Peak Observatory in New Mexico.

It was these papers in Solar Physics by which Hyder's name became associated with the flares in question, even though he was by no means the first to observe them.

What are the characteristics of Hyder flares?

As previously mentioned, the name Hyder flare is given to a flare that occurs away from an active region or sunspot group and that is associated with the sudden disappearance of a dark filament. The appearance of these flares can range from a string of bright knots on one or both sides of the filament (or rather, the position previously occupied by the filament, sometimes called the filament channel), to a single or double ribbon flare. The ribbons are parallel to the filament channel. If only one ribbon is present, it will lie to one side of the channel, whereas if two parallel ribbons occur, one ribbon will lie on one side of the filament channel, and the other ribbon will lie on the opposite side.

One interesting characteristic of Hyder flares is that they usually develop or rise to maximum brightness much more slowly than do the more common flares associated with active regions. The larger Hyder flares may take 30 to 60 minutes to rise to a peak intensity, and then they may last for several hours. Although they may attain a large area, they usually have a relatively low intensity. Thus, classifications for a large Hyder flare may read 2F (F=faint), 2N (N=normal) or possibly even 3F. This contrasts to an active region flare in which 3F is very rare. An active region flare that attains sufficient area to put it into the importance class 3, will invariably have either an N or more usually a B (B=brilliant) brightness classification.

X-ray flares and radio (microwave) bursts associated with the optical Hyder flare, are also generally long lived phenomenon and are classified as the gradual rise and fall type of event (in contrast to the impulsive and complex events associated with large active region flares).

Generally Hyder flares are not associated with energetic particle emission or geomagnetic storms (implying that they may not be associated with a coronal mass ejection). However, this is not always the case, as a large halo CME observed by the LASCO solar coronagraph on board the SOHO spacecraft was most definitely associated with a Hyder flare (2N/M1) observed on 12 September 2000. This same complex also appeared to have produced energetic protons at geosynchronous orbit with energies in excess of 100 MeV, and in substantial numbers at energies of 10 MeV. It is believed that the sudden storm commencement observed at 0450UT 15 September, and the subsequent minor geomagnetic storm was produced by this particular CME.

IS IT a bird, is it a plane? Wait a second ...

Something very strange has been happening in Australia's skies, baffling even the nation's top air safety experts.

It turns out that pilots have been reporting sightings of mysterious flying objects for years, but these cases have been kept hush-hush. It's only now that they are finally coming to light.

And it's all thanks to two curious scientists: Paul Dean, a Melbourne-based UFO researcher, and Keith Basterfield, the author of UFOs: the Image Hypothesis.

Death toll soars as cold snap hits UK

Home > UK > Society

Wed Feb 4, 2016 8:10PM

Winter deaths are soaring across the UK.

Official figures reveal that the death rate related to cold snaps in England and Wales is over 30% higher than normal for this time of year.

According to the Office for National Statistics (ONS) some 28,800 people died in the fortnight ending January 23.

ONS said the flu virus and the cold snap are the main reasons behind the recent spike in winter deaths.

Elderly victims

More than 25,000 people aged over 65 lost their lives due to the cold snap. 11,102 men and 14,129 women lost their lives in the fortnight to 23 January. The death toll among the elderly was 18,154 in the same period last year.

The Federal Attorney for Environmental Protection (Profepa) detected the death of 150 specimens of sea turtle deaths during a tour conducted by Scammon Lagoon, located in Black Guerrero, Baja California Sur.

The agency reported that the probable cause of death of marine turtles of the species Chelonia midas agassizii was hypothermic, at the low temperatures recorded in the region by the cold front of the season.

In an area of 20 kilometers in the area known as the Auction of the lagoon area Profepa inspectors conducted the count and up information about the condition of the bodies and sought a possible source of contamination or evidence to determine the cause of death.

In a statement, explained that the turtles were found in an advanced state of decomposition, ie swollen, blown dry, so it was impossible to take samples for laboratory analysis.

Nearly 300 fish dead of 'natural causes' in Davenport fish kill

POSTED 3:15 PM, FEBRUARY 2, 2015, BY SHELLIE NELSON

For the second consecutive winter, hundreds of fish were found dead along the shore of the Mississippi River in Davenport, Iowa. About 270 dead freshwater drum fish were discovered along the shoreline between Lock and Dam 15 and Credit Island Park according to a report from the Iowa Department of Natural Resources.

"The fish kill was determined to be from natural causes, either oxygen depletion, stress or disease," the report said. "A similar fish kill of freshwater drum occurred at approximately the same time last year in the same area."

When the ice melts, the fish that died float to the surface and are blown to shore. It

The shores of the stream near Bozhane, Ögümce, Göllü, Paşamandıra and Çayağzı villages of Istanbul's Beykoz district were filled with dead carps. Villagers said that the mass fish deaths were a result of chemical dumping into the stream by nearby industries.

Local fisherman Şeref Cesur, 60, claimed that industries near Ömerli village secretly dump chemical waste stored in pools by tankers into the stream. "We used to fish and swim in this stream since we were small. We even drunk water from the stream," Cesur said.

Other cases have occurred and undergone treatment throughout the Sharon and Haifa regions, as well as in the Palestinian Authority, over the past few weeks. Some of the impacted areas have included farms in Moshav Halevy, Kibbutz Magal, Binyamina-Givat Ada and Aviel, as well as near Jenin and Kalkilya in the PA.

Thousands of fish found dead in Collie River, heavy rainfall probed as cause

Updated Mon at 3:47pm

Authorities are investigating whether recent heavy rainfall caused thousands of fish to die in the Collie River, in WA's South West.

About 3,000 fish, including cobbler and redfin perch, have been found dead in the eastern branch of the river, about seven kilometres from the Collie townsite.

People have been warned not to eat or handle the fish.

Department of Water spokesman Adam Maskew said initial test results were expected later on Tuesday.

"At the moment, we've collected samples of the dead fish and marron and we're undertaking pathology tests," he said.

"Water samples have also been taken for analysis as well."

Avian cholera returns after decades, kills thousands of Nevada birds

Jeff DeLong, RGJ 4:21 p.m. PST February 2, 2015

Thousands of birds have died at Walker Lake from a disease experts say hasn't made an appearance in Nevada in decades.

An estimated 3,000 birds — most of them American coots and ducks — have died in an outbreak of avian cholera since early December in an event that still is unfolding. As many as 10 percent of Walker Lake's ducks may have died.

"It is still an ongoing outbreak," said Peregrine Wolff, veterinarian for the Nevada Department of Wildlife.

The event marks the first time for an outbreak of avian cholera in Nevada since the 1980s, Wolff said.

The highly infectious and quick-killing disease is unrelated to the avian flu that has spread among waterfowl in neighboring states and which experts said last Friday was found in a duck in Nevada's Lincoln County late in January. Avian cholera poses no threat to people or dogs.

The Department of Wildlife was first notified by hunters in early December that they were finding dead ducks around Walker Lake. It was the wrong time of year for the most common culprit when it comes to Nevada bird die-offs, avian botulism, so experts suspected something else was responsible for a die-off that appeared fairly large in scale.

"There's not a lot of things that kill a lot of birds quickly but avian cholera in one of them," Wolff said.

Tests of bird carcasses conducted at the National Wildlife Health Center lab in Madison, Wis., revealed the birds had died of avian cholera.

THOUSANDS of dead starfish have washed up on a beach in Abergele after a period of stormy weather.

Shocked amateur photographer, Gordon McGookin, initially thought that Pensarn beach was covered in rubbish when he went out for a walk on Sunday.

On a closer inspection, he discovered thousands of starfish and razor clams spread out across 500 metres of sand.

Mr McGookin, aged 39 who lives in Pensarn, said: "I try to get out each day usually walking on the beach. It was Sunday when I spied them, just after the tide had gone out.

Rome, February 3, 2015 - Recovered off the Adriatic coast, six specimens of loggerhead turtles. The turtles were rescued by boat Rimas Cesenatico after, fell in two of trawls, were entangled in the mesh: two recorded the good state of health, were released into the sea, the other four - try by staying in networks - were hospitalized in the center of care and rehabilitation of Cetacean Foundation in Riccione. Pets, taken ashore by boat, were greeted by ARPA-Daphne, by the staff of the Harbour and the means of Cetacean Foundation.

The rescue of today, goes to swell the list of episodes of finds of dead turtles and lives off the Adriatic coast in the months of December and January - reads a note from the Foundation riccione - the number of finds of dead specimens on beaches of Emilia-Romagna and Marche was 149 and 14 of those recovered alive, compared with 40 dead and 19 lives last year. "A very worrying situation - the statement said - because it is natural to ask what happens to the turtles caught by the other numerous boats Adriatic probably are put in the water even when they are very debilitated then going to swell the number of death." Through the 'Tarta Life, the European project also involved Foundation Cetacea, systems are being developed that can greatly reduce the incidental catch of sea turtles.

When officers found 45 dead geese in the polder at 's-Gravendeel they thought an animal abuser.

The animals have, according to the police, however, made a fatal crash landing. © Police Unit Rotterdam.

"An animal torturer," was the first thought of agents in the polder at 's-Gravendeel 45 dead geese saw. But after study shows that the birds have made a fatal crash landing.

All dead geese are found more or less the same injuries: broken hips, torn intestines, especially the lungs or liver, and a lot of internal bleeding.

These injuries can be caused by a heavy landing.

More Than Half Taiwan's Geese Lost to Avian Flu

03 February 2015

TAIWAN - Highly pathogenic avian influenza of several different variants has affected 674 poultry farms in Taiwan so far.

A total of 674 poultry farms around Taiwan have been hit by avian influenza as of 3 February since the outbreak began in mid-January, according to the Bureau of Animal and Plant Health Inspection and Quarantine's latest update on the epidemic.

Focus Taiwan reports that the farms confirmed as having been affected by bird flu were among 701 goose, duck and chicken farms that have experienced suspicious animal deaths and have been tested for bird flu infection.

Though the 701 poultry farms that have been tested and the 4.29 million birds they raised account for only a small percentage of Taiwan's overall poultry industry, the outbreak has dealt a serious blow to the country's goose farmers.

According to the Council of Agriculture, there were 103 million chicken, geese and ducks raised in Taiwan in the fourth quarter of 2014.

But of the 2.3 million land and water fowl culled to date at 602 farms to prevent the bird flu outbreak from spreading, 1.07 million of them have been geese, the report said, accounting for more than half of the two million geese raised in the country.

Approximately 16.5 tons of fish died suddenly Maninjau

Wednesday, February 4th, 2015 16:48 pm | 3,114 Views

Announcers: Maulana Altas

Bottom of cone (Reuters) - About 16.5 tonnes of fish floating cages in Lake Maninjau, Agam, West Sumatra, died suddenly as a result of reduced oxygen levels in the bottom of the volcanic lake waters since January 27 to February 3, 2015.

Head of Marine and Fisheries (DKP) Agam, Ermanto, in Lubuk cone on Wednesday, said that about 16.5 tons of fish have died suddenly in the Gasan and Koto Kaciak with an amount of about 10 units of floating net cages.

"This is the information I perolah of fishing instructor in the district of Tanjung Raya," he said.

As a result, farmers suffered losses of around Rp363 million, because the price per kilogram of fish Rp22.000.

He added that this sudden fish death due to reduced oxygen levels in the waters of Lake Maninjau, after high winds hit the area.

With these conditions, fish in floating net cages become dizzy and a few hours after the fish died instantly.

To cope with substantial losses, farmers must harvest the fish that are harvested early, reducing provide fish feed, reducing seeding.

"Previously we have warned farmers not to undertake farming activities for a while," he said.

He added that the death of fish floating net cages is the first in 2015. While in 2014 as much as 1087.38 tons, in 2013 eight tons, in 2012 as much as 300 tons, 500 tons in 2011 and 2010 as many as 500 tons.

Mass animal deaths on the rise worldwide

Thousands of birds fall from the sky. Millions of fish wash up on the shore. Honey bee populations decimated. Bats overtaken by a deadly fungus. Piglets die in droves from a mysterious disease. It was tragic stories such as these that prompted a group of researchers from the University of San Diego, UC Berkeley and Yale to embark on a broad review of all the reports of large animal die-offs in the scientific literature since the middle of the last century. They turned up 727 such papers documenting "mass mortality events" (MME) of 2,407 global populations of mammals, birds, fish, reptiles, amphibians and marine invertebrates — like the thousands of starfish that perished in North America in 2014. Their analyses, published this week in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, revealed that not only are these events becoming more frequent, they're also increasing in magnitude, with the number of fatalities higher for birds, fish and marine invertebrates. Thirty-five events completely or nearly wiped out an entire population. Over the last 70-plus years — between 1940 and 2012, when the researchers ended their data collection — there has been about one more MME per year. "Going from one event to 70 each year is a substantial increase, especially given the increased magnitudes of MMEs for some of these organisms," said Adam Siepielski, University of San Diego assistant professor of biology and the study's co-lead author. The cumulative death toll reaches into the billions. The number one cause was disease, which was responsible for 26 percent of the mass killings, followed — no big surprise — by human activity, mostly traceable to environmental contamination. Toxic algal blooms, like the one that has plagued Lake Erie in recent years, have also emerged as a leading killer. "Mass die-offs result from both natural and human-driven causes," said study coauthor Samuel Fey, a Yale researcher who studies how extreme temperatures can affect biological populations. More

As reports from individuals like Chieko Shina, a supporter of the Fukushima Collaborative Clinic talk about exploding rates of thyroid cancer in children, as well as an epidemic of leukemia, heart attacks, and other health problems, the Abe-led government and US continue to sweep the fall out of the Fukushima disaster under the rug.

Cancer rates have exploded at an increase of almost 6000% in areas near the reactor meltdown. Aside from people-on-the-street interviews that a rare media outlet like "Hodo station" will report on, mainstream media stays completely silent. One Japanese resident, Carol Hisasue, laments that as the incident has disappeared from the media, it has also disappeared from people's consciousness.

'Medical mystery' still stumps doctors amid outbreak of polioliike paralysis

BY ALAN BAVLEY

The Kansas City Star February 2, 2015

KANSAS CITY, MO. — When 13-year-old Billy Sticklen woke up the morning of Sept. 24, he discovered he couldn't lift his arms above his chest. Within days his paralysis had progressed to the point where he could only move his hands and feet.

Now, with intensive physical therapy, he's been making steady progress, moving from a wheelchair to a walker, and just days ago to walking with a cane.

Researchers once thought they might have an explanation for why this Joplin, Mo., boy and more than 100 other children from across the country have developed this polioliike paralysis since August.

But as they collect more evidence, the cause has become less and less certain.

"In fact, it's a medical mystery," said Mary Anne Jackson, chief of infectious diseases at Children's Mercy Hospital.

Jackson and other doctors at Children's Mercy were among the first in the nation to recognize that a virus called enterovirus D68, or EV-D68, once considered rare, was causing an outbreak of often severe respiratory illnesses among children last summer. Since August, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention has counted more than 1,100 confirmed EV-D68 cases nationwide, almost all among children, many who had a history of asthma. It's possible that millions of kids with milder symptoms also became ill.

"It was the largest outbreak of its type ever reported in the world," Jackson said.

Executive Order -- Revised List of Quarantinable Communicable Diseases

EXECUTIVE ORDER

REVISED LIST OF QUARANTINABLE COMMUNICABLE DISEASES

By the authority vested in me as President by the Constitution and the laws of the United States of America, including section 264(b) of title 42, United States Code, it is hereby ordered as follows:

Section 1. Amendment to Executive Order 13295. Based upon the recommendation of the Secretary of Health and Human Services, in consultation with the Acting Surgeon General, and for the purposes set forth in section 1 of Executive Order 13295 of April 4, 2003, as amended by Executive Order 13375 of April 1, 2005, section 1 of Executive Order 13295 shall be further amended by replacing subsection (b) with the following:

"(b) Severe acute respiratory syndromes, which are diseases that are associated with fever and signs and symptoms of pneumonia or other respiratory illness, are capable of being transmitted from person to person, and that either are causing, or have the potential to cause, a pandemic, or, upon infection, are highly likely to cause mortality or serious morbidity if not properly controlled. This subsection does not apply to influenza."

Sec. 2. General Provisions. (a) Nothing in this order shall be construed to impair or otherwise affect:

(i) the authority granted by law to an executive department, agency, or the head thereof; or

(ii) the functions of the Director of the Office of Management and Budget relating to budgetary, administrative, or legislative proposals.

(b) This order is not intended to, and does not, create any right or benefit, substantive or procedural, enforceable at law or in equity by any party against the United States, its departments, agencies, or entities, its officers, employees, or agents, or any other person.

You Could Be Quarantined and Forced to Take Toxic Drugs

January 13, 2015

 Print This Post

A new federal executive order expands the list of illnesses for which you could be detained, isolated, and treated against your will if you are entering the US or traveling between states—even if you are completely healthy. Some states have similar or worse laws that would even allow entry into your home.

President Obama has signed an executive order expanding the list of illnesses that could result in forced detention, isolation, and quarantine for anyone exposed, even if they are not sick. It updates a Bush-era executive order, adding "severe acute respiratory syndromes" except for influenza to the list of detainable communicable diseases.

The Public Health Service Act allows the government to apprehend and detain individuals based on communicable diseases named in the Act, or named by presidential executive orders. Executive orders do not have to get congressional approval.

Not only can people with the disease be forcibly isolated, but the CDC also has the power to quarantine anyone who may have been exposed. The new executive order allows detentions for "diseases that are associated with fever and signs and symptoms of pneumonia or other respiratory illness...capable of being transmitted from person to person, and that either are causing, or have the potential to cause, a pandemic, or, upon infection, are highly likely to cause mortality or serious morbidity if not properly controlled" (italics ours). In other words, if you have been exposed to one of the listed communicable diseases—even if you do not show symptoms—you may be forcibly detained and quarantined.

This is broad authority, as the CDC notes: "In addition to serving as medical functions, isolation and quarantine also are 'police power' functions, derived from the right of the state to take action affecting individuals for the benefit of society." And since this is federal law, it covers people entering into the United States and people traveling between states as well.

Even worse, because of various draconian state laws, individuals can also be detained against their will within their state—which includes being forced from their home. Once in quarantine, a potentially toxic drug regimen is generally enforced. While detention authority and scope differs from state to state, some have excessively broad powers. For example

- In Alabama, the governor or state board of health may proclaim a quarantine whenever it is deemed necessary. The board of health has full powers of enforcement, and may formulate any rules it believes necessary.
- In Idaho, the state reserves the right to enter an individual's home by force if an occupant may have been exposed.
- Maine reserves the right to impose emergency regulations at the mere threat of an outbreak.
- New York can also detain patients in a locked ward at Bellevue hospital.
- In 2009 the Massachusetts Senate considered a bill allowing the police, during a declared public health emergency, to arrest people without a warrant if they have "probable cause" to think they're not complying with orders (including verbal orders from the public health commissioner or local public health authority). Under this bill, citizens could have been detained for as long as necessary for the public authorities to "convey information to you regarding the disease." Happily, because of grassroots activists like you and opposition from the Massachusetts House, the bill did not pass and was never reintroduced.

NATO's rapid deployment forces will consist of a 5,000-strong brigade, sea and air-based elements and special task troops, said NATO's Secretary General Jens Stoltenberg after meeting with the alliance's 28 defense ministers in Brussels on Thursday.

Before the meeting he noted that he expected the ministers to "agree on several important elements of a package that increases our collective defense."

The UK has already announced plans to deploy 1,000 troops and four multirole Typhoon fighter jets to join the Response Force in Eastern Europe.

The spearhead of that force will be 5,000 servicemen, distributed among six compact command centers in Eastern Europe, with about only 50 officers in each.

Obama & Merkel to Discuss Arming Ukraine in Washington Next Week

NEWS 20:33 02.02.2015 (updated 06:54 03.02.2015) 3863 3 15

For months, the United States has been supplying non-lethal aid to Ukrainian forces. But a number of officials have urged for that support to include lethal assistance, and with German Chancellor Merkel visiting Washington next week, those talks will be on the table.

WASHINGTON, February 2nd (Sputnik) — After heavy losses suffered by the Ukrainian army at the hands of anti-Kiev rebels in the country's east, the Obama administration considers supplying government forces with sophisticated armament, hoping to change momentum in the bloody civil war.

Russia Plans Joint Military Drills with N.Korea

Russia has announced plans for joint military drills with North Korea this year, VOA reported on Saturday.

Valery Gerasimov, the chief of the General Staff of the Russian Armed Forces, said at a meeting with top brass at the Russian Defense Ministry on Friday that he would hold talks with defense ministry officials from Brazil, Cuba, North Korea and Vietnam, adding Russia would stage joint drills with those countries mobilizing its Army, Navy, and Air Force.

This is likely to create fresh tensions reminiscent of the Cold War on the Korean Peninsula since South Korea in turn conducts several massive military drills with the U.S. every year.

Cho Han-bum of the Korea Institute for National Unification said, "Russia and the North have common interests in that Russia wants to resist U.S. pressure and the North opposes the joint South Korea-U.S. exercises."

North Korean pilots vow to use suicide attacks

Feb 03, 2015

Amidst growing tensions between North Korea and the United States, Pyongyang issued Monday yet another threat that it will destroy enemies with suicide attacks by its military pilots.

North Korean leader Kim Jong-un met with a group of fighter jet pilots who showed outstanding performances during the first combat exercise of this year, the North's state-run Korean Central News Agency reported Monday.

During the meeting, the pilots pledged their commitment to "completely destroy the enemies with the most powerful weapons - their commitment to guard the leader with suicide attacks."

Kim also told the pilots to continue their exercises to turn enemy strongholds into infernos, the report said.

The threat came as tensions between the North and the United States worsened over recent weeks.

Over the weekend, Kim said his country is ready for any kind of confrontation with the United States including a nuclear war, and declared that Pyongyang won't make any more efforts to talk to Washington.

"We no longer have an intention to sit down for talks with crazy dogs that openly said they will destroy the socialist system," Kim was quoted as saying by the North Korean state media on Saturday.

"We are capable of countering all kinds of wars, operations and combat that the U.S. imperialists want," Kim said. "We are prepared to go into any kind of war, including a war using conventional weapons or even a nuclear war."

North threatens to nuke U.S. in a broad campaign

Severe saber rattling is interpreted as end to effort to hold talks Feb 05, 2015

North Korea threatened Wednesday a nuclear strike against the United States using advanced atomic weapons in an official message to Washington issued by the country's highest decision-making body headed by its leader Kim Jong-un.

The National Defense Commission released a statement through the North's state-run Korean Central News Agency to declare that it is no longer interested in having talks with the Barack Obama administration.

The statement, issued at the "authorization" of the regime's young ruler Kim, was the latest in a series of threats issued by Pyongyang against Washington.

Complaining that the Obama administration is trying to induce the North's collapse, the North threatened "retaliatory action of justice" including a strike on the U.S. mainland.

Americans "should be mindful that the time of nightmares is coming nearer when they will meet the most disastrous, final doom on the U.S. mainland," the commission warned.

It promised an eye-for-an-eye retaliation campaign against the United States using all possible means, including "smaller, precision and diversified" nuclear weapons. The North said it will operate all its ground, maritime, underground, air and cyberwarfare capabilities strategically to defeat the United States.

N.Korea 'Staging Biochemical Warfare Drills'

North Korea has boosted biochemical warfare drills as part of its regular winter exercises, intelligence agencies here believe.

"Military intelligence believes that the North has carried out at least a dozen massive biochemical drills since late last year," a senior South Korean official said Thursday.

"We believe that could pose a real threat."

The North has often staged small-scale biochemical warfare drills, chiefly in summer, but not in winter when strong winds could potentially wreak havoc with any hazardous substances that escape into the air.

"These are clearly offensive drills planning a biochemical attack," a military officer here said.

Soldiers frequently practice firing multiple rocket launchers wearing gas masks.

The U.S. Air Force in South Korea has started supplying troops with personal protective equipment as the threat of biochemical attacks from the North mounts

The North is believed to rank third in the world in terms of biochemical warfare capability, with an estimated 2,500 to 5,000 tons of chemical weapons that could kill the entire population of South Korea.

UN official says North Korean regime must be 'dismantled' for human rights to thrive

A campaign within the United Nations to haul North Korean leader Kim Jong Un before an international court for crimes against humanity has touched off a defensive fury in Pyongyang, where it's being treated like a diplomatic declaration of war -- an aggressive act aimed not only at shutting down prison camps but also at removing Kim and dismantling his family's three-

The Islamic State released a video on Tuesday that purports to show a Jordanian pilot, Lt. Muath al-Kaseasbeh, being burned alive by his captors.

According to the SITE monitoring group, which follows militant Web sites, the 22-minute video, titled "Healing of the Believers' Chests," was released on social media even as Jordan struggled Islamic State group militants burned a captured Jordanian pilot to death in a cage, according to a purported video of the violence released Tuesday. The kingdom, which had vowed a swift and lethal response, executed two al-Qaida prisoners by hanging early Wednesday.

The pilot's gruesome death sparked outrage and anti-Islamic State group demonstrations in Jordan. The video emerged after a weeklong drama over a possible prisoner exchange for a

44% of Americans Favor Legalizing Gay Marriage

While finding that Americans narrowly favor allowing gay and lesbian couples to legally marry, a new Associated Press-GfK poll also shows most believe wedding-related businesses should be allowed to deny service to same-sex couples for religious reasons. Roughly half the country also thinks local officials and judges with religious objections ought to be exempt from any requirement that they issue marriage licenses to gay and lesbian couples, according to the poll. That view of the same-sex marriage issue echoes that of the Mormon church. Last week, the church called on state legislatures to pass new laws that protect gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender people from discrimination but also to protect the rights of those who assert their religious beliefs. David Kenney, a self-employed Catholic from Novi, Michigan, said he's fine with same-sex marriage being legal. He's among the 57 percent of Americans who said wedding-related businesses — such as florists — should be allowed to refuse service if they have an objection rooted in their religion.

"Why make an issue out of one florist when there are probably thousands of florists?" asked Kenney, 59. "The gay community wants people to understand their position, but at the same time, they don't want to understand other people's religious convictions. It's a two-way street."

Russia and India added their voices on Monday to China's call for a new world order and endorsed Beijing's plans to mark the 70th anniversary of the end of the second world war.

The foreign ministers of the three nations met in the capital for talks just a week after US President Barack Obama made a high-profile trip to India.

Norway has proposed a law which would make it illegal to help people begging in the street.

The draft for the anti-begging law would not only make it a crime to ask for money, but also to help those who beg.

The rules will state that those offering money, food or shelter to beggars will also face up to a year in prison.

Bill would allow the dead to vote in Indiana

Someone who casts an absentee ballot but dies before Election Day would still have their vote count under a proposal being considered by Indiana lawmakers.

The provision is part of a bill that the House Elections Committee took up Wednesday.

Rep. Matt Pierce of Bloomington told members about how disappointed he was when former U.S. Rep. Frank McCloskey's absentee vote that he cast while fighting cancer didn't count because he died before Election Day in 2004.

Pierce said that only some county clerks actively check for deaths of absentee voters.

Indiana Election Division co-director Brad King says allowing such votes could violate a state constitutional requirement that a voter live in a precinct for 30 days before an election.

The committee plans more review before acting on the proposal.

Only 44 Percent Of U.S. Adults Are Employed For 30 Or More Hours Per Week

Jim Clifton, the Chairman and CEO of Gallup, says that the percentage of Americans that are employed full-time has been hovering near record lows since the end of the last recession. But most Americans don't realize this because the official unemployment numbers are extremely misleading. In fact, Clifton says that the official 5.6 percent unemployment rate is a "big lie". Gallup regularly tracks the percentage of U.S. adults that are employed for 30 or more hours per week, and it is currently at 44.2 percent. It has been hovering between 42 percent and 45 percent since the end of 2009. This is extremely low. As I discussed the other day, there are 8.69 million Americans that are considered to be "officially unemployed" at this point. But there are another 92.90 million Americans that are considered to be "not in the labor force". Millions upon millions of those Americans would work if they could. Overall, there are 101 million U.S. adults that do not have a job right now. But you won't hear that number being discussed by the mainstream media, because it would make Barack Obama look really bad.

Most Americans just assume that the economic numbers that we are being given accurately reflect reality. That is why it is so refreshing to have men like Jim Clifton step forward and tell the truth. His recent article entitled "The Big Lie: 5.6% Unemployment" is making headlines all over America. The following is an extended excerpt from that article...

As Canada's economy begins to slow, the country's growing household debt burden is raising new concerns as it outpaces that of most developed countries.

In fact, Canada had the second-biggest jump in household debt-to-income ratios of any country other than Greece between 2007 and the second quarter of 2014, a new study says.

UK-based oil giant British Petroleum (BP) plans to announce cuts worth billions of dollars in its capital spending schemes following crashing oil prices and a whopping 40-percent drop in its fourth quarter earnings.

The multi-national oil corporation, which has already slashed hundreds of jobs in the North Sea as well as thousands more across the world, is further expected to reveal spending cuts of more than 10 percent, bringing its official target below $22 billion for the current year, the Guardian reported on Tuesday.

The Institute for Fiscal Studies (IFS) says the worst of the UK's austerity drive is yet to come. In its annual Green Budget, the think tank said the UK's finances still have "a long way to go" in order to recover from the financial crisis.

Speaking in December's Autumn Statement, Chancellor George Osborne said government departments faced cuts in real terms of £51.4 billion (14.1 percent) from 2015 to 2019. Cuts in the current parliament are expected to reach £38.3 billion, or 9.5 percent.

The Russian central bank's rate drop last week will not be enough to prevent the country's banking system from posting heavy losses this year, which could run to as much as 1 trillion rubles ($14.5 billion; £9.6 billion).

President Vladimir Putin.

Research from the ratings agency Moody's indicates that Russian banks are struggling to contain cost increases following the surprise 650 basis point interest rate hike by the central bank last month, to 17%. Although the Bank of Russia reduced rates to 15% last week in an effort to ease pressure on the banking system, these measures are unlikely to be enough to reverse the trend.

Comprised of four judges, the Islamic Tribunal follows Sharia Law, a Muslim religious moral code that settles disputes in many countries in the Middle East.

Located at a mosque in Irving, Texas, such an establishment may come as a shock to many Americans who, as U.S. citizens, first and foremost live and abide by the nation's state and federal laws.

DOVER, Del. – Atheists and secularists are commending the Governor of Delaware's recent decision to recognize February 12, 2015, as "Charles Darwin Day" in celebration of the notorious naturalist's birthday.

In a recent statement, Delaware Governor Jack Markell announced that February 12—Darwin's birthday—will be recognized this year as "Charles Darwin Day" in his state. Markell stated that "Darwin's Theory of Evolution is the foundation of modern biology, an essential tool in understanding the development of life on earth."

"The anniversary of Darwin's birthday is a time to reflect and celebrate the importance of his scientific achievements," Markell said in the statement. "Now, Therefore, I, Jack A. Markell, Governor, do hereby declare February 12th, 2015, Charles Darwin Day."

Charles Darwin Day, also known as International Darwin Day, is celebrated each year by evolutionists around the world. The day is organized by the American Humanist Association (AHA), which is an organization committed to promoting atheism and "good without a god."

"The mission of International Darwin Day is to inspire people throughout the globe to reflect and act on the principles of intellectual bravery, perpetual curiosity, scientific thinking, and hunger for truth as embodied in Charles Darwin," the AHA's International Darwin Day website explains.

Markell reportedly issued the Darwin Day proclamation following a request from the Delaware Atheist Meetup. The group plans to celebrate the occasion with a February 12 meeting in Newark.

Though Darwin is held in high esteem by evolutionists, those who reject his theory argue that Darwin's contributions to empirical science were negligible. Brian Thomas, Science Writer for the Institute for Creation Research, told Christian News Network that "Darwin's scientific achievements amounted to very little—some work on invertebrates was all."

Ken Ham Files Religious Discrimination Suit After Kentucky Denies Ministry Sales Tax Rebate

PETERSBURG, Ky. — Ken Ham, the founder and president of the biblical creation and apologetic ministry Answers in Genesis (AIG), will file a federal lawsuit this week against officials in the state of Kentucky for denying its upcoming Ark Encounter participation in the state's sales tax rebate incentive program.

In a video released on Tuesday, Ham spoke with Freedom Guard attorney Mike Johnson about the suit, which surrounds its soon-coming amusement park based on the Book of Genesis.

As previously reported, the state of Kentucky has an incentive called the Tourism Development Act, where new attractions in the state can receive a partial refund of the sales tax paid in an effort to reward organizations that help increase tourism.

AIG was initially approved for the rebate, but following outcry from atheists and church-state separation groups, the decision was overturned. State officials say that the hangup they have over allowing the rebate under the tourism incentive is that the Ark Encounter is religious in nature.

"In writing and in in their public comments, they have said that the reason they have trouble with this project and this economic incentive application is because of its religious overtones and its religious message and viewpoint," Johnson explained. "And that's what makes the state's action unconstitutional."

He outlined that the federal courts have ruled that once a benefit is made available by the state to all within its borders, it cannot legally refuse an applicant simply because of their religious character or beliefs.

"It's very well established and federal and state law that religious organizations get to be treated just like any other in a program like this," Johnson advised.

"When you have a facially neutral tax incentive program that the government

Ore. bakery will have to pay same-sex couple up to $150K

GRESHAM, Ore. — A Gresham bakery discriminated against a same-sex couple who wanted to purchase a wedding cake, the Oregon Bureau of Labor and Industries announced Monday.

The owners of Sweet Cakes by Melissa bakery will have to pay the couple up to $150,000, BOLI spokesman Charlie Burr said. The exact amount will be determined at a hearing on March 10.

In Jan. 2013, Laurel Bowman said Sweet Cakes refused to sell her and her fiancée a cake for their upcoming wedding. Bowman said Aaron Klein, the co-owner of Sweet Cakes by Melissa, said the couple's union was an "abomination unto the lord."

Bowman filed an anti-discrimination complaint with BOLI later that year, alleging that the bakery violated the Oregon Equality Act of 2007, which protects the rights of Oregonians who are gay, lesbian, bisexual or transgender.

"Oregonians may not be denied service based on sexual orientation or gender identity. The law provides an exemption for religious organizations and schools, but does not allow private businesses to discriminate based on sexual orientation," Burr said.

Although the owners of Sweet Cakes by Melissa are religious, the bakery is not a religious institution under law.

MPs say yes to three-person babies

COMMENTS (1235)

By James Gallagher

Health editor, BBC News website

Public Health Minister Jane Ellison: "This is a bold step"

MPs have voted in favour of the creation of babies with DNA from two women and one man, in an historic move.

The UK is now set to become the first country to introduce laws to allow the creation of babies from three people.

In a free vote in the Commons, 382 MPs were in favour and 128 against the technique that stops genetic diseases being passed from mother to child.

During the debate, ministers said the technique was "light at the end of a dark tunnel" for families.

I noticed something strange as I drove through Davis Monthan Air Force Base, in Tucson, Arizona last week.

It was an American flag with rainbow stripes instead of the standard red and white stripes flying high on a two story house... on government property.

For those of you with military ties, you'll understand the stark contrast between military and civilian life, and ultimately know duty comes before self. More specifically, it's one of the Air Force's three core values that is drilled into us in Basic Military Training.

Warning: Hallmark is about to make you feel all of the feelings with its latest Valentine's Day commercial.

The company's new campaign, called Put Your Heart to Paper, is all about going beyond just saying "I love you" to the people who mean the most to you in this world. This particular commercial features a real lesbian couple, as in non-actors, named Eugenia and Corinna, and they are so ridiculously adorable that we promise they will make your heart grow 19 sizes.

RELATED: The best commercials from the 2015 Super Bowl

The couple is interviewed separately about their relationship, and then they watch the answers they gave together. Here are just some of the remarkable things Eugenia and Corinna say about each other:

- "You make my heart 50 times bigger and I'm so lucky to have you."
- "She brings optimism to my life."
- "It's so wonderful to be with someone who is so full of life."
- "She means being excited for the future and the right now."

And to think...there are people and organizations in this world who want to put a stop to a love like these two have.

In a unanimous decision, The Supreme Court Friday struck down as unconstitutional the nation's contentious century-old law against assisted suicide.

The historic ruling opens the door to physician-assisted suicide for consenting, severely ill adults who want to control the method, timing and circumstances of their death.
